We may understand the future and glimpse some of its aspects by asking the question what causes wars? However soft, however subdued the answer; no matter what soothing adjectives, mellifluous adverbs, and qualifying phrases may be used the answer still must be one that does not assure us that those causes will ever cease to operate even though that operation deluge the world with tears and run its rivers red with the blood of human beings, and whose agonies, sufferings, and crucifixions will not save those who will follow in their bloody footsteps, nor prevent the inexorably cruel operation of the law that leads to destruction and which springs into existence as a result of the meeting and crossing of converging lines of commercial and industrial interests, or those inevitable frictions and antagonisms resulting from racial rivalries that have cursed all the generations of men. This may be a somewhat pessimistic view, but apparently it is the view of many men in the public life of our country who would willingly offer up their lives if they could by such a sacrifice prevent the flood that rolls—

Hoarser with anguish as the ages roll.

I would a thousand times rather advocate that which is so well expressed and epitomized in the slogan, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," rather than urge optimism which makes for a fool's paradise and the pauper's funeral knell. If civilization were a cure for war, I would believe that the dawn of the happy day was at hand. But almost at the acme of our civilization I saw the Christian nations of the world and the white people of this earth at each other's throat in probably the most savage contest and war of all times, and when neither of the white contestants hesitated for a moment to call to their aid the yellow and black and brown races of mankind. As a matter of fact, the present day civilization has been no more effective in preventing war than all of the other civilizations that have come and gone; after playing out their part, some disappearing without leaving much of a record on the scroll of time; some vanishing into the realm of yesterday and into the bourne of forgetfulness, leaving not a wrack behind.

The ruins of empires—ruins that are being excavated today—attest a mechanical, architectural, engineering, and artistic civilization equal if not superior to our own; but in the fullness of time they tottered to their destruction and fell as a result of the operations of that grim law of brute force which puts down one civilization and marks the rise of a new one. The banks of the Tigris, the Nile, and the Euphrates are dotted with ruins that are mournful reminders of once mighty civilizations and the seats of empires. The glory that was of Greece, the grandeur that was of Rome suggests a Sisyphus climb of the hill of life by the children of men. What lessons do we gather from the past? The lesson that individual and national existence may not be made immortal, but that both can be extended and be made more effective and glorious by ever being mindful of the law announced by the great poet of the English-speaking people:

Kingdoms by blood gained
Must be by blood maintained.

I wish that I could state this law and its seeming brutality in softer tones and more honeyed words, but the fierce rule of life would lose its force if not expressed in forceful language. No, Mr. Speaker, neither the terrors which are predicted in the event of future wars nor the awful trials and crucifixions of men and women in the wars of the past will prevent the operation of those laws which make wars inevitable. Neither Woodrow Wilson nor Secretary Baker nor Secretary Daniels; neither President Harding nor Secretary Denby nor Secretary Weeks could or can see anything presently in world affairs that would justify us in taking our watchmen from the towers nor our captains from the decks. From amid the din, turmoil, and the roar of conflict over the relative value of capital ships and submarines and airplanes, from the apparent discord that prevails as the result of heated controversy comes the voice of reason: "Build ye airplanes, build ye submarines, but don't give up the ship."

Let me close this address, Mr. Speaker, wherein I have feebly and probably pessimistically but sincerely outlined what I deem to be the necessities of the future and my reasons for standing whole-heartedly for a Naval Establishment based on the development of the three-plane plan, and my duty in hearkening to what I believe to be the voice of authority in respect to preservation of our country from that which I hope may be deferred for centuries but which is always within the possibilities, an invasion from across either the Atlantic or Pacific, by quoting from an article written by a distinguished journalist, the nationally known correspondent, Paul Wooten. It is a plea for disarmament, a plea that comes from the great heart of this knightly and chivalrous journalist, who has won many honors on literary fields, but whose fame will be in the fact that he lived to bless mankind. It is a great hope in which he indulges; it is a prayer to the nations to cease building machines and preparing for war—as the shambles are not far distant. But through the entire masterly treatise runs the fear which he can not conceal, that instead of demons of the sky, monsters of the deep, the terrors of gas, germ, and machine destruction making for a horror of war and resulting universal peace, they will only lead the inventive genius to devise modes of defense against attack. The article is such a valuable contribution to the history of a memorable test that I give it under my privilege to extend:

[By Paul Wooton, Times-Picayune staff correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, June 23.

Just how proficient we are becoming in the art of destruction was demonstrated in striking ways off Hampton Roads this week. The tests were conducted for the comparatively insignificant purpose of passing on material. The exact effect of aerial bombs and gunfire on actual vessels furnishes, however, important information in reaching broad conclusions.

The tests did have the effect of concentrating attention on the progress that is being made in means of warfare. They took to Hampton Roads more than a hundred of the country's foremost specialists in the problems involved. The gathering called attention to the fact that as bright minds as the country boasts are engaged in the problems of offense and defense. Under present conditions it may be that the United States is giving these problems more study than is any other nation, but every nation is doing more or less work along such lines, meaning that in the aggregate an important part of the world's brain power is being concentrated on increasing the ability to destroy and on increasing the means to prevent being destroyed.

The average layman does not keep abreast with the rapidity of the development in naval and military practice. Cannon used in the Civil War were obsolete in 15 years. The same is true of most of the other equipment used in that war. More is being accomplished in the same length of time now than was the case half a century ago. Problems are attacked in a highly specialized manner. Those best qualified specialize in subdivisions of any problem in a manner most certain to get results. Consequently improvements now will be more rapid than during the period immediately following the Civil War. In addition the Nation now is in a position financially to undertake much more pretentious research in the effort to improve the means of national defense.

MUST CALL HALT ON WAR.

The increase in effectiveness of the means employed in warfare and the development of such prominent auxiliaries as chemical warfare and aviation bring up with renewed force the question as to where it all is going to stop. The consensus of opinion among the military and naval experts aboard the U. S. S. Henderson, the ship which carried the observers to the scene of the experiments, was that some international understanding looking to war prevention must be reached. Men who have made arms their life work are free to predict that such an agreement must come. It may be put off; but the increased terribleness of war, visited upon noncombatants as well as combatants, as well as its staggering cost, is so influencing public sentiment throughout the world as to make certain that a halt will be called sooner or later. The question is whether the Governments will foresee the inevitable and act before the people do something ill-advised in registering their opposition to the continuance of naval and military races for supremacy.

The tests off the Virginia Capes contribute nothing to the controversy as to whether or not capital ships had best be superseded by a larger number of smaller craft. The experts seem very generally of the opinion that the capital ship is as necessary as ever. The fact that airplanes demonstrated incontrovertibly that they can successfully bomb a target no larger than a submarine strengthens the view that the development of aviation will make necessary some changes in general naval practice, but serves to increase the usefulness of battleships. With the increased efficiency of bombs, and with the development of the use of gas in such bombs, a greater independence for the fleet is foreseen.

PROGRESS OF AVIATION.

Within the next few years the offensive ability of the airplane will have reached a point, it is believed, where it can be relied upon largely for defense of the sea within 200 miles off the coast. No fleet would be able to carry enough airplanes to protect itself from the swarms of such craft which could fly out to meet it once it neared the shore of a hostile country. Under past conditions our fleet would be handicapped in case of war by the necessity of dividing up to protect a long coast line. The fleet would be precluded from getting together and proceeding to sea to meet the oncoming enemy fleet for fear that the enemy might avoid a conflict at sea, slip around and raid the coast. With the coast able to take care of itself with its airplanes and land defenses, the effectiveness of the fleet is multiplied. The day probably never will come when the large caliber gun will not be a great asset, so the battleship is likely to become larger and larger.

The progress being made in aviation was brought out with particular vividness at the test Tuesday. The rusty U–117 had been anchored 70 miles east of the Cape Charles Light. The naval bombers flew from their base at Yorktown, more than 100 miles from their target. Precisely at the time announced the three big bombers roared up out of the horizon and made straight for the tiny, tossing target. Each of the three planes dropped a bomb as it rushed over the submarine.

The first attempt showed that great accuracy is possible, as each of the three great jets of water which followed the explosion of the bombs was so close as to drench the whalelike back of the former German terror. The big planes turned quickly into circle and rushed back over the target which lay bobbing 1,200 feet below. This time each plane dropped its remaining three bombs, nine in all.

The spectacle that followed will never be forgotten by observers aboard the Henderson. The bombs, looking like plummets because of the distance, dropped swiftly and gracefully. Then came a mighty upheaval on the placid bosom of the ocean. A great pile of water was lifted skyward. It looked like some giant architectural pile. It was not dissimilar in form from the Woolworth Building. The base was shot through with the fire from the two bombs which made direct hits and were detonated by actual contact with the submarine. From these same bombs came the black smoke which was streaked through the glistening white of the countless tons of water which had been hurled hundreds of feet upward as spray.

When the great tower of water sank slowly into the ocean again the observers were surprised that a vestige of the submarine was left, but as the water quieted down it was seen that the stern was rising. It rose slowly, and then as if its machinery had dropped to the bow the stern reared high and quivering shot beneath the surface to its last resting place in an American sea.

The gunfire test against the U–140 on Wednesday proved clearly that submarines must keep submerged as long as there are any 3-inch rifles around manned by American gunners. The percentage of hits was high despite the difficulties of firing at high speed with a rapidly changing range and at a target which pitched irregularly about as it was buffeted by a choppy sea.

A striking feature of the trip, to those who do not follow naval matters closely, was the improvements which have been made in recent years in the equipment of battleships. After the tests ample time was given to inspect the Pennsylvania and several other of the more recent additions to the Atlantic Fleet. Anchored far from shore, with no prospect of a rush of visitors, a chance was given the highest officers to take all the time that was necessary for careful explanations of the mechanism and the practice aboard these ships. They took advantage of the opportunity to explain the full significance of the developments in construction and equipment.

The public can in no way visualize what remarkable machines battleships have become and does not realize that no month passes without some improvements having been devised. Not infrequently several improvements come within the span of a single month. The great development of recent years is the adoption of oil as fuel. This greatly increases the space available for purposes other than the bunkering of fuel. Most of the time formerly lost in the cumbersome task of coaling now is saved and the additional space is used to great advantage.

Another revolutionary change is the resort to electricity for propulsion, and practically every other duty which power is called upon to perform. These ponderous floating forts are steered as well as driven by electricity. A touch of the finger on the controller is all that is necessary to throw the rudder all the way over. Four wheels providing places for 10 men are required to move the rudder 10 points over by hand when the ship is in motion. A greater deflection of the rudder can not be attained without the use of mechanical power.

Cooking is done by electricity, and that agency is employed to a surprising extent in a larger number of activities.

Perhaps the greatest improvements of the recent years are in range finding and fire control. Intercommunication on shipboard is an exact science. The main telephone switchboard is larger than in many towns. In addition, there are signals of several sorts, and speaking tubes. The peculiar thing about these tubes, which are sticking around everywhere, is that you can really hear through them.

The radio has eliminated the greatest obstacles of naval navigation—isolation from the bases of information. The coming of the submarine has brought great improvement to searchlights and to lookout facilities, while the introduction of the airplane has added the antiaircraft guns to the upper decks. The increased range of guns and the airplane bomber now make necessary the adoption of a protective deck of heavy armor to guard against shots of high trajectory and the bombs that may be hurled down. Even now thought is being given to an adaption of the gas mask to be placed over ventilators so that poison gas may be filtered out if the ship should be hit by a gas shell or a gas bomb.

Another development is the water-tight integrity of the ship. It would take four torpedoes doing the average damage of a direct hit to sink the Pennsylvania.

Mr. Speaker, let me repeat, for it has been my song by night and by day, only by an observance of the laws that make for an extension of national existence can we prevent that decay, decline, fall, and destruction that has marked the mournful exit and passage of Assyria, Greece, Carthage, Rome, and the wonderful civilizations of Babylon and those other marbled and flowered antiquities that are kingdoms no more. Only by a recognition of the law of force, that law which has enabled us to grow rich and great and powerful and strong shall we continue to maintain our existence in the van of the nations of the earth and to survive the yet silent but terrific blows that must be aimed at our leadership. Let us not forget that the drumbeats that are heard the world around and which express sonorously daily the greatness and grandeur of the British Dominion indicate martially the strength and force of the law on which rests and is based the Empire that has been builded by valor and on which the sun never sets. Let us keep in mind forever that the glory, the power, the magnificence, the grandeur, and the wonderful territorial expansion of the United States of America were not acquired, did not come to us through the soft word and the velvet hand. The flag to-day reflects the glory of the northern lights and the wondrous beauty of the southern cross, and it waves from ocean to ocean gracefully and beautifully but silently expressing the majesty and force of a mighty people that live under that flag.

If we mean to keep alive the memorable Americanism dear to every patriot heart—millions for defense but not one cent for tribute—stand by the Navy. With it we shall sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. WALTER F. LINEBERGER,

OF CALIFORNIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, July 6, 1921.

Mr. LINEBERGER. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted to me to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include an address which I delivered at Takoma Park, Md., on July 4, 1921. The address is as follows:

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS DELIVERED BY HON. WALTER F. LINEBERGER, OF CALIFORNIA, AT TAKOMA PARK, MD., ON JULY 4, 1921.

Mr. Chairman and fellow Americans, it is indeed a great pleasure and a high privilege for me to address at any time a representative body of my fellow citizens, such as are gathered here to-day, but I find myself experiencing the emotions to which I have alluded to an unusual degree on this occasion. This is not to be wondered at when we stop to realize that we are here not only to celebrate the most epochal event in our national history but also to commemorate an event which in the course of the passing years has come to be regarded as a "red letter day" among the free peoples of the earth, who have gathered hope and inspiration from that immortal document, the Declaration of Independence, born 145 years ago to-day, July 4, 1776.

The quiet, peaceful atmosphere of your charming little city, composed of the vital forces of exuberant youth and tempered age, happily mingled with a stalwart citizenship and the grace and beauty of American womanhood—all beneath a canopied sky—in the distance of which looms the dome of our historic Capitol, the temple of our cherished institutions, make a most appropriate stage and compose a most fitting setting for the patriotic celebration of such an inspiring event. With such a typically American atmosphere we shall celebrate an unique American event in a hearty American way.

The Declaration of Independence, my friends, is no ordinary document. From the moment it was penned it became the living, breathing, inspiring document which it has been down through the years to this day, and it will continue to inspire the souls of men and illuminate the paths of peoples seeking to emerge from darkness unto light so long as time shall last. When the torch of liberty seemed to be flickering to extinction during the dark days of Valley Forge, when the barefooted and bleeding soldiery of the Continental Armies, guided by the indomitable spirit of Washington, seemed to be all but spent upon the Calvary of sacrifice, there stood out amid the gloom, like a beacon light in an ocean of despair, the sacred commitments of the immortal Declaration of Independence, and there must have resounded in the ears of these patriots a whispered echo of the concluding phrase, breathing the spirit of a free people and unrivaled, then as now, in the annals of freedom, "And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor." Thus did this spirit prevail through the darkest days of the Revolution down to the culminating and crowning victory at Yorktown, when our own Gen. Washington, surrounded by Lafayette, Rochambeau, and De Grasse, our French allies, received the surrender of Cornwallis, and thus forever secured that freedom and independence which we, as their descendants and legatees, to-day enjoy and cherish.

It is interesting to note that the seeds of the French Revolution were first sown, as has been stated by an eminent French writer, in America, for the French soldiers who had so valiantly assisted our cause in America were found upon their return to France to have caught the spirit of our new institutions and the writings of the time are found to be permeated with the preachments of our Declaration of Independence. These teachings rapidly spread among the liberty-loving French people, borne down as they then were by centuries of oppression, and we find the fiery Gallic mind giving first expression to the lofty sentiments of devotion to liberty and antagonism toward oppression, in the immortal words and consuming patriotism of "La Marseillaise"; the grand anthem of the French Revolution, was composed, both words and music, in 1792, in a single night, by Rouget de Lisle, an officer of Artillery at Strasbourg, Alsace, and first sung shortly afterwards at the historic old French city of Metz in Lorraine. A large number of the French soldiers who fought with us in the Revolution came from Alsace-Lorraine, and it will be recalled that the Marquis de Lafayette was stationed in the city of Metz when he first heard of our struggle for independence and it was there that he made up his mind to give up fortune, position, and family and cast his lot among us, later to be followed by Rochambeau and his army, and in whose forces, I am proud to say, my paternal great-grandfather served in the humble capacity of a private in the Artillery regiment recruited from Metz, French Lorraine; and so, my friends, have we shared this great heritage of our forefathers with that brave people who in our most trying hours were willing to give of their blood and their treasure that we might establish our nationality among the peoples of the earth. The spiritual key which unlocked the Bastille was of our fashioning and I am impelled to the belief that the great Lafayette recognized this fact when he presented the material key to Gen. Washington, as a token of the friendship and esteem of France, on his second visit to America some years afterwards. That the spirit which America gave to France in days gone by had not perished was amply proved by her recent heroic sacrifices in opposition to the despotism and greed of the Germanic powers, and the cry of the blood-stained French "poilu" at Verdun "Ils ne passeront pas" (they shall not pass) was only the latter-day expression of the pledge of a common heritage, sealed upon many a gory field from Lexington to Yorktown, nearly a century and a half ago.

My fellow citizens, it was no mere historical coincident that the liberties for which we pledged "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor" on July 4, 1776, should have been saved and confirmed to mankind by the American soldier on the fields of France, side by side with his French comrade of other days, and in close cooperation and sympathy with the soldiers of that great Empire, our foe of Revolutionary days, but now our fast friend; the mist of years has obliterated old animosities; the spirit of the German King, George III, is dead, but that of William Pitt still lives, and the heritage of George Washington is shared in common by the land of his birth and the land of his ancestors. I have no patience, my friends, with those who would undermine that triumvirate of peace, good will, and understanding bought with the precious blood of freemen and sealed in common sacrifice on the crimson-soaked fields of France. Let us hope that from amid the ruins of the toppled dynasties of the Central Empires their misled and misguided peoples may yet arise and take shelter under real democratic institutions, adopting, if they but will, that spirit of liberty within the law so inherent to our Constitution and first promulgated to the world by the Declaration of Independence, the signing of which we celebrate to-day.

And so it is down through the years, in all the momentous and critical moments of our national life, when, imperiled from within as well as from without, we have had before us the guiding and inspiring document bequeathed to us by the founders of the Republic. That they builded greater than they knew no one will gainsay, but the high achievements of the past must not cause us to become unmindful of our duties and responsibilities in the future. True it is that our fathers and forefathers have wrought and turned over into our keeping what to my mind is the greatest handiwork of a nation to which a people has ever fallen heir, and we have only recently again given most decided evidence of our steadfastness of purpose to preserve this Nation from foes without. I refer to our participation in the recent World War and the profound influence which we have exerted in saving the civilization of the world from the abyss of destruction; but, my friends—and I refer most particularly to my young friends, the youth of the Nation, who are soon to take their places along beside us in guiding the destinies of our common country—let us be duly mindful that the duties and responsibilities of peace are no less important than those of war, and without intending to in any wise suggest an historical parallel, permit me to call your attention to the fact that some of the greatest nations of history—and we are not confined entirely to the nations of antiquity—have perished from within instead of from without. In fact, it has been said that deterioration from within is a condition precedent to vulnerability to dangers from without.

Now, how shall we forever avoid this great danger to ourselves and to the cherished institutions which have made us a great Nation? Truly mindful of our duties to our God, to ourselves, and our posterity, my answer is simple in words but difficult of fulfillment in practice. It is this: By a continuous and zealous devotion to the highest traditions of American citizenship, let us not only give utterance to our ideals on such occasions as this, but let us live out those ideals in the everyday walks of life; let the burning fires of practical patriotism—which, translated, is good citizenship—not only envelop the young of the land, but let us see that its beneficent influences are extended to the foreign born who come to our shores; we will thereby create an ample reservoir of love of country and flag, which will be a safeguard for the future and the surest guaranty for our liberties and free institutions. Let young and old appreciate the spiritual significance of this occasion. To be a citizen of this great Nation and to live protected beneath the starry folds of yon flag is, to my mind, one of the most profound and glorious experiences which can come to a human being in this earthly sphere, for are not all of the finest and highest emotions, the meaning and continuity of America, wrapped up in contemplation of that emblem and symbol of our nationality—the glorious American flag?

And so it is, my friends, that the great privilege of suffrage carries with it an even greater responsibility, as do all great privileges in life, the obligation to vote intelligently and to safeguard and conserve the liberties which were bequeathed to us by our forefathers in the Declaration of Independence, ratified and confirmed by succeeding generations of Americans in war as well as in peace; in adversity as well as in prosperity. American citizenship may well be called the foundation stone of American existence.

In the course of my remarks I have referred to the demands of what I am pleased to call practical patriotism, and I could not permit myself to pass from this subject without paying tribute to a body of men upon whom I would confer the degree of "sanctified citizenship." Many of these men—these heroes, I should say—are within the sound of my voice. I refer to the wounded and maimed soldiers of the Walter Reed Hospital near by. These men are the present day representatives of that glorious array of Americans who, from Bunker Hill to the Meuse-Argonne, have paid with life and limb the price of American achievement on the field of battle, and I pay just tribute to them and their kind when I say that their names are written high on the scroll of fame, but highest of all in the preeminent place of devotion and esteem which they occupy in the hearts of their fellow countrymen.

These gentlemen have given in full measure their glorious example of practical patriotism and have earned our undying gratitude for the sacrifice they have made. May we not, to a degree, at least, cause them to feel that their sacrifices have not been in vain by rededicating ourselves to-day to the work of living, vibrant patriotism in the ordinary walks and affairs of life, in business and in politics, in the home and in the school; and so I say to these men, my buddies, and to those whose earthly remains sleep beneath the poppy-covered fields in France, but whose spirits abide with the Nation for which they made the supreme sacrifice, that we again pledge and rededicate ourselves to the high and worthy purposes to which our founders committed themselves in the beginning. The Declaration of Independence is the greatest bill of human rights which the mind of man has ever conceived, and within its parchment pages are to be found the alpha and the omega of human liberty. Our Constitution is the child of its bosom, and it has served as the model and inspiration of that galaxy of new republics which have sprung up from the four corners of the atlas since this immortal document, upon which it is based, was first given to the world, 145 years ago to-day.

We are indeed proud that the cumulative efforts of man toward liberty and freedom should have first found virile and practical expression on American soil and that the ambitions and desires of centuries should have been first molded into documentary form and promulgated to the world by American freemen. Let us continue to firmly rely in these days of power, influence, and prosperity "on the protection of Divine Providence," as in days of yore when we were weak and lacking in "this world's goods." Let us not forsake the God of our forefathers, but let us continue to follow along the lines of our past national achievement, tending ever upward with prudence and forethought; in the words of the great Lincoln "with charity toward all and malice toward none" to the end that the goal of our greatest national achievement shall be the fulfillment in these latter days of Washington's farewell injunction to his countrymen to "give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence."

Accomplishments of the Special Session—A Review of Its Work.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. FRANK W. MONDELL,

OF WYOMING,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, July 12, 1921.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted me to extend my remarks in the RECORD I present a statement made by me a few days ago in regard to the record of this special session of Congress, and following that a copy of a letter recently received by me from Mr. J. W. Harriman, of the Harriman National Bank, of New York, relative to the work of Congress, and my answer thereto.

The introduction of the tariff bill in the House, coincident with the close of the fiscal year and the brief Fourth of July recess, affords an opportune time to review briefly the work of the special session of Congress thus far.

The special session was called primarily for the purpose of considering and enacting tariff and revenue legislation, and had the Congress followed the policy of some former Congresses little would have been accomplished during the period necessary for the preparation of a tariff bill; but the Congress set to work diligently, has been in session continuously, and has enacted much important legislation while the Ways and Means Committee of the House has been framing the tariff bill.

Some of us were of the opinion that it would be wise to consider taxation questions immediately after the passage of the temporary tariff bill; but the sentiment of the country, as reflected in newspapers, letters, and telegrams, seemed to be overwhelmingly in favor of the consideration of a permanent tariff measure first, and the House responded to that demand, its Committee on Ways and Means having worked steadily and without cessation in the preparation of the tariff bill.

Unquestionably the country has been impatient at the length of time required for the preparation of this measure; but an examination of its 346 pages, its thousands of paragraphs, will convince any reasonable person that the time consumed in preparation has been well spent and that a tremendous task has been speedily and wisely accomplished.

I am of the opinion that the measure as it will be presented to the House next Wednesday will have more general and united support and commendation, both in the Congress and in the country, than any tariff bill since the Civil War. The tariff bill will be promptly taken up and considered in the House, and upon its passage the Committee on Ways and Means will proceed immediately to the preparation of a bill to relieve the country of a considerable portion of the war-tax burden.

While other Congresses have marked time during the preparation of a tariff measure, this Congress has labored diligently and effectively and has performed an amount of work and has to its credit a volume of accomplishment unmatched in any like period under similar circumstances. The record for efficiency and for well-planned dispatch of business has never been excelled.

This session of Congress has accomplished a net saving of approximately one hundred and four million dollars on the Army and Navy appropriation bills as compared with the same bills as they stood at the close of the last Congress; a reduction of approximately eighteen million dollars in the Army bill and of eighty-six million dollars in the Navy bill.

The Congress has brought the state of war to an end and established an official peace status through the passage of the peace resolution.

The passage of the emergency tariff bill and the antidumping provisions which it carried was in itself of sufficient importance to stamp the session of Congress as one thoroughly capable of prompt and efficient action.

For 20 years or more the country has been clamoring for budget legislation. This session of Congress has placed a budget law upon the statute books, and now, thanks to the energetic action of the President and the heads of executive departments, the budget is in full, thoroughgoing, and effective operation.

The unscrambling process following Government telegraph and telephone control necessitated legislation to enable the telephone business of the country to organize along sound economic lines, and legislation for this purpose was promptly enacted.

One of the most urgent situations before the country was that presented by the danger of an enormous influx of immigrants. This menacing situation was met by the prompt passage of the act restricting immigration.

A lively contest in the closing days of the Wilson administration between the Government and a cable company attempting to land one of its cables on our shores brought to the public attention the necessity of legislation placing the Executive branch of the Government in control of such situations in the interest of the national welfare and defense. Congress promptly passed the legislation necessary to meet the situation.

Congress has been struggling for years over the question of so-called packer legislation. Bills for the regulation and control of the meat-packing industry have passed one House or the other repeatedly, but it remained for this session of Congress to present a sound and effective measure, which is now in conference and will become a law in the very near future.

The urgent need of legislation combining and coordinating the various agencies and activities of the Government on behalf of ex-service men has been evident for a year or more. The carefully drawn bill for this purpose, which passed the House after a prolonged and thoroughgoing discussion, will soon become a law.

An amendment of the prohibition enforcement act was made necessary by the so-called beer decision rendered by Attorney General Palmer just before he retired from office. A bill embodying the necessary legislation was prepared and has been practically agreed upon.

The grain growers of the country have long been of the opinion that certain purely gambling operations in trading in grain futures are harmful to the grain growers and to the public generally. A well-considered bill to remedy these evils has passed the House and is in a fair way to become a law.

In addition to the above a very considerable number of measures of importance have passed one or the other of the two Houses of Congress and are on their way to final enactment. In the meantime the committees of both branches of Congress have been unusually active, and a very considerable number of legislative problems of interest and importance are under consideration by the committees, or are dealt with in bills which have been reported and are on the calendars.

At no time did anyone familiar with the magnitude of the task believe that a tariff bill could be reported much before the 1st of July. At no time did anyone qualified to judge believe that tariff and taxation legislation could both be disposed of before about the 1st of September. With the progress that has already been made that can be accomplished, and in the meantime, without in any wise halting or delaying these two measures of primary importance, much other essential legislation will be enacted.

From the beginning of the session Congress has moved steadily and effectively along constructive lines. In the House there has been a steady adherence to the program of legislation, a diligent application to the task at hand, and a record of accomplishment of which the Members of that body may well be proud.

The letter from Mr. Harriman above referred to is as follows:

HARRIMAN NATIONAL BANK,
New York, July 6, 1921.

Hon. F. W. MONDELL,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: This bank has nearly 10,000 depositors, and fully 50 per cent of them are clamoring to know why Congress does not do something with regard to the reduction of taxation.

Is the activity of Congress the result of natural ineptitude or a feature of a deliberate reconstruction program?

There can be no improvement in the business world until taxes are reduced. The present stagnation in trade is really a strike against Government confiscation.

I inclose a clipping from this morning's New York Times which hits the nail on the head. Will you kindly advise me, as the Republican House leader, what your views are and what action may be expected?

If you realized how many people are cursing out Congress, you might then understand what is to be expected at the next congressional election.

Very truly, yours,

J. W. HARRIMAN.

My answer to Mr. Harriman's letter was as follows:

JULY 8, 1921.

Mr. J. W. HARRIMAN,
President Harriman National Bank, New York City.

MY DEAR MR. HARRIMAN: I have your letter of July 6 in which you say that a large number of your depositors are "clamoring to know why Congress does not do something with regard to the reduction of taxation."

You further make this inquiry, "Is the inactivity of Congress the result of natural ineptitude or a feature of a deliberate reconstruction program?" I pass over the disparaging slur contained in your inquiry, because I realize that it has become the habit of some who generally consider themselves bound by the rules of ordinary courtesy to forget their manners when making inquiries with regard to legislative questions and conditions.

The special session of Congress was called by the President primarily for the purpose of revising the tariff, revenue, and tax laws. There was some difference of opinion as to whether the House should first address itself to the tariff legislation or to the revision of the war taxes. Realizing that it would take a considerable length of time for the House Committee on Ways and Means to prepare a complete permanent tariff revision, I was inclined to the opinion that it might be well to take up tax revision in advance of the permanent tariff, and so publicly stated.

Practically every member of the Ways and Means Committee, including the two members from the State of New York, can bear witness to the fact that the overwhelming sentiment of the country, as expressed in letters, telegrams, and editorials, was favorable to the consideration of the permanent tariff revision first. In response to this expression of sentiment the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee took up at once with earnestness and pursued with unflagging vigor and energy the questions involved in a revision of the tariff. It has required a little longer than some anticipated to complete this great work. I am sending you a copy of the bill under separate cover that you may examine its 346 pages, with its thousand paragraphs. While I realize that no one who has not had practical experience as to the very great amount of research, examination, study, and consultation necessary to reach an agreement with regard to any one of hundreds of paragraphs affecting rates, methods of administration, and policy, can fully appreciate the time and effort required. I am quite sure that anyone at all familiar with business and legislative affairs must realize that the time which was consumed in the preparation of this measure was necessary and essential to a careful study, survey, and discussion of the great number of important features with regard to which there was ground for difference of opinion.

While I am not a member of the Committee on Ways and Means I can bear testimony to the constant and continuous sessions of this committee from the date that Congress met up to the hour of reporting the bill. I can assure you there were no banking hours observed, but that the necessary work was early and late, including holidays, and running far into the night. Not a moment has been lost or wasted, and the bill has been presented to the House at the very earliest hour consistent with thorough-going, painstaking examinations of its provisions. The Republican Members of the House in conference have agreed that the final vote shall be taken on the tariff bill on July 21.

Immediately following the passage of the tariff bill by the House the Ways and Means Committee will take up for consideration the questions of tax revision. The Treasury Department has been giving the matter careful, thorough, and painstaking study, and the members of the Ways and Means Committee of the House have, at the odd moments that could be spared from the consideration of the tariff bill, been studying the questions involved. No one can say with assurance just how soon tax revision may be agreed upon by the committee, but there will not be a moment's delay after the tariff is disposed of. There will be the same earnest, active, and continuous attention to this matter that has been given to the preparation of the tariff bill, and the measure will be taken up for consideration in the House as soon as it is reported. I would not assume to fix the date when the House shall conclude its consideration of the tax bill, though we may with reasonable confidence expect final action not later than the middle of August.

I am fully aware of the fact that many people are impatient because the Congress has not within two and one-half months from the beginning of the session disposed of all of the great problems before it. This is not surprising or unusual. It has always been so. A complete tariff revision is a stupendous task. This Congress has progressed with the task so far as rapidly as any Congress in my recollection—more rapidly than in most instances. The same committee which revises the tariff deals with revenue legislation; manifestly the two matters can not be considered at the same time by the same people, nor would it be practical to have two separate bodies considering these intimately related matters.

Heretofore Congress, having met for the consideration of tariff revision, has generally stood in recess during the period of tariff preparation in the committee. This Congress has remained constantly in session. Practically all of its committees have been unusually diligent. The Congress has already placed upon the statute books much notable, important legislation, including the peace resolution, the budget, the emergency tariff, and the immigration restriction law. In addition much important legislation has been considered in one or both branches of the Congress and is on the way to final enactment, such measures, for instance, as the packers' bill, the bill for consolidation of governmental activities for the benefit of ex-service men, revision of the laws, the roads bill, and many others.

The Congress has during this session passed two important appropriation bills, those providing for the maintenance of our Military and Naval Establishments. The Army bill is a law and the naval bill is all but agreed to. Take it all in all and by and large, this Congress has been as diligent, as painstaking, and as active as any Congress that has ever met in the Capitol at Washington, and it has a record of accomplishment which to this time is unexcelled. I realize there are many people who do not appreciate these facts, partly because they are so busy with their own affairs that they do not keep track of the work of Congress, partly because it is the business of partisans hostile to the administration to make it appear that the Congress is not at work and is not accomplishing results.

Very truly, yours,

FRANK W. MONDELL.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JOHN J. GORMAN,

OF ILLINOIS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, June 20, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 6373) to further reclassify postmasters and employees of the Postal Service and readjust their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, and for other purposes.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. Speaker, this bill should pass without a change in its provisions, because all that it contains is merely what was intended to be included in the reclassified salary act of June 5, 1920. Through a misconception of its scope and effect that law unintentionally excluded from its beneficent terms certain features which its proponents thought were included, and which on account of their absence have created inequalities and patent discriminations which we now seek to remedy.

I believe the chairman of the committee [Mr. STEENERSON] is deserving of much praise for the perseverance with which he has adhered to the correction of the inequalities, which unexpectedly developed in the interpretation and operation of the act of June 5, 1920, as evidenced by this bill which he has introduced as supplementary to and amendatory of the act of June 5, 1920. I know that the employees affected by the provisions of this act will be cheered and refreshed in their labors for the equity and justice herein accorded to them, and in thanksgiving therefor they will feel very grateful to Mr. STEENERSON in particular and to the other members of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads for the interest they have taken in passing this bill.

The second section restores to their former status more than 2,000 clerks who were reduced in rank on account of the interpretation placed by the Post Office Department on the special clerkship section of the reclassification act. In administering that law the Post Office Department issued an order limiting special clerkships to distributors of mail, and all the then existing special clerks were given the option of taking scheme examinations and becoming distributors or remaining in their present positions with a reduction in rank to fifth-grade clerkships.

The departmental rules provided that special clerkship designation and the corresponding salary could be given only to clerks actually engaged in the distribution of mail. In large post offices about 75 per cent of the clerks distribute mail, while the remaining 25 per cent are employed in the executive, finance, money-order, postal-savings, registry, and in the mailing division in other capacities than the distribution of mail. These 25 per cent were utterly ignored and actually reduced in rank through the policy adopted by the department in allocating special clerkships. While many of the clerks exercised the option of studying schemes and engaging in the distribution of the mail, a majority of them elected to retain their present positions with the demotion in title. They did not desire to undergo the hardship necessarily entailed in studying schemes of distribution, because many years have elapsed since they had engaged in that character of work, and in many instances some of the clerks had never distributed mail, but had originally been assigned to their present work. When they were given these positions in the finance, money-order, and other preferred divisions, it was held out to them that they would be in line for special clerkships to which most of them, if not all, had in time acceded and from which they were arbitrarily demoted by the aforesaid policy of the former Postmaster General. It is true they did not suffer a reduction in salary, but only in grade, because the maximum salary received by them at the time the reclassification salary act of June 5, 1920, was enacted was $1,750 per year, but the fact is they would have passed on to salaries of $1,900 or $2,000 per annum, to which special clerks are entitled, if they had not been divested of their rank.

About 2,000 of these clerks exercising the option given to them in the departmental ruling took up the study of schemes and the distribution of mail in order to get the increased compensation given to special clerks. There were altogether 4,337 clerks in the special grade at the time the former Postmaster General handed down his ruling, so that this bill seeks to take care of a little over 2,000 who did not take up the work of distributing mail. This section accords to them the title and salary which, by every principle and rule of equity and fairness, they are entitled to.

In a letter to Postmaster General Hays, under date of May 18, 1921, I called his attention to the plight of these former special clerks in order that he might know the situation thoroughly, so that care could be taken of them by administrative policy in the event that the Steenerson bill should, for some reason, fail of passage. In this letter I said:

> Your predecessor, through Mr. Koons, First Assistant Postmaster General, issued a departmental order confining the special clerk designations to distributors of mail, denying that classification to other clerks whose duties require special skill, fitness or knowledge, and entail financial responsibilities. The existing departmental ruling practically closes the door to promotion outside of the force of distributors. Its application means that these preferred positions at stations or in financial departments of post offices are hereafter to be given to junior clerks who have no practical knowledge of the work to which they are assigned because the senior clerks who, through the time-honored policy of gradation, acceded to these preferred positions will hereafter be engaged in the distribution of mail in order that they may continue to hold the salary allotted to special clerks.
> Former First Assistant Postmaster General Koons, who, though an estimable gentleman of considerable post-office knowledge, never had practical experience, and consequently he fell into error when he held that knowledge of mail distribution is the only open sesame to the grade of special clerk and the additional salary relating thereto.

Postmaster General Hays recognizes the injustice done to these clerks and he is very anxious that they be taken care of in the manner provided for by section 2 of this bill. In fact, when the Postmaster General was informed that it would require $410,000 to take care of this section he declared that it was the best money that could be spent and he was for it and heartily indorsed its expenditure.

While I am engaged in discussing this subject I desire to aver that after the 2,000-odd clerks are accorded justice through the application and operation of section 2 of this bill, I join with the Postmaster General in hearty approval of his prospective policy of granting to the distributors of mail 85 per cent of future special clerkships and allotting the remaining 15 per cent among the clerks engaged in other classes of work. The distributors are the backbone of the service, notwithstanding the statement of anyone to the contrary. They work nights for the most part and in large offices, generally in insanitary and foul workrooms. These men must study their schemes of distribution on their own time without any extra compensation therefor, and before a man can become a qualified distributor he must put in from one to two years of constant study, and even after he has qualified as a distributor he must keep up with constant scheme changes in order that he may accurately distribute the mail. These men are engaged in the character of work for which the Postal Service was primarily instituted—that of the transmission of the mail. They are deserving of every added incentive possible in order that they may be induced to continue at their essential labors.

Postmaster General Hays is right in his championship of the distributors, and I am very glad to know that after years and years of empty talk about rewarding "the men behind the guns" at last a Postmaster General is going to do something specific and tangible for the building up of the distribution service and the according of justice to the men engaged in that arduous and vexatious type of work.

While an injustice was done to a large number of clerks through the departmental policy above alluded to, yet the very operation of the reclassified salary act of June 5, 1920, created a great number of discriminations among the letter carriers which section 3, in a measure, undertakes to correct; but in order to accord full justice to the men who were thus injured section 3 ought really to be made retroactive, something which I undertook to do, unsuccessfully, in the committee. The reclassification act provides that clerks and carriers in the first and second class post offices, when "hereafter" appointed regulars, are to be credited with the time which they have served as substitutes. While the act itself, in the first section, declares it shall take effect July 1, 1920, and was intended to allow credit for substitute service rendered in the future, the Comptroller of the Treasury held that the word "hereafter" in the provision in question appertained to the appointment of a clerk or a carrier as a regular, and that in fixing his grade and salary he should be credited with the time served as substitute up to that period. Under this ruling one who was appointed regular before June 5, 1920, the date of the enactment of the reclassification act, received no credit for substitute service. This resulted in many gross and flagrant discriminations, example of which I desire to call your attention to in a table of cases prepared by me from complaints brought to my attention:

Examples of the inequalities which developed after the reclassification act of June 5, 1920, became effective.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Name.	Appointed substitute.	Appointed regular.	Present salary.
McCauley, Hugh F	Aug. 8, 1914	June 1, 1920	$1,400
Rosania, John T	....do....	June 4, 1920	1,400
Quinn, James A	....do....	....do....	1,400
Weidner, Andrew M	....do....	June 16, 1920	1,800
Leddin, Fred. W. O	....do....	....do....	1,800
Beatty, George W	July 1, 1916	Aug. 21, 1920	1,800
Blend, Jacob	....do....	Oct. 16, 1920	1,800

It will be noted that of the first five letter carriers who were appointed substitutes August 8, 1914, McCauley was appointed a regular on June 1, 1920, and Rosania and Quinn were made regulars on June 4, 1920. All three were made regulars prior to June 5, when the present reclassification law became effective, and each is in the first grade drawing $1,400 per annum. The next two on the list—Weidner and Leddin—were appointed substitutes on the same date as the first three, namely, August 8, 1914, but they were appointed regulars on June 16, 1920, or subsequent to the enactment of the reclassification law. These two men are now drawing $1,800 per annum, or $400 more per annum than their three fellow carriers who were made regulars previous to June 5.

It will also be noted that the last two names on the list—Beatty and Blend—appointed substitutes July 1, 1916, and to regular positions August 21 and October 16, 1920, respectively, are also in the $1,800 grade. The discrimination is particularly obvious, when it is pointed out that McCauley, Rosania, and Quinn were employed as substitute letter carriers for approximately two years more than Beatty and Blend, and, although all have an equal record for efficiency, Beatty and Blend are drawing $400 more per annum than McCauley, Rosania, and Quinn, who were appointed two years before them.

NEW YORK CITY.

The following list of letter carriers employed in the New York City post office gives further evidence of the manner in which the reclassification law of June 5, 1920, has applied:

Name.	Appointed substitute.	Appointed regular.	Present salary.
Langenhauser, George	June 11, 1917	May 11, 1920	$1,400
Worzberger, Bernard	....do....	June 1, 1920	1,400
O'Brien, Timothy	....do....	May 18, 1920	1,400
Buchholtz, H	....do....	May 6, 1920	1,400
McKnight, Paul J	....do....	June 8, 1920	1,600
Pender, John F	....do....	June 16, 1920	1,600
Steinbrecher, Morris	....do....	....do....	1,600
Lutz, John P	....do....	June 20, 1920	1,700
Parker, Crofton A	....do....	....do....	1,600
Walsh, Michael A	....do....	....do....	1,600

Attention is directed to the fact that all of the 10 named carriers in the list were appointed to the position of substitute on the same date, June 11, 1917. Of the 10 employees, the first four were appointed to regular positions before June 5, 1920, and at the present time receive a salary of $1,400 each, while the last six were appointed to regular positions after June 5, 1920, and receive a salary of $1,600 per annum, with one exception, that of Lutz, who draws $1,700. The ratings in the civil-service examination for the position of letter carrier in the instance of the first four named were apparently higher than in the cases of those appointed to regular positions after June 5, 1920, and the inference is justified by the fact that they were appointed to regular positions at an earlier date. Despite the attainment of higher ratings, the first four are in effect penalized to the extent of $200 and in one case $300.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Name.	Appointed substitute.	Appointed regular.	Present salary.
Reisenberger, Chas	Jan. 15, 1912	Mar. 3, 1918	$1,600
Beckman, Albert W	Sept. 4, 1912	Mar. 17, 1918	1,600
Bond, Louis	Nov. 20, 1912	July 8, 1918	1,500
Frey, Ernest H	Feb. 12, 1913	Aug. 1, 1919	1,400
Borchelt, Wm. A	Mar. 29, 1913	May 1, 1920	1,400
Schulz, Edward	Apr. 3, 1913	May 12, 1920	1,400
Hart, Chas. M	Sept. 15, 1913	May 17, 1920	1,400
Steins, Harry J	Oct. 1, 1913	....do....	1,400
Irion, Fred J	Nov. 22, 1913	May 18, 1920	1,400
Keck, Wm. G	Apr. 17, 1914	July 1, 1920	1,700
Blackburn, R. L	Apr. 20, 1914	July 10, 1920	1,800
Reuther, John C	Apr. 21, 1914	July 28, 1920	1,800
Piket, A. C., jr	Apr. 22, 1914	Aug. 21, 1920	1,700
Burkhart, W. D	Jan. 15, 1918	Oct. 16, 1920	1,600

The first name on the above list—Reisenberger—was appointed substitute January 15, 1912. Burkhart, the last named, received his appointment on January 15, 1918, or six years later. Reisenberger, although serving six years longer as a carrier, receives the same salary—$1,600—as Burkhart.

Compare the employees appointed substitute in 1912 with Blackburn or Reuther, appointed in 1914, and it will be observed that the last-named employees are receiving from $200 to $300 more per annum than the employees who were appointed two years ahead of them.

Compare those on the list who are now receiving a salary of $1,400 per annum with those appointed regular since July 1, 1920, and it will be noted that the more recent appointees to regular positions receive from $200 to $400 more annual salary, although they served from one to five years less time.

In order to correct the manifest injustice contained in the foregoing examples, I offered the following amendment in the committee:

On page 2, line 11, after the numeral "3," insert the following:

"That that portion of the act reclassifying salaries of postmasters and postal employees, approved June 5, 1920, which provides 'that hereafter substitute clerks in first and second class post offices and substitute letter carriers in the City Delivery Service when appointed regular clerks or carriers shall have credit for actual time served on a basis of one year for each 306 days of eight hours served as substitute, and appointed to the grade to which such clerk or carrier would have progressed had his original appointment as substitute been to grade 1' shall be amended by adding the following:

"'Provided, That clerks and carriers in the intermediate or automatic grades who were appointed to regular positions before June 5, 1920, and are receiving less than the maximum grade of salary shall receive credit for all time served as substitute on a basis of one year for each 306 days of 8 hours served as substitute, and be promoted to the grade to which such clerk or carrier would have progressed had his original appointment as substitute been to grade 1.

"'The provisions herein shall be effective as of date of passage of the original act of June 5, 1920.'"

The foregoing amendment would make section 3 retroactive so that the employees discriminated against through the interpretation of the reclassified salary act would be taken care of. The committee was very fair with me and gave me plenty of time and opportunity to argue in support of this amendment, but it was shown that the estimated additional cost of this provision would be $6,641,300. My colleagues proved to me that the insertion of this amendment in the bill would jeopardize the passage of the whole measure, and, furthermore, the Post Office Department openly expressed its opposition thereto on account of the great expenditure which it would entail. Also, it was explained that the provision of the reclassified salary act which caused so much mischief and injustice was intended by the Post Office and Post Roads Committee to become effective July 1, 1920, and that the opinion of the Comptroller of the Treasury gave to a large number of men a great gratuity to which they were not entitled and which it was never intended that they should have received. Thereafter I did not attempt to press this amendment and concurred in the adoption of section 3 as drafted in the bill under discussion.

This bill has many other good features in it, all of which are necessarily supplementary to the reclassified salary act of June 5, 1920, and which, taken in conjunction therewith, will raise the Post Office employees out of the slough of despond into which low salaries and oppressing working conditions of a great number of years reduced them. It is a meritorious bill, readjusting the salaries of the employees benefiting by it on an equitable basis, and ought to receive the unanimous support of the House.

Borah Disarmament Amendment.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS
OF
HON. CHARLES R. CRISP, OF GEORGIA,
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, July 15, 1921.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, law, order, and civilization throughout the world are to-day hanging over a seething volcano. Millions of homes are in despair, mourning for loved ones who sleep the sleep that knows no earthly waking, caused by the World War, which, in my judgment, was superinduced by Prussian militarism and armaments. The citizens of every nation are facing bankruptcy on account of the back-breaking burdens of taxation. The world can not become normal; peace, happiness, and the necessities of life will not be restored to the citizens of the world unless law and order are maintained and the expenses of government greatly reduced.

In our own fair country our people are dissatisfied and impoverished, for the burden of taxation is intolerable, a state of affairs caused largely by great armaments. We have passed a law creating a budget system, which I trust will bring about better business methods in governmental affairs and result in retrenchment of Federal expenditures. While it is our duty to prune all appropriations and to practice the strictest economy, yet I am confident no Member of the House believes that the expenditures of government can be materially reduced and the burdens of taxation substantially lightened unless we greatly curtail expenditures for the Army and Navy. It is estimated by various statisticians that from 88 to 93 per cent of the Government expenditures for the United States goes directly or indirectly to the military and naval budgets of the Government, made up of expenditures for the Army, the Navy, pensions growing out of wars, and obligations incident to the recent World War. A conservative estimate is certainly 90 per cent. It is probably true that 90 cents out of every dollar collected from the people by taxation goes for war and war preparation, past and present, while only 10 cents out of each dollar is used for the civil purposes of the Government. Appropriations for educational purposes, the Postal Service, the American merchant marine, river and harbor improvements, aid to the States in building Federal roads, the pay of all civil officials of the United States, maintenance of the courts of the land, the erection and care of public buildings and parks owned by the Government, irrigation and drainage projects, and sundry other expenditures for the development and material progress and prosperity of the United States are given only 10 per cent of the total Government expenditures. Therefore it is apparent that the only way to materially lessen Government appropriations and lighten taxation is by disarmament and consequent reducing of appropriations for the Army and Navy.

My colleagues, I believe that our respective districts elected us to Congress because they thought we had their interests at heart; that we had the courage of our convictions; that we could not be bossed or led around by any leaders; but that we would function as Congressmen; and that we would support legislation that was for their benefit. They believed we were practical men and would not be led off to chase the rainbow. To-day we have an opportunity to justify the faith reposed in us and let our constituents know whether they have sized us up correctly or whether we shall bow to the decrees of party leaders. I appeal to you, my Republican colleagues, to stand up for your convictions and be independent, just as your colleagues on the Democratic side showed their independence in voting for the Porter peace resolution. I do not believe peace propositions or international questions like disarmament are party questions, but each man should vote his conviction; and longing for peace and hoping that if we resumed diplomatic relations with Germany and Austria a better market would be afforded for our surplus cotton and other products, I unhesitatingly voted for the Porter peace resolution, and 49 Democrats voted for it to 60 voting against it. I appeal to you to-day to show your independence and vote your convictions; and if you do, before this House stands adjourned we will have adopted the Borah amendment requesting the President to call an international conference between the United States, England, and Japan to bring about naval disarmament.

The Borah amendment is a practical proposition; and if adopted, in my judgment will speedily bring about a conference between these three great nations—the only ones with large navies and ambitious naval programs—and will result in an agreement to at once greatly reduce naval armaments, which will prove a blessing to the world and lighten the burden of taxation borne by the citizens of these respective countries.

Let me read the Borah amendment:

> That the President is authorized and requested to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval expenditures and building programs of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which understanding or agreement is to be reported to the respective Governments for approval.

Surely no Member of this House who loves peace and seeks disarmament can object to this amendment. If we adopt it, the Senate having already agreed to it, the matter is at an end. If we amend it or adopt a new provision in place of it, the Senate must act, and the whole matter is again held up indefinitely in a controversy between the House and Senate, which means more delay. Shall we fiddle while Rome burns? The plan of the Republican leaders of the House to concur in the Senate proposition for disarmament by substituting the Porter disarmament resolution for the Borah amendment is but a subterfuge, for the Porter plan is meaningless, not practical, and has no teeth in it.

We are supposed to be practical men, and we all know that, with conditions in Europe as they exist to-day, with many wars going on, it is folly to expect these nations to agree to reduce their armies. As far as I am concerned, I am willing to reduce our Army without any international agreement, for, by doing so, we would incur no risk, for there is no nation on this continent that can in any wise cope with us; and if we should ever have trouble—which God forbid—it must come from across the seas, and, should such emergency arise, we have in private walks of life over 4,000,000 of the finest soldiers in the world, veterans of the late war, who would respond to their country's call. We have already voted to reduce the Army from 230,000 enlisted men to 150,000, thereby saving many millions of dollars to the taxpayers; and, personally, I am willing to further reduce it to 100,000 men. I love peace and abhor war and all that tends to produce it, so I long for disarmament, for large armaments breed war; but, unless there is some international agreement to reduce the navies of the world, I am not willing to reduce the Navy of the United States, for I want a Navy ample to protect us. Should we ever become involved again in war, which I pray may never happen, the Navy will be our first line of defense, and, if we have a competent Navy, our national life and interests are secure.

I believe, if the Borah amendment is passed, and the President calls the conference, that England and Japan will readily agree and consent to disarmament, for their people are also burdened with taxation and long for relief. The premier of England, Lloyd-George, in the press of June 22, is quoted as saying that England would be glad of an international conference with the United States and Japan to consider disarmament; and, in my judgment, there is no question but that Japan would likewise agree.

President Harding—and he is my President as well as yours, and I would not knowingly do anything to throw clogs into the machinery of state in its efforts to bring about peace and international disarmament—is not opposed to the Borah amendment. When pending in the Senate, according to the press accounts, the President approved it, and that august body passed it unanimously. In his message to Congress on April 12, 1921, President Harding said:

> The Government is in accord with the wish to eliminate the burdens of heavy armament. * * * We are ready to cooperate with other nations to approximate disarmament, but merest prudence forbids that we disarm alone.

President Harding, since he has been in office, has publicly and privately stated that he welcomed the advice and opinions of the legislative branch of the Government, and by adopting this resolution we will go on record in our official capacity as advising the President that we desire him to call an international conference for the purpose of discussing disarmament, and it will strengthen him in his determination to call such a conference. It will in no wise interfere with the Executive prerogative, and certainly will not jeopardize the consummation of the world's great hope for an international agreement for the nations to disarm, but, on the contrary, will be of vast assistance to the President in his efforts for disarmament. The European nations are not as well versed as we in our form of government, and they have not the same knowledge of the powers and duties of the executive and legislative branches of the Government as we. Doubtless the governments of the Old World might be skeptical of the power of any commissioners appointed by the President to confer with them for disarmament if they were appointed by the President without any legislative expression, for they would remember the fate of the treaty of Versailles, which, though negotiated by President Wilson, the Senate refused to ratify, and it was under our law not binding on the people of the United States. If both branches of Congress by an affirmative vote express themselves in favor of the President's calling a conference, if such a conference is called the other conferring powers will feel assured that any agreement reached by the conferees will have the approval of the United States Government.

I appeal to you therefore, friends, who were sincere in your promises to your people, that you vote to further the interests of peace and bring about disarmament and retrench public expenditures, to "quit you like men," to show yourselves free and independent Representatives of your districts, and vote against every motion to amend the Borah proposition, and then, when the final vote comes, let us adopt the Borah amendment.

Gentlemen of the House, for the last decade the intelligence and wealth of the world has been used to devise instruments of death, torture, and devastation of human life and property, and millions of lives and billions of dollars of property have been destroyed by wars. The world is heartbroken and yearns for peace and the civil and righteous development of the peoples and countries of the earth. America is the richest and most influential of the nations, and the other Governments are not suspicious of her, for she has shown beyond cavil her unselfishness, for she seeks neither the land nor the wealth of any other country. America has always led in every movement for the advancement of the welfare of the human race, and shall she not now, my colleagues, lead in the incomparable accomplishment of an international disarmament which will prove the precursor of a permanent peace?

OF

HON. ADDISON T. SMITH,

OF IDAHO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, July 15, 1921.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Speaker, I am heartily in favor of the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CHANDLER], a member of the Committee on Ways and Means, to transfer hides from the free list, as proposed in the pending bill, to the dutiable list with a 15 per cent ad valorem, and sincerely hope the motion may prevail.

It is rather interesting to review the history of the tariff on hides during the last 75 years.

In the Whig tariff law of 1842 hides were placed on the dutiable list at the rate of 5 per cent ad valorem, and was continued by the Walker—Democratic—tariff of 1846. In the tariff law of 1857 the duty was reduced to 4 per cent, and restored to 5 per cent in the Morrill tariff law of 1861, and in the same year raised to 10 per cent. Hides were on the free list from 1872 to 1894, when a duty of 1½ cents was provided, which continued until 1897, when, under the Dingley law, the rate was fixed at 15 per cent ad valorem. The Payne-Aldrich law of 1909 placed hides on the free list, and was continued on the free list by the Underwood law of 1913. Since 1909 nearly $1,000,000,000 worth of hides have been imported, and the stock raiser, the dairyman, and the farmer have not only been deprived of the protection to which they were entitled but the Government has lost nearly $150,000,000 in revenue.

We are importing millions of dollars worth of hides yearly, and unless the proposed tariff of 15 per cent ad valorem is provided the producer of hides in the United States will be compelled to accept a price which leaves absolutely no margin of profit. The 10,000 stockmen and the 6,000,000 farmers and dairymen are entitled to this protection, especially at the present time, when the stock industry is in such a languishing condition, and it has been necessary to rush to market even yearling steers in order to avoid bankruptcy. The very existence of the live-stock industry is threatened. It is not a question of profit but of the preservation of our source of meat supply, and the difference of $1.50 or $2 additional which the producer would receive per hide as the result of the protection asked for might save many a stockman from bankruptcy and the abandonment of his business.

The Greedy Dyestuff Monopoly.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JAMES A. FREAR,

OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, July 18, 1921.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, I have asked to have stricken from the tariff bill paragraph 27 and will not repeat arguments made at different times on the floor in opposition to a dye embargo beyond saying it is the first time during peace times that any party has ever attempted to put through Congress an embargo on any commodity. I have disclosed that this embargo will benefit a $500,000,000 dye monopoly that exported $35,000,000 worth of dyes in 1920. I have quoted the Department of Commerce October, 1920, bulletin that Germany will not again become a dangerous competitor of the United States in the world trade in dyes because of our supply of raw materials and ability to meet the world in trade. It is disclosed that while we produced $95,000,000 in dyestuffs and exported $35,000,000, or practically 40 per cent in 1920, that Germany did not send to us over $335,000 worth of dyes in 1920, or less than 1 per cent of what we exported. President du Pont, 18 months ago, said to a Senate committee that within six months American manufacturers of dyestuffs could meet the world, and they have long ago verified his prediction. Over 100,000,000 American consumers to-day are paying four times prewar prices for dyestuffs that went into their garments before the war, and while an embargo exists against foreign dyes none exists against foreign textiles dyed with foreign dyes, all to the injury of 11,000 textile manufacturers employing a million people and producing several billions of textiles annually.

I have disclosed that the Chemical Foundation Co. is a private concern created solely to take over alien patents long after the armistice and that the officers of the private company were officers of the Alien Property Custodian's office having charge of such patents, and that they purchased the patents at private sale from themselves at a song, or at 2 per cent of their actual value, without notice to the world of their action. That by said seizure and pretended sale the private company holds a complete monopoly of 4,500 patents and lets them out on royalties to its own stockholders at its own price, but that no limit occurs on the prices charged by its stockholders to a long-suffering public. I have charged that the same company now threatens suit against the United States to secure license fees reaching large amounts based on such sale. I have disclosed that the dyestuff interests spent over $100,000 for lobby expenses to secure dye embargo laws, according to disclosures in the Senate, and that the dyestuff attorneys drew the dye law now in existence. I have disclosed that the dyestuff interests now swarm the corridors of the Capitol Building and are working like beavers to prevent the passage of any amendment which would render less valuable the $10,000,000 of alien patents which they bought for $250,000. All these facts have been disclosed with an offer to produce evidence on every count, and in practically every case the statements repeatedly made to the House have gone unchallenged.

To all the evidences of a purpose to grant a further three-year extension to a recognized dye monopoly of the worst character, the answer has been "The Germans will get us if we don't watch out," and "A domestic monopoly is better than a foreign monopoly."

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WILL PASS JUDGMENT.

Not one word of evidence suggests that Germany can displace our dye industries, and I believe the American people will repudiate any such answer and will say that in the absence of one line of testimony showing comparative cost of production, the dye monopoly that has robbed the people of many millions of dollars annually should be satisfied with a rate of 35 per cent and 7 cents per pound specific, contained in section 26 of the bill and practically double the value of dyes before the war.

I believe that Schedule K of the Payne Act was a modest holdup compared with this infamous dye embargo, and that it will be regarded as such by the people, who will be compelled to pay the freight and are the final judges at the polls.

Leaders who declared against an embargo a few short months ago and voted for it almost to a unit in committee have saddled it onto the Fordney tariff bill and onto the people unless reversed by the House or Senate.

What defense has occurred for the embargo proposal that does not sound like the pleading of attorneys for the dye monopoly? What facts have been produced to justify this monstrous proposition that in principle is un-Republican and un-American?

Let the record speak for itself. I have no concern excepting for the millions of Americans who will be bled by the dye monopoly under the plea that it is protecting America. No greater hypocrisy was ever disclosed by any monopoly.

I quote a brief telegram hereto referred to that will make interesting reading in the future.

NEW YORK, July 6, 1921.

Hon. JAMES A. FREAR,
Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.:

To your colleagues to-night please say that it is the firm conviction of the executive committee of the American Protective Tariff League, after careful survey and consultation with conservative party business men, that approval of dyestuff embargo will lose every doubtful congressional district next year. That embargo has no place in American fiscal system, and especially in any tariff act.

WILBUR F. WAKEMAN,
Treasurer and General Secretary.

Other letters and telegrams from equally reputable disinterested men to the same effect could be presented in addition to those heretofore quoted in debate on the dye schedule, but this is sufficient to bring notice to those representing "doubtful congressional districts" of the arguments afforded political opponents.

LETTER ASKING FOR PROSECUTIONS.

I quote herewith a letter sent to-day to Attorney General Daugherty that is self-explanatory. If prosecutions follow, and they ought to follow, in what position are those who would defend this Chemical Foundation Co. that is at the bottom of the dyestuff monopoly?

The letter follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18, 1921.

Hon. HARRY M. DAUGHERTY,
Attorney General, Department of Justice,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Herewith please find House resolution No. 148, also extract from testimony taken from hearings on H. R. 2706, Ways and Means Committee, June 18 to July 18, 1919, and on H. R. 8078, Senate Finance Committee, December 8, 1919, to January 12, 1920.

The resolution sets forth specifically that Francis P. Garvan, Joseph Choate, jr. (and Ramsey Hoguet), were employed by the United States Government as officials in the Bureau of Investigation, office of the Alien Property Custodian, in charge of alien patents. That several months after signing of the armistice and about February or March, 1919, they negotiated a sale by the Government and prepared necessary documents for a conveyance to themselves and their associates at private sale and at a nominal purchase price of 4,500 alien chemical patents. The pretended sale was made to the Chemical Foundation Co., a private company, of which they were organizers and principal officers, and was made without notice to the public, without any competition, and for a consideration of $250,000, although reputable men declare two of the 4,500 patents were worth $10,000,000, and the others, though of less value, would add to that total.

Reference is made to original public documents for additional evidence regarding the chemical company, of which company Mr. Garvan was president while serving as Alien Property Custodian. After the sale and as such public officer by public acts he confirmed the sale previously made to him and his associates when they were in charge of the Bureau of Investigation and while he and they were substantially in control of such property. Extracts of testimony herewith discloses the public position of the parties and activities when negotiating the sale on the part of the Government to themselves. Absence of substantial consideration will be furnished by reputable witnesses. A refusal of Alien Property Custodian Garvan to file any report of his administration as such officer while at the same time he was and now is president of the private Chemical Foundation Co. will give an understanding of methods pursued.

Attempted justification of the sale is offered by saying that the alien patents are held by this private company for the benefit of stockholders in dye companies who are privileged to use such patents on payment of royalties or licenses at prices fixed by the chemical company. Though no part of the resolution, I am informed that this private chemical company has threatened suit against the Government for royalties claimed to have been paid the Government before such pretended sale of patents was made, thereby indicating its general purposes and character. I have charged in the resolution that the pretended sale was fraudulent and simply amounted to a seizure of such alien patents by such public officers and holding of the property to their own private use. That conclusion is inevitable from the testimony.

A violation of a well-known principle of international law occurred when these alien patents belonging to private parties were seized long after the armistice was signed, not as a war measure nor for protection or aid of the Government, but seized for use of a private company by public officers who secured the transfer and possession to themselves for private purposes as stated. The legal responsibility of the Government to the real owners of the patents presumably extends to a return of the patents, or, in any event, their equivalent value. Apart from the violation of principles of international law here involved occurs responsibility by the Government for alien property taken over by these public officials to themselves in a private capacity at a private sale practically without consideration.

The Chemical Co., I am informed, in order to foreclose the Government's right of recovery, recently sought through its officers to have inserted in the peace resolution a provision validating all sales by the Alien Property Custodian, which effort failed through the watchfulness of committee members. It is represented that the Chemical Foundation, through its stockholders represents a majority of the chemical interests of the country, and by its absolute control of patents and royalties the public is without protection from its exactions. Its power rests with the patents fraudulently acquired, and if the sale is set aside the other question largely will be settled by action. Probability of securing an early expression from the House on the resolution seems doubtful because of proposed recess, and it was offered only to secure added support for your action in the matter.

Your public announcement that your department would vigorously prosecute fraudulent sales made during or since the war has been hailed by the country as a vindication of its judgment last November. As a member of the House investigating committee, I aided in securing evidence which I believe warrants prosecutions and recoveries by the Government in different cases disclosed, but in all the thousands of pages of testimony taken by the House committee I know of no case that presents such a flagrant violation of official duties by men who served on both sides of a contract. From their own undisputed testimony these men violated not alone ethics of public trust and confidence but acted in defiance of well-established principles of law, and also of international law, that directly affects the good name of our Government with all other nations of the world.

The great power and influence of the chemical monopoly will be thrown against any effort to compel restitution to the Government of many millions of dollars in property, for which the stockholders paid only 2 per cent value, and this same power which sought to force validation by Congress of this sale, and spent over $100,000 for lobbying in order to secure dye legislation, will attempt to reach administrative as well as legislative action.

The public complains over punishment of "little fellows," and those skeptical of motives often question prosecutions that may serve political ends, but the case presented by the resolution is bipartisan in character; it challenges the confidence of the people in the integrity of public officials; and it affects prominent ex-officials who set an example of public irresponsibility before their subordinates and before the country.

Any information I may have is at your command, and I trust you will do all in your power to vindicate the law and to right the wrong that in its attempts to validate and "cover up" has reached even to the doors of legislative halls. Such efforts to foreclose the Government's right to inquire and to prosecute are as vicious and "indefensible" in character as was the original fraudulent sale.

Very sincerely, yours,

JAMES A. FREAR.

THE DYE SUBJECT FROM AN EXPERT.

I also quote from a thorough scoring of the embargo provision by an expert whose views are given wide circulation by an acknowledged authority on Republicanism during the past quarter of a century.

It also contains a resolution drawn to urge prosecution of the Chemical Foundation Co.:

[From the American Economist, July 22, 1921.]

The American Protective Tariff League, New York.

ANOTHER BROADSIDE FROM DOANE—EDITOR DOANE EXPOSES THE ENORMITIES OF THE DYE CIRCLE AND THE INIQUITIES OF THE EMBARGO SYSTEM.

In our issue of May 20 we reprinted from the New York Daily News Record an article by Mr. Warren E. Doane, editor of The Manufacturer, the official organ of the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia, in which he attacked the dye-embargo system. In the July 12 issue of the same paper there appears another exposé by Mr. Doane of the operation and effects of dye embargo, particularly the effect it will have upon the political complexion of the next House of Representatives in the event that a continuation of that vicious system should receive the approval of Congress. He also shows that the effect of the provisions of the dye schedule of the bill now being considered by Congress would be the entire exclusion of all foreign dyes, no matter how greatly they may be needed by domestic dye consumers.

Mr. Doane's article reads as follows:

"So ably and exhaustively has Representative JAMES A. FREAR, of Wisconsin, as a Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee dissenting to schedule 1 of the tariff bill now before the House, exposed the vicious and menacing character of that price-fixing and monopoly-creating proposal in behalf of the domestic dye industries that at first hand it might seem to be either presumption or repetition to attempt to add anything to what he already has said.

"And yet, lengthy and thorough though his report was, it was by no means a complete review of the iniquities of the dye schedule. Because of lack of time, if for no other reason, there were many phases of the situation upon which he touched but lightly, if at all; and these should be emphasized now, in order that all concerned—and that means not only the direct and indirect users of dyes, but the entire American public—may know just what this astounding, unexplainable, and unprecedented proposal is that the Ways and Means Committee has asked Congress and the people at large to swallow unhesitatingly, hook, line, and sinker.

"To dwell for a moment upon the political aspects of this situation—for its political potentialities are as great as its economic dangers—it may as well be said at the outset that upon what disposition the present Congress makes of this dye schedule, there hinges, more than upon all other issues combined, the determination of which party shall dominate the next Congress.

"DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY THREATENS.

"If that schedule is enacted into law in even a resemblance to its present form President Harding, by permitting Congress to translate his principle of 'less Government in business' into an actual turning over of the Government to that business represented by the Du Ponts, the Allied Chemical Co., and their lesser allies, may begin at once to trim his sails to deal with a Democratic majority in the Sixty-eighth Congress. That much is a foregone conclusion.

"The voters who elected Mr. Harding and the present Republican majority in both branches of Congress did so upon the strength of Republican platform pledges which were in the form of a solemn covenant with the people to avoid any sort of 'protection' that would be monopolistic in its tendency or principle, with the further clear avowal that everything possible would be done to reduce the existing burden of direct taxation and the indirect tax upon the people through the inflated cost of living.

"But notwithstanding that these promises are not yet one year old, and certainly must be vividly fresh in the minds of the taxpayers, and when every possible dollar of proper tariff revenue is needed to redeem the Republican Party's pledge of tax reductions, Congress is asked not only to deprive the country of the millions of dollars of such income that would be had through a protective tariff upon dyes, but practically to grant a three-year suspension of all the antitrust laws, so far as the domestic dye industry is concerned, in order that no impediment may stand in the way of the imposition of other millions of unjust and unnecessary costs upon the consuming public—all in behalf of a monopoly which already has reaped a harvest of wealth in prices averaging 400 per cent above those which prevailed prior to the war.

"PROPOSITION INCONCEIVABLE.

"The proposition is not only indefensible, it is inconceivable. And why is this especial grant of unprecedented privilege asked by its prospective beneficiaries and urged by those who seem so anxious to serve them?

"Solely upon the arbitrary assertion of the former, unsupported by any convincing evidence or fact, that no protective tariff would adequately protect the domestic dye industry. We hear it from the Du Ponts, we hear it from the Chemical Foundation, and we hear it echoed again in the majority report of the Ways and Means Committee. Do the leaders of the Republican Party realize what it means when members thereof of supposed responsibility publicly proclaim that a protective tariff will not protect?

"In times past the Republican Party has found itself in many storms where every thunderclap bellowed the accusation, 'The party of big business.' Some of those storms the party has weathered; some it has not. But it can not hope to survive the popular uprising that inevitably will follow close upon the delegation by Congress of legislative authority, the practical suspension of all the antitrust laws, the arbitrary exclusion of all foreign competition, the endangerment of other 'key' industries, and the hold-up of the American people solely in behalf of and to perpetuate as such a powerful monopoly which already has gouged the American public out of millions of dollars in illicit profits, only made possible by heretofore unknown price-fixing prerogatives.

"TIME FOR ACTION.

"If, from their viewpoint, for no other than purely political reasons, it is time for the strong men of the Republican Party to rise up and declare that, no matter through what motives, the misguided shall not be permitted to hand to the party now out of power this instrument of certain Republican defeat at the next congressional election.

"And if the men who are engaged in every branch of the textile industry, whose own tariff protection is jeopardized and even may be entirely wiped out by the increased costs permitted to be imposed upon them through embargo prices, are alive to the many ways in which this schedule of the tariff bill is bound to affect their business in a direct way, as well as in those many indirect ways which result from party dominance in Washington they will not waste a day in marshaling themselves to compel at least such amendment of schedule 1 as will permit them access to something like the same quality and price range in dyes that their foreign competitors will have.

"It might be well to give here a very simple but a very illuminating and, I take it, effective illustration of what is meant in the preceding paragraph.

"Before the war one could buy in any of the large department stores green sun-fast mercerized armure goods, suitable for portieres, etc., at 90 cents per yard. The dyestuff used therein cost 4¾ cents per yard. At to-day's domestic dye prices, made possible by the embargo that has been in effect since 1914, the dyestuff alone would cost 39.6 cents per yard, an increase of more than 830 per cent, or nearly half of what the whole finished product cost in 1913.

"PROTECTION WIPED OUT.

"But that is only a part of the story. In Canada, where they have no restrictions other than a small tariff and a sales tax to apply to imported dyes, the very same goods can be dyed with the same colors to-day at 19 cents a yard, or less than half the cost of the dye in this country. Now, let the American manufacturer of such materials follow me closely. Under the new tariff bill he is protected by a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem, but the single cost of the fast color is almost sufficient to wipe out that entire differential.

"Likewise, awning materials, which formerly were dyed with fast colors, are no longer obtainable, doubtless because the excessive cost of fast dyes would build up a prohibitive production cost for such an ordinarily cheap fabric.

"And here is the whole essence of one phase of the situation that would be brought about, to remain without remedy for three years, if this dye schedule were enacted into law: The American maker not only can not produce fast colors, because of the prohibitive cost of the fast domestic dye (the only one to which he would have access), but under embargo conditions even the price of a less durable dye is such that the foreign producer, with access to Swiss or German dyes at much less cost, has the advantage of him both in price and fast color, despite a presumably protective tariff whose protection is nullified by the arbitrarily and unnecessarily high price of embargo-protected domestic dyes.

"BUSINESS MOVES TO CANADA.

"Canada passed laws prohibiting the exportation of wood pulp, thus compelling our paper manufacturers to move their plants across the border. Now a Republican Ways and Means Committee strongly urges a tariff schedule which would compel other of our industries to move to Canada in order successfully to do business in the United States!

"In a lengthy attack a few days ago upon Representative FREAR because of his minority Republican report against the dye schedule, Francis P. Garvan, of the Chemical Foundation, wound up with a question which, like every utterance that has come from the embargo and monopoly advocates since this controversy opened, sounds well if you don't puncture it with even a cursory analysis.

"'At what price,' queries Mr. Garvan, 'does the American textile manufacturer believe that this German trust (the Interessen Gemeinschaft) will give him dyes once it has succeeded in exterminating the industry in America, and at what price does he think he would be getting dyes now were it not for this industry here?'

"Wolf! Wolf! But pitiable bosh, Mr. Garvan.

"In the very same paragraph from which the above inquiry is quoted it is stated that the German trust has been in existence for 40 years. That's a long way back and would cover almost any period to which we might want to refer, but for the purpose of analyzing Mr. Garvan's scare cry we'll only go back to 1913.

"ANSWER IS READY.

"By general admission we didn't have any dye industry that amounted to anything at that time, but the German trust was then at least 32 years old. And in spite of this we made wool orange dye, for instance, and sold it at 14 cents a pound in competition with the German. If Mr. Garvan is itching for an answer to his question, there it is. To-day domestic wool orange sells for 45 cents a pound, and that brings us to a further analysis relating to his statement that no protective tariff would protect.

"A 35 per cent ad valorem duty (American valuation) on 45 cents a pound would be 15¾ cents, or more ad valorem duty now than the entire selling price in 1914, including production cost, freight, tariff duty, and importer's profit. But that isn't all the protective tariff duty that the domestic dyes have under this new tariff law. There is still a 7-cent specific duty, which brings the total up to 22¾ cents a pound, or a duty alone amounting to more than 160 per cent of the entire selling price of the imported dye before the war.

"So high has this monopoly already run the prices of domestic dyes, under a 7-year freedom from all outside competition, that in practically every color the proposed tariff rates of the new bill, at American valuation, would make the duty alone from one to five times the total selling price of the imported dye before the war.

"All this talk about German competition being the great and moving impulse in the plea for three additional years of an even more stringent embargo and monopoly than has existed up to this time is mere buncombe. The ultimate end of this whole campaign is a continuation of exorbitant profits accruing from prices that have only been possible through the practical exclusion of all foreign competition.

"GERMAN BUGBEAR THE MEANS.

"The real truth of the matter is that the great German bugbear has been used merely as the means of excluding from this country not only the products of the much-feared German trust, but the dyes of every foreign manufacturer, of whatever nationality, in all colors that may be made in this country, whether made here by a dozen factories or by only a single concern.

"Have those who have been nominated to be the real victims of this astounding legislative proposal fully realized that if schedule 1 becomes a law it will exclude from this country all other dyes, along with the German? Do they realize that, notwithstanding the wolf cry of the Garvans and Du Ponts and Pouchers and Choates about German competition, we imported more of Swiss than of German dyes last year? Do they fully comprehend that all of this is to be shut out under the terms of this dye schedule of the new tariff law?

"So long as Mr. Garvan brings up the question of prices, let us make an inquiry along that line. When all of this exclusion has been accomplished, what will happen to dye prices in this country?

"And in that connection, let it be borne in mind, too, that under the language of this proposed law, if there be but a single manufacturer in this country who makes a particular color, that of itself is sufficient to put that dye into class A—nonimportable—and to make a monopoly of that dye for the single manufacturer thereof. Of course, the law leaves it to the Tariff Commission to determine the 'reasonable terms as to price.' But under such circumstances by what standard would a reasonable price be judged? Obviously by the statement of the single manufacturer of that color. There would be no other domestic condition upon which to base an estimate or comparison.

"STANDARDIZATION OF DYES.

"It is left to the Tariff Commission, too, to effect a standardization of dyes and their strengths. Easily said and impossible of fulfillment. Before the war every company had its own standard of strength and the tendency was all toward higher concentration. Many dealers imported only the highest grades and reduced to the required strength with salt. In other words, no importer made the effort to keep on hand the stock which would at once meet the strength standard of every purchaser or competitor. Often, therefore, only the highest concentration was imported, and the dyes then reduced to meet each individual demand.

"As an instance of how completely the desires of the domestic dye manufacturers seem to have dominated the framers of this new dye schedule, every word of which is to be interpreted for their benefit and without consideration of the consumer, let us take Rhodamine B. In 1914 it sold for 20 cents a pound, and Rhodamine B extra, of five times the strength, sold for 80 cents a pound.

"Bear in mind those prices, and then realize that the Du Ponts now sell Rhodamine B extra for $9 a pound. If the Tariff Commission should elect to make Rhodamine B the standard, then, obviously, Rhodamine B extra, of five times that strength, would take five times the specific duty of 7 cents a pound, or 35 cents a pound. The ad valorem duty of 35 per cent on the American valuation of $9 would be $3.15—about 400 per cent of the total selling price in 1914—and adding the 35 cents specific duty would give a total tariff protection of $3.50. And this on an article which, before the war, sold for 80 cents, which price included production cost, freight, insurance, tariff, and importer's profit.

"CLAIMS OF GARVAN.

"And Mr. Garvan and his colleagues—carefully refraining, however, from offering any proofs in substantiation thereof—continue to reiterate two things:

"A protective tariff would not protect; the Germans would take a price stranglehold upon this country were it not for the beneficent Du Ponts, Allied Chemical Co., et al.

"It is as plainly evident upon the surface of this bill as though it had been specifically written into its language, that its purpose is not only to create a monopoly beyond the curb or restriction of any law, except that which the Tariff Commission may lay down, but that it is also devised as an instrument of complete destruction of the importer.

"For entirely apart from the unprecedentedly oppressive bonding and other restrictions that are placed upon him—and in addition to the revealments of all the details of his own and his customers' business that he is compelled to make—the manner in which the dye business is conducted makes it impossible for him to operate under the terms of this schedule. And thereby it is aimed to secure not merely nominal or limited but actual and complete exclusion of all foreign dyes, whether of a character made in this country or not.

"SHIPMENT OF DYES.

"Dyes are shipped in original packages of large quantity. Under this law the importer might, if that were practicable, bring them as far as the bonded warehouse outside the custom line but no farther. Many of his customers habitually, and because of the requirements of their business, buy in small quantities; and a large proportion of an importer's orders are for amounts ranging from 5 to 25 pounds. How are such orders to be filled? Evidently the importer is to be compelled to wait until he can get enough of such orders, all of a given color, to amount to an entire package, and then remove same from the bonded warehouse.

"Such a proposition is utterly impracticable; the framer of schedule 1 knew, or ought to have known, that it was utterly impracticable; and whoever inspired such provisions could not have been actuated by other than the double motive of putting the importer out of business and placing added hardships upon all domestic users of dyes who have need of foreign goods.

"This special session of the Sixty-seventh Congress is confronted with a proposal unexampled in the annals of peace-time legislation in this country. Upon the one side is the American public, the American textile industry, Republican doctrine and Republican-platform pledges and the principle of the protective tariff. Upon the other is special privilege, class legislation, embargo, monopoly—and certain reprisals in party defeat."

"The solution of this problem rests with Congress and the leader of the Republican Party—President Harding."

WOULD PROSECUTE THE CHEMICAL FOUNDATION.

In our issue of last week we published a telegram from our Washington correspondent stating that Representative FREAR of Wisconsin had introduced a resolution demanding that the Attorney General of the United States be directed to begin proceedings to set aside the sale made by the Alien Property Custodian of certain German chemical and dye patents to the Chemical Foundation, on account of fraud, and to begin suit for the recovery of the moneys received by that organization for the use of such patents. If the allegations made in the preamble of Mr. FREAR's resolution shall be substantiated, certain people who have been very actively engaged in working for the license and embargo system will find other and more serious—to them—matters to engage their attention.

In order that our readers may be informed concerning the matters contained in said resolution, we reproduce it below:

House Resolution 148.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
July 12, 1921.

Mr. FREAR submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

Whereas the official record of hearings before the Ways and Means Committee discloses—

That during the year 1919 a sale of 4,000 alien chemical and dye patents was made by the Alien Property Custodian to the Chemical Foundation Co.;

That said sale was conceived and arranged by Francis P. Garvan, Joseph Choate, and Ramsey Hoguet, officials of the bureau of investigation of such custodian's office;

That these officials were also, respectively, the president, attorney, and patent adviser of the Chemical Foundation Co. and at the said time were in charge of alien patents in the Government office;

That at such time they prepared or caused to be prepared an order wherein they were permitted to buy said patents at such price as might be determined by the Alien Property Custodian whose advisers they were and they thereupon fixed a price of $250,000 as a consideration to be paid by them for property which was easily worth over $10,000,000;

That said parties so named arranged by order that such sale should be made privately without notice or competition and that they thereupon sold to themselves as officers of such corporation the property at a price fixed by them as such Government officers; and

Whereas said sale was fraudulently made by such public officials at a price fixed by them of only 2 per cent of the actual value of such property: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Attorney General be, and he is hereby requested to begin legal proceedings to set aside such sale made by the Alien Property Custodian to the Chemical Foundation Co. because of fraud, and that he be further requested to recover from said Chemical Foundation Co. all licenses, fees, and royalties or other receipts over and above the amount of consideration actually paid by such company as the purchase price of said patents.

Against the Fordney Tariff Bill.

OF

HON. ANTHONY J. GRIFFIN,

OF NEW YORK,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, July 20, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the committee, in placing a duty upon raw hides and striking out the duty on oil you have well illustrated the difficulty of framing a tariff measure for the whole country based upon the selfish demands of conflicting interests and industries. The debate upon both propositions has brought into prominence the motives which actuate the average Representative. He considers that his function in this House is principally to represent the interests which predominate in his district. He is prone to forget the duty which he owes to the entire country and to the consumers who must eventually bear the burdens of the tariffs which are imposed.

Gen. Hancock, when a candidate for the Presidency in 1880, became the victim of much flippant criticism because he stated that the tariff was a local issue. If he were alive to-day and listening to this debate he would realize how handsomely he has been vindicated.

Under the mode of treatment adopted in this House the tariff has really become a local issue. Thus, when the tariff on oil was being considered, we found that the manufacturing States and the farmers who used gasoline in their Ford cars or tractors, through their Representatives in this House, were found to be unanimous for free oil; while the Representatives of States in which the development of oil has become an industry, were found to be in favor of a tariff.

While the duty on hides was being considered, we found that Representatives, hailing from States where shoe and leather industries predominate, were appealing to this House to give them free hides. At the same time the Representatives from sheep and cattle raising States were insistent that their industry should be protected.

In other words, each section and each industry wants its predominating product protected and, at the same time, wants the raw material going into its manufactured products put upon the free list. That, I suppose, is human nature; but it casts an illuminating side light on the importance that is attached to party platforms. To-day it is a difficult task to differentiate between Democrat and Republican. Their platforms say one thing and their Representatives in this House seem to sing as they please in a wild, jangling chorus of discord.

"Tariff for revenue only" was formerly the distinguishing trait of Democrats and "tariff for protection" the slogan of the Republicans.

We now find Democrats advocating a protective tariff and Republicans advocating free trade. But in every case it will be found that their attitude is guided solely by the selfish interests of their districts or States.

This development of public opinion along sectional lines is significant. It shows the folly of trying to frame a tariff to suit everybody. The thing can not be done. At least, it can not be done by consulting the selfish interests of particular industries instead of the welfare of the consumers of the country, independent of their industrial affiliation.

The great underlying principle that all men are anxious to buy low and sell high seems to be forgotten. This principle governs the consumer as well as particular interests; but each individual interest believes that the principle should apply to it and that a tariff should be framed bringing it alone within its application and excluding every other interest. They utterly fail to keep in mind that all industries in this country are mutually related and that a tariff advantage to one is directly or indirectly reflected in the cost of production in every other industry, ending in the result that the consumers of the entire country must bear the ultimate burden.

If cost of production is enhanced through high tariff schedules, the eventual effect will be to exclude our producers from foreign markets.

An analysis of the present bill indicates that it will result in such an increase in the cost of production that it will be impossible for our producers to gain entrance into foreign markets, unless they do what they have quite often done before, namely, after gouging the American public to the limit of endurance, then proceed to sell their surplus products to foreign countries at a price considerably lower than they were exacting in the home market.

The memory of man is not so frail as to soon forget the practices of a few years ago, before the Underwood tariff was enacted, when sewing machines, typewriters, tools of all kinds, and all kinds of hardware and implements were sold to the American public at top-notch prices and sold at a slight advance over cost in Europe, Asia, and South America.

Some of the speakers in this prolonged debate have attempted to ridicule the results of the Underwood tariff. They know, as we all know, that the high expectations which hailed its passage were not realized. It was argued and confidently hoped that the admission free of raw material would lower prices and that the "tariff for revenue only" would free us from the evils of monopoly to which a high protective tariff had so long subjected the country. We were surprised to find that the cost of living showed no signs of abatement. This situation was cunningly taken advantage of by a Republican publicity department, backed by the big interests of the country, to persuade the people that the Underwood tariff involved an economic error.

I confess that I have always been in doubt on that point myself. It has seemed to me that a "tariff for revenue only," as the term is usually employed, is just about as indefensible as a "tariff for protection." A tariff to raise a revenue upon importations of foreign products, unless confined to those products which we do not or can not produce, implies a contradiction. If the tariff rates are high, importations will naturally be restricted and revenue necessarily curtailed. If, on the other hand, the tariff rates are fixed low, the importations of foreign products would have to be so great to raise the necessary revenue that home industries might just as well go out of business.

A "tariff for protection" implies a similar contradiction. If the object of a protective tariff is to protect American industries, the tariff rate must be so high as practically to exclude foreign competition. If it attains this purpose and excludes importations of foreign products, it ceases to raise revenue.

To drag us out of this dilemma the theory has been devised that a protective tariff should only be imposed to such a degree as to counterbalance the difference in cost between domestic and foreign wages. This is not the simple proposition that it seems. In any event, it is quite evident that in the tariff bill now under consideration the committee, in framing it, has been more concerned to favor industrial interests than it has been to carefully analyze wage differences.

The American producers have not been distinguished for strict candor. They have appealed for duties higher than are necessary to equalize the difference in foreign and domestic wages, hoping to avail themselves of the increased tariff barrier to profiteer and mulct the American people. Because of the difficulty of ascertaining the true facts, a distinctively protective tariff has invariably been an instrument of profiteering. An honest protective tariff seems to be impossible.

If we must have tariffs at all they should be employed for raising revenue, but the proper scope of a "tariff for revenue only" is to impose customs rates only on products with which there is no American competition. This plan clears the atmosphere of selfish interest. It imposes a tariff rate upon articles or materials universlly used, or so widely used, that practically every consumer in the country will, through such use, necessarily be compelled to bear his proportionate burden.

Fundamentally, the Underwood tariff was correct in theory in taking out of the hands of certain interests the instrument of a high protective tariff which enabled them to maintain their monopoly through governmental aid. It failed only in so far as it made concessions to the doctrine of "protection." The removal or the reduction of the tariff drove the profiteers into more difficult and more expensive expedients to maintain high prices and choke competition. Deprived of the protection of the tariff, they entered into secret trade agreements and combinations to limit production and imports and thus control their respective markets. They succeeded in doing by secret contract with big competitors and by intimidation of weaker rivals the very thing the awkward and inconvenient high tariff permitted them to do without the need of private understanding and arguments. Thus, financial power, ingeniously controlled, was enabled to defy the laws of trade. It is practically admitted to-day that the law of competition is a dead letter. That was the reason why the Underwood tariff, with its large free list and its low customs rates, was unable to break down the monopolies which maintained high prices.

The trouble with the gentlemen on the other side of the aisle—and I think that some of the gentlemen on this side of the aisle are suffering from the same complaint—is that they fail to recognize how utterly futile tariff schedules are whether for "revenue only" or for "protection" to meet the present economic exigencies.

The tariff is a splendid instrument in the hands of the Government to regulate trade and prevent monopoly. It should be used by the Government for that purpose, and not put into the hands of special interests as an instrument to gouge the consumers. I would put the fixing of tariff rates in the hands of a competent commission familiar with the economic situation both at home and abroad. I would have this commission empowered to keep track of all imports and all exports. If it were found that any industries were engaged in profiteering, I would instantly let down the bars and invite foreign competition. If any industry gouged the American public by selling in the American market at high prices and in the foreign markets at low prices, the commission ought to be empowered to forbid all exports of that particular product until its price was at least made equal to that for which it was selling in foreign markets.

It will perhaps be many years before such a plan is put into operation. Old idols must be thrown down before new creeds can take their places. Men cling persistently to old theories, and it is hopeless to expect that they are going to abandon them in the present generation. We have been tinkering with the tariff since the beginning of our history as a Nation, and I presume we must record one more failure in the way of tariff legislation before we will be willing to take a new point of view. No tariff bill has ever been a success and none ever will. Ten years from to-day the Fordney tariff bill will take its place in the rubbish heap along with the others.

OF

HON. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

OF TEXAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, July 19, 1921.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, under the rule granting me the privilege to extend my remarks, I desire to call attention to the following very able editorial appearing in the Texas Oil Ledger, published at Fort Worth, Tex., issue of Saturday, July 16, 1921:

PETROLEUM TARIFF ISSUE.

A tariff of $1 per barrel on Mexican oil importations will yield the United States Government a revenue sufficient to pay the annual interest charges on $2,500,000,000 outstanding Victory bonds.

The world's oil industry in all of its branches is strictly an American monopoly—owned, operated, and financed. The foreign oil markets were captured years ago by American distributors, whose vast fleets of tank steamers sell their products in every port which affords a profitable business outlet.

In approaching a correct consideration of the petroleum industry with relation to it bearing an import tariff revenue, it is essential at the outset to put foreign oil production on the same footing as the domestic supply, as then it is neither a tariff for revenue nor is it the protective system, but a tariff so maintained is in complete conformity with the basic principles of free trade.

The conditions surrounding any article of commerce, such as the sources of supply of the raw material, its manufacture and distribution, are the deciding factors themselves whether it comes under the classification of the protective system or free trade.

With mineral oil, as the example, the present world's consumption will be 700,000,000 barrels for 1921. The United States will produce this year 445,000,000 barrels and consume 565,000,000 barrels. Thus 120,000,000 barrels will have to be imported from the American-owned fields in Mexico to make up the deficiency of domestic use.

Of the world's oil production only 135,000,000 barrels is available to meet the needs of all foreign countries combined. A tariff on oil will in no sense work a displacement of the foreign supply nor be the means of strengthening the hold of the protective agency, nor affect the course of the industry, nor is it a compulsory act to face unfettered foreign competition. Foreign competition in oil is nil, as the whole of the imported article is brought into the United States by the same monopoly group of American oil corporations who also own the oil lands in Mexico and the refineries here. The absence of a tariff merely strengthens the hand and power of the monopoly.

The vast mass of manufactured petroleum by-products, comprising hundreds of items of commerce utilized by the world, are likewise made up from the raw material in the great oil refining plants of the United States, as no other nation has as yet developed oil manufacturing plants which may be called competitive for the cogent reason that no European country is a large producer of mineral oil.

As regards the surplus of our manufactured oil by-products we have the whole world for our markets, as the United States can produce them more cheaply than any other nation, and if export duties were added the foreign countries will continue to import them from us with export duty or without it.

Viewing the schedule of petroleum tariff wise, it is truly an American industry which stands wholly apart from every other, as behind it are enormous supplies of available corporate capital which have been accumulated in the shape of tremendous profits year by year and all from very small original investments. The oil business is completely American in so far as domination over it goes, and the relation it bears to the rest of the world is analogous to the diamond industry.

Great Britain controls the diamond fields of South Africa, which country has abundant supplies of cheap labor for working the mines that are backed by unlimited capital. The only other known source of diamonds is Brazil, where labor is expensive, the cost of operation and production high, and the fields uncertain in output. If the conditions coupled with the industry in the two countries were reversed, England would immediately adopt a tariff to protect its market position; still diamonds bear a heavy import duty, which come into the United States without a word of protest on the so-called "displacement of foreign supply."

Mexican oil in its relation to the tariff question occupies a unique position apart from all other basic commodities, and by allowing it to remain on the free list merely strengthens the power of the existing Standard Oil monopoly. On the other hand, within the United States we have large foreign interests who own and control quantities of oil lands and producing wells, which product is shipped out of the country to supply foreign world markets. Thus the most tenable plan for safeguarding the petroleum industry is to impose a tax on importations and a like tax on exportations, which would work both ways in protecting the small American producer and refiner against oil produced in Mexico and the domestic consumer against a shortage of oil, resulting from the native oil being shipped out of the country.

Though apparent desperate efforts are being made by the present Congress to meet the great present national expenses through a sound fiscal policy of economics, yet oil, which is the one great commodity that can carry an import tariff without harmful results anywhere along the line, still escapes serious consideration as a scheduled item for producing revenue in the tariff plans of the administration.

The business affairs of fully 95 per cent of the independent operators in the United States are passing through a dangerous crisis right now owing to the demoralization brought about by forcing oil prices downward, which has been partly accomplished by huge importations of Mexican oil since the first of the year.

The independent producers who have no foreign business relations are unanimous in favoring a tariff on imported oil, while on the other hand in the proposed tariff program the agents of the American vested interests in Mexican oil holdings are employing every means to becloud the issue before Congress by stirring up a revival of national feeling and prejudice with growing political complications and jealousies between the two countries.

In the proposed American tariff schedule on imported petroleum Mexico itself is the least concerned of all, as a United States tariff tends to open up other permanent foreign markets for her Americanowned oil without any loss of duty revenue to Mexico, and such enactment would merely reduce the exorbitant profits of the present concessionaires of this country.

The development of the petroleum industry in the United States has made some extraordinary advances in the last five years, and its rapid growth has developed many weaknesses which confessedly need immediate Government stabilizing influences unless the whole industry shall pass on into a single great monopoly for all future time.

The only opponents to a tariff policy on oil comes from the big eight Standard Oil controlled companies which are operating in Mexican fields. Mexican produced oil is the one strong weapon employed at will by the monopoly to crush the independent producer and refiner.

With this agency of the Standard Oil group restricted, the oil business would go immediately onto a sound and stable basis and the small plants of the country would enjoy an era of prosperity, with ample competition to protect the consumer from inflated prices for general oil products, as fuel, gasoline, kerosene, and lubricants.

OF

HON. EDGAR R. KIESS,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. KIESS. Mr. Speaker, we are all in agreement, I think, that the problem of providing at this time sufficient revenue to administer the affairs of the Government is the most difficult and perplexing that has ever come before the American Congress. The present economic situation is an endlessly complicated one. We can not treat it simply as a superficial aspect of government nor blind ourselves to its manifestations in the hope that somehow or other time will at last set all things right.

The question of public finance in a country such as ours is always a crucial question, but in the peculiar times through which we are passing it becomes increasingly serious. Out of the chaos and confusion of the World War we have come upon a situation which is testing the best thought of the practical business man as well as enlisting the interest of the expert student of economic theory and practice. The country has just passed through an era of wasteful and extravagant expenditures such as the world never witnessed before. Coincident with this era of extravagance there has been a lessening in the returns from some of the chief sources of revenue, especially excise taxes, in consequence of which loss the Government to maintain itself must either reduce its expenditures, assess new sources of revenue, or adjust the tariff schedules to provide additional revenue.

It has been estimated that something in excess of $4,000,000,000 will be required annually to meet the fiscal needs of the Government for the next two years. There will probably be additional interest charges on Government securities. We are further informed that the Government records show that for the year 1920 the Underwood tariff law produced revenues amounting approximately to $300,000,000. With this condition confronting us it is necessary for this Congress to examine into the financial situation of the country and to consider the revision of the tariff as one of the possible means of increasing the revenues of the Government.

I am fully aware that a tariff bill with its varied and various schedules is difficult to frame and may readily be made the subject of indiscriminate criticism. Still I believe that it is possible to frame such a measure and not violate the principles of equitable taxation. Keeping in mind the welfare of the people as a whole, it is possible to enact a tariff law which will provide adequate protection where protection is justified and produce revenue without unjustly taxing those who must depend upon raw materials imported from other countries.

Everybody recognizes the fact that conditions are abnormal and that it is difficult to standardize international relationships; yet, notwithstanding these difficulties, I believe it possible to establish a financial policy that will rest upon the basis of the greatest benefit to the largest number. I will not support any legislation that does not have in view the common welfare rather than the welfare of any special interests.

But while deeply concerned with the matter of securing adequate revenues to support the fiscal policy as indicated by President Harding, I am even more concerned with the question of economy and retrenchment in governmental expenses. Governments, both State and National, have indulged in a veritable orgy of expenditures. The immediate excuse for the multiplication of offices, abnormal increases in salaries, waste and extravagance in supervision was "the war." When hostilities ceased and the khaki-clad boys returned to their wonted pursuits, it was presumed that State and National Governments would return to normal functions. No one expected that this should be accomplished suddenly, but it was surely not too much to expect that in the course of nearly three years the budget for maintenance should be measurably reduced and excessive taxation lessened. While it is true reductions have been made in the number of employees, it is still evident that the Government is paying out tremendous subsidies in the form of salaries to persons in positions where they render little or no governmental service.

It is a commonly stated fact that democracies are expensive and wasteful; that the justification for that waste and extravagance is individual freedom; that though the cost may be abnormal, still the return comes in terms of larger intelligence. Even admitting this argument, it surely can not be proved to be necessary. To multiply offices in order that constituents may be appointed is violative of one of the essential principles for which a democracy stands. To appoint incompetents to office is to destroy the people's faith in those who are expected to aid in perpetuating free government. To increase the emoluments without getting a corresponding increase in service is a waste of the people's money.

I think we have all been encouraged by the attitude of President Harding in his appointment of Gen. Dawes, who will have charge of the organization of the Federal budget. Such an organization, though it may not be perfect in results, will, I am sure, eliminate much duplication and extravagance and go far toward promoting responsible government. Ordinarily government is an impersonal thing and constituencies so regard it, but the time is coming, and coming rapidly, when the people will demand more definite personal accounting of their representatives under whatever conditions elected or by whatever governmental agency employed.

There is a nation-wide call that comes to us in imperative terms to treat this whole financial question from the standpoint of a reduction and limitation in Government expenditures. As a Nation we are obligated for a debt of $30,000,000,000. In the face of this it would seem to be the sheerest folly not to consider first of all the policy of relentless retrenching expenditures and administering the necessary activities of the Government upon the basis of the strictest economy. When that is done, the taxpayer will not be unwilling to bear his share of governmental housekeeping.

I am unwilling to add to the burdens of taxation that now oppress the people. I shall lend every aid I can toward lessening governmental expenses and by that process reduce the amount of revenue needed to as low a point as is possible.

OF

HON. SIMEON D. FESS,

OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, when the item of protection of hides was before the committee I did not hesitate to support it. I am in favor of stimulating the growing of live stock, and hides are an important item to the farmer.

But it is totally inconsistent to protect, attempt to stimulate by the protective duty on hides, and then throw wide open our leather market to the foreign producer of leather by making it free of duty. The difference only between hides and leather is that the latter are tanned hides. The American tanner is the market for American hides. If we permit the importer of leather to prefer foreign leather to American by giving him the advantage of the cheaper labor in Europe, the American tanner can not compete with his foreign competitor, and will cease to be a purchaser of the American hides. In other words the action of the committee in placing leather on the free list destroys the only market the farmer has for his hides. We, therefore, do not help the farmer by the duty for which I voted, but we injure him by destroying his only market. I am, therefore, compelled to withhold my vote for his protection, which has been nullified by free leather.

Our Democratic free traders never lose a chance to lecture Republican protectionists upon what they charge as inconsistency in voting a duty on hides and refusing it on oil. Most of them are not sincere, but are now in the business of making political capital for future campaign of which they are in great need.

The honest free trader, like COCKRAN, of New York, who openly takes the consistent and real Democratic view of tariff for revenue only, and therefore demands tariff duties on all imports, including coffee, tea, and such other goods which we can not produce and must therefore import—these men know the protection view and recognize the basis of argument which would place a duty on hides and at the same time deny it on oil; but they deny the soundness of the view.

Primarily the ground for the protection argument is to stimulate production of the article that can be made in America, that the Nation need not depend upon a foreign producer of that article. This would invest American capital here at home. It would employ American labor here at home. It would also pay wages that would maintain our own standards of living here at home. In many cases quantity production will reach such a stage that its price can be reduced, so that while it pays the higher wage the cost to the consumer is lower than the prior foreign price. This was the case in the manufacture of steel rails and other steel products. It is especially true in tin. It will be demonstrated in the protection of dyes. There is no question that under proper stimulation and encouragement it will become true in sugar. The time will come, if the sugar producer will be given a chance, that we will produce not only all the sugar we need but we will, as in the case of tin plate, become an exporter of sugar.

In the case of live stock and the production of wool and hides, we have the capacity and natural resource to become self-sustaining. Since wool was placed on the free list in 1913 we have had a decline in sheep raising of over 1,000,000 head per year. The time was when every farm had its flock of sheep. This practice is possible to-day, and should be encouraged. We could thus not only supply our needs in wool and woolens, but we could increase the mutton and lamb production and reduce the cost of meat supply to the consumer to such a degree as, while we made a market for the farmer, we also would bring the price of meat within reach of the consumer.

The same thing is possible in hides if we would protect him from his foreign leather producer. This item of live-stock production is very important to the farmer who feeds the cattle. It amounts to but very little to the boot and shoe manufacturer in comparison.

In the face of the meat situation in our own country, our immediate duty is to encourage live-stock production. To the cattle grower the hide is no more the raw material than is the steer. Its sale at a fair price is essential. It becomes one of the chief items of cattle raising, especially to the farmer who raises his cattle for immediate consumption. The time was when every farm supported cattle, more or less. It could be done now. Such a policy could supply our needs not only with meats for food but with hides for tanning to supply our wants in footwear.

Whether we will do this or not is for us to determine. It can be done. A duty on hides for the purpose of stimulating live-stock production is sound as a protection argument. But we can not put a duty on hides and then expose the producer to free leather. The usual claptrap objection offered by the free trader that it creates monopolies is too puerile to demand comment. There is no such thing as a monopoly on cattle and sheep raising when every farm in America could do it than there is in wheat, oats, or corn raising.

The same argument will not hold in the production of oil. Here is a product that is limited, and we already have definite information that its supply will be exhausted in a not distant day. Our entire industrial organization has been built upon oil, a fuel or motor power. Already we are admonished to conserve our own supply against waste. In the face of these facts well known to all the world, all nations are in a scramble to seize the known and available oil supplies. England is active not only in our own areas here within continental United States but in Mexico, South and Central America, and the Old World. She has already control of the Persian output, much of certain portions of former Russian fields, and is just now in Mesopotamia, where our own country is demanding the rights already accorded us by concessions all but completed back in 1909–1911. Our Nation is put to its best test to prevent being shut out from rights in these undeveloped oil properties, where our capital has been solicited by the officials of the countries where the undeveloped fields are found. We already have great interests in the Mexican fields. It is said over 50 per cent of those fields are controlled by our nationals.

It is admitted upon all hands that we can not produce to satisfy our needs. The time is already here when our own supply falls short. No amount of duty can stimulate this production greatly. That basis of the protection policy is wanting, is it not, in hides, coal, and meat production? We are now looking to outside supplies. The proposed duties are to discourage these imports which the Nation is interested in developing for her own needs; they are not in the hope of increasing American production; that appears impossible from physical conditions.

The same is true on the lumber situation. No amount of tariff duty is likely to so stimulate reforestation as to meet our needs. Our present and immediate future demands look to necessary importation. That fundamental basis of protection is therefore wanting in the lumber needs of the country.

There is one argument for duties on these items: The continuance of the oil industry here, even after it has reached the point of little or no profit, in order to continue the employment of labor and capital to that extent. While this argument has some force, it is not convincing at the very moment, when to do so would necessitate a duty to keep out oil from countries where American capital is already invested to supply what we must have and can not get within our own borders.

There is no inconsistency in voting for a duty on hides, wool, and dyes and against a duty on oil and lumber. Such a vote is in accordance with the principles of the protection policy.

OF

HON. CHARLES L. UNDERHILL,

OF MASSACHUSETTS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, certain newspapers and correspondents are bewailing the alleged fact that the Republican Congress is not making headway with its legislative program and that Congress is devoid of leadership. Curiously enough some of these journals instead of urging that our legislative bodies bestir themselves in organization and act are lamenting the fact that the President does not proceed to declare himself a czar and run things with a high hand, all of which proves the truth of the old adage that, "None are so blind as those who will not see."

It also raises a query as to whether editorial writers and correspondents of some of our metropolitan journals are believers in a republican form of government or advocates of autocracy. May I refer them to the last election.

The fact is, that the present Congress has made—at least, the House has—a record for efficiency, for organization, and for the dispatch of business. The principal indictment seems to be that it has not, in less than three months, completed the biggest legislative task in the world—the revision of the American tariff—that is, has not completed the settlement of the most difficult problem in America—the revision of the war taxes.

It appears now that it would have been better had Congress taken up the matter of tax revision in advance of tariff legislation. The only reason why Congress did not do so was because the country demanded emphatically that the tariff be taken up first. There was quite a general sentiment among the leaders, particularly in the House, in favor of first amending the tax laws and reducing the tax burdens, and this done take up at once the question of permanent tariff legislation. This was advocated very earnestly by Mr. MONDELL, floor leader of the House, in an interview which was widely quoted. But the country would not have it that way.

The Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee were deluged with demands that the tariff be considered first. From no part of the country was that demand more insistent than New England, New York, and Pennsylvania.

The House leadership and the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee proceeded to do the thing which the public was demanding—consider the tariff first. A more honest and valid criticism would be that they did not follow their own judgment, based upon long experience, rather than the express desire of the uninformed public. The public imagined a tariff bill could be prepared and passed in a fortnight. It has required longer than most people anticipated, but if anyone would take the trouble to run through the 346 pages of the bill they will readily understand why it took over two and one-half months to prepare that bill. The Ways and Means Committee worked constantly, early and late, Sundays and holidays. The wonder is not that it took so long but that the work was done in the time which has elapsed. The committee room is near my office and I am acquainted with most of the members. I have daily found them coatless and collarless, and can testify to the sacrifice they have made in their devotion to duty.

The House has taken the tariff bill up for consideration. It will take some time—possibly two or three weeks—to dispose of it, after which, while the Senate is considering the measure, the Ways and Means Committee will consider the question of tax revision.

While it has taken longer than was anticipated to prepare the tariff bill, Congress has by no means been idle, and that is particularly true of the House. By reference to the RECORD I find that heretofore Congress has frequently stood in recess while tariff bills were being prepared. That was the case during the preparation of the Underwood tariff bill, but this Congress has worked constantly while its Ways and Means Committee has been preparing this bill, and it may be truthfully said—again referring to the RECORD—that no Congress has ever considered more carefully and thoroughly a greater volume of important legislation in the same period of time.

Congress had before it two appropriation bills that failed of passage in the former Congress, the Army and naval appropriations. There was considerable difference of opinion between the two Houses in regard to these bills. That is not extraordinary or especially regrettable. It served to bring out differing views and emphasized the thoroughness with which the Congress is considering questions before it. The Army bill became a law with a reduction of something like $20,000,000 below the amount carried in the bill as it passed both Houses at the close of the last session of Congress. The naval bill becomes a law carrying a little more than the House agreed to in the last Congress and about $85,000,000 less than the Senate was disposed to give. The Army bill seems to have been cut pretty close, considering the present size of the enlisted personnel. The naval bill, while not especially liberal, is probably adequate to maintain the Navy in first-class fighting condition. But in addition to this let me give a partial list of important bills which have become laws.

The budget, which is considered generally to be as important a piece of legislation as has been passed in 50 years. The peace resolution, glory be! The emergency tariff bill, with its anti-dumping provisions. The immigration bill, providing for the restriction of immigration. The amendment to the transportation act, allowing necessary consolidation of telephone companies. The amendment to the Federal reserve act, essential to the creation of corporations engaged in export trade. The bill placing in the hands of the President authority to control the laying of submarine cables. The packers' bill, passed by both Houses, now in conference. The good roads bill, containing essential amendments to the good roads act, including the provision with regard to maintenance suggested in the President's message, is now before the Senate and will soon be sent to conference. The so-called Hawaiian act has passed both Houses and will be sent to conference and become a law very soon.

In addition to these the House has passed the grain futures trading act; an act to encourage trade with China; and an act creating the veterans' bureau and consolidating with the Bureau of War Risk Insurance the various activities on behalf of ex-service men; an act authorizing seven Western States to enter into an agreement with regard to the distribution of the waters of the Colorado River; the amendment to the Federal prohibition enforcement act, necessitated by Attorney General Palmer's celebrated beer decision; an act equalizing the pay of employees in the Postal Service; and a number of other important pieces of legislation.

I have voted for some of these bills and against some of them, regardless of party affiliations, and, though all have not had my approval, it does not prove that I am right or wrong, but rather that this is a representative Government and the majority rule.

I have referred only to the faithful work of the Ways and Means Committee, but I would not be fair if I did not include practically all of the major and many of the minor committees of the House. Committee work is drab, tiresome, and prosaic, but it is very essential to good legislation. The public and the press little realize the study, research, patience, and sacrifices of earnest and efficient committee work and its relation to the more brilliant and sensational enactment of laws upon this floor. The committees have held hearings on bills now upon the calendar and others not yet reported, which will ultimately become law; and their work and time have not been and will not be wasted.

If there is a better record of activity than this, I do not know where it can be found. It is true that the two important measures—tariff and revenue bills—have not as yet become laws, but there has been no delay. And in the meantime the Congress has been working earnestly and faithfully, and during the last six weeks in very hot and trying weather. So far as the House is concerned, it has appreciably enhanced its prestige during this session of Congress by good teamwork under intelligent leadership.

Leadership in any organization is a difficult and too often thankless task. I have had experience in this line and know whereof I speak. The leadership on both sides of this House leaves nothing to be desired. Under different circumstances and in a different environment I might trustingly take the hand of Democratic leadership in mine, confident that I would be properly led into the paths of righteousness and peace. On this side I have followed with particular interest the activities of the Republican leader. Almost a quarter of a century—a period of 24 years—he has devoted his best thought, effort, and years of his life to a study of great public questions and of the rules and procedure of Congress. The best leadership is that which does not drive but seeks to lead. The presence of almost 100 new Members has made this task particularly difficult.

As one of the new Members with perhaps an exaggerated idea of my own experience and importance, I have been impressed by the charm of manner, human understanding, and the intelligent leadership of the gentleman from Wyoming, who has been ably assisted by the steering committee and the Committee on Rules. I am perfectly willing to follow such advisers, retaining at all times the privilege to think for myself and act according to my best judgment; and I do not believe that this privilege would be denied a single Member or abridged in the slightest degree by any leader on either side of the House.

I am sure every member of the Ways and Means Committee and every leader in the House would prefer to spend the hot, muggy, summer days and nights elsewhere than in Washington, but they have stuck to the job, as their clothes have stuck to them, and done and will do everything possible to expedite legislation.

The tariff bill may not suit you. I can not say I am tickled with it myself. But as this is a big country, this is a big job, and "safety first" in relation to protection and revenue is of greater importance than "full speed ahead."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. CLARENCE F. LEA,

OF CALIFORNIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, July 19, 1921.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I intend to vote for the tariff bill now before the House for these reasons:

First. The financial condition of the Treasury makes it advisable that a larger volume of revenue be collected from imports. In 1920 we exported $75 per capita, and out of importations, amounting to $49.42 per capita, we collected an import duty of $3.12. A greater sum should be collected.

Second. I also believe some schedules in the present tariff law are lower than are necessary to properly equalize domestic and foreign competition and should therefore be raised.

Third. Changed conditions since the last tariff law was written justify a tariff revision.

Fourth. The question presented in voting upon this measure is a choice between the pending bill and the existing tariff law. As between the two choices presented, I have no doubt that in voting for this bill I will reflect the prevailing views of the people who selected me to represent them.

I will not pretend to indorse every phase of this bill. I have some misgivings that it may place more restraints upon our commerce than I prefer, but as between these two choices I give it my vote.

PRINCIPLES OF TARIFF LEGISLATION.

The statement of the abstract theory on which tariff schedules should be written is easier than the practical application of such a theory. I believe that in writing a tariff we should consider its revenue-producing effect and also its effect upon foreign competition with American products. Undoubtedly some articles commonly produced in America to our economic advantage can be produced cheaper abroad. In writing a tariff on imports of such articles I would consider not only the revenue that might be collected from such imports but also the difference in the cost of foreign and domestic production, with a view of preserving competitive industry and the preservation of our own industry. If in any such case we permit the foreign products to supplant the American industry, we would thereby create a foreign monopoly of the American market. Therefore rates affecting our substantial and legitimate industries which can be carried on to our own economic advantage should be placed low enough to collect revenue, yet high enough to prevent destructive competition. In other words, as to our legitimate industries, I believe in rates to equalize the difference of cost in domestic and foreign production within the limits of a competitive tariff.

I am opposed to prohibitive tariffs. They can be sustained on neither economic nor moral grounds. They tend to promote monopolies, retard efficient production, and needlessly prevent a wholesome and proper exchange of products between nations.

A tariff within the limits of competition, if collected, goes into the Treasury of the United States. It offers no subsidy of profit. But a prohibitive tariff, if the article affected is not subject to bona fide competition in the American market, takes money from the pocket of the consumer and places it in the hands of the beneficiary of the tariff without enriching the Treasury of the United States.

As a general rule, a tariff imposed upon articles in which our country is primarily an exporter is of no advantage to the producer and has no logical reason for existence. To the extent that such tariffs interfere with the normal course of trade between nations, they are economically unsound and injurious to the extent that they interfere with American handling and consequent profits in international trade.

I believe in a tariff for revenue. I do not believe in a tariff for revenue only. The last Democratic platform affirmed its belief in "the traditional policy of the Democratic Party in favor of a tariff for revenue only." If this declaration meant simply approval of revenue-producing tariffs and opposition to prohibitive tariffs, I could agree with it. I can not agree with its literal meaning. This is a declaration of the purpose for which a tariff should be levied. It is a denial of the consideration of any other purpose in levying a tariff than its revenue-producing quality. Logically the Democratic Party can not afford to declare for a tariff for revenue only until it is willing to declare candidly that it will give no consideration to the effect of the rate in question upon the domestic industry. The Democratic Party is not now and never has been willing to so declare.

All will admit that one of the most potent results of tariff schedules is their effect upon competition as to the articles affected in the domestic market. It is politically, logically, and economically impossible to intelligently write tariff schedules without considering their practical effect as to competition and in equalizing domestic and foreign production costs.

A tariff for revenue only may be the tradition, but it is not the history of the Democratic Party. The Democratic Party has been responsible for two tariff laws during the last 50 years. One was the act of 1894 under the Cleveland administration and the other the Underwood Act of 1913.

The act of 1894 was mutilated in the Senate, was roundly denounced by Grover Cleveland on the ground that it was not a faithful compliance with party promises, and was by him reluctantly permitted to become a law without his signature. It was not a heavy revenue producer. It levied no revenue in the one notable exception of wool, which, in my judgment, was a mistake, and in the main was a high protective tariff measure. Under that act an average ad valorem rate of duty on the dutiable goods admitted amounted to 41.29 per cent. The average rate of duty on both free and dutiable imports under that act was 21 per cent, which was 1.91 per cent less than the McKinley Act which preceded it, and only 4.92 per cent less than the Dingley Act which followed it.

The Underwood law was specifically presented to the country as a competitive tariff. No one can claim that it was framed on the theory of a tariff for revenue only.

The protective tariff has, in fact, been recognized under all administrations since the first Congress. Industries are built up under that system. These industries are not entitled to subsidies or to prohibitive tariffs, but they are entitled to consideration in fixing schedules, so that wherever such an industry can be carried on to our economic advantage its products should be given a competitive rate. I believe this is a just and practical necessity in the adjustment of tariff schedules, and therefore it is a mistake to say that tariffs are to be for revenue only. As such a principle will never be adhered to in writing a tariff bill it should not, in my judgment, be asserted in a political platform.

In suggesting opposition to the platform of the Democratic Party, I have no intention to suggest that it should surrender its position as a moderate tariff party. In my judgment, it is unfortunate that the tariff is a political question. If the tariff is to continue to be a question in politics, it would be unfortunate for the country if the two great parties should cease to oppose ideas and become bidders for the same support and cease to restrain the excesses of each other. Excessive tariffs are fruitful in financial favors. There may also be beneficiaries of low tariffs. This situation tends to make political success depend upon political favors, and business success depend upon political support. The motive is selfish and debilitating to the best interest of our political affairs.

TARIFF COMMISSION.

Expert and unbiased information is the first requisite in writing a tariff bill. Some years ago we created the Tariff Commission for the purpose of making such information available for the use of Congress and the country in connection with tariff legislation. It is conceded that the commission has performed splendid service, but has been handicapped in gathering and presenting information for this bill by lack of funds with which to carry on its work during recent years. It has been mistaken economy that has failed to provide amply for the research work of the Tariff Commission. The procuring of information as to the cost of production of countless articles in foreign countries, as well as the cost of American production, with much related data that is necessary to the effective work of the Tariff Commission is so great and the work so important to the revenue of the Government, to the development of our foreign trade, and to the prosperity of the country that every reasonable liberality should be indulged in aid of its effective work.

The usefulness of the Tariff Commission should be encouraged by giving its members a length of term and a compensation commensurate with the great services they can perform. Professional politicians and partisans should never be appointed to the Tariff Commission. An appointee may have political convictions or prejudices, but if he is a man really worth while and a student of economic conditions he would in a short time, in the practical appreciation of his work and its responsibilities, largely divest himself of his preconceptions and be able to perform an unbiased and useful service.

A strong Tariff Commission, amply supported, can perform its function of giving Congress and the country unbiased and authoritative information on the many details of tariff subjects. If the Tariff Commission, by its ability and disinterested motives, can gain the confidence of the country, it will do much to place the tariff legislation in the future on a business basis and at the same time tend to free the tariff question from the bane of politics.

A BUSINESS QUESTION.

The tariff in politics invites industries concerned to be interested primarily in the political affairs of the country from the standpoint of tariff alone. It forms a basis for political and business alliances, pro and con, upon the question. It largely occupies the attention of the country upon fictitious issues and stands in the way of the enlightened progress of the country in meeting and disposing of perhaps greater questions that develop from time to time. It creates unnatural alignments on other issues. It prevents the intelligent and businesslike disposal of tariff questions themselves. As soon as a question becomes one of politics it is misrepresented and misunderstood. Proponents imagine, exaggerate, and magnify the benefits of the remedies they propose. Opponents imagine, exaggerate, and magnify the evils of such remedies. Stamped with party approval or disapproval, an issue is beyond the possibility of painstaking, intelligent investigation in the minds of a large portion of our people.

The tariff question is a business question and should be treated as such. It is most unfortunate for our country that it is the football of politics. Practically every advanced nation on the earth except the United States has discarded the tariff as a matter of party division. Every legitimate business, industrial, and political reason is against the consideration of the tariff as a political question. An industry that deserves a tariff should be entitled to it, regardless of what party is in power. Such an industry should be entitled to such tariff without obligating itself to any candidate or political party. Any industry or combination of influences that seek undeserved tariffs should be unable to obligate parties or candidates to their program.

A business dependent on particular legislation is a hothouse plant. It operates under ordinary business hazards and the more uncertain hazard of legislation. It is a bad policy that ties it to the fate of parties and politicians. The politician and his platform frequently survive or perish together.

TARIFF HISTORY.

In my study of the tariff question I have prepared a table, which is in effect a statistical history of the tariff acts of the last 50 years. I have found it interesting and instructive and hope others may find it so. Therefore I insert it in the RECORD at this point:

Statistical history of principal tariff acts from 1870 to 1920.

Act.	Average annual imports.	Average per cent free.	Average ad valorem rate of duty dutiable.	Average ad valorem free and dutiable.	Average annual imports per capita.	Average annual balance of trade.	Average annual volume of trade.	Average annual duties.

NOTE.—Computations based on fiscal years.

The principal tariff acts of the last 50 years have been enacted as follows:

July 14, 1870; June 6, 1872; March 3, 1883; October 1, 1890 (McKinley Act); August 27, 1894 (Wilson Act); July 24, 1897 (Dingley Act); August 5, 1909 (Payne Act); and October 3, 1913 (Underwood Act).

The first column of the above table designates the principal tariff acts of the last 50 years, according to the year of their enactment, respectively. On each line, under an appropriate heading, is the average annual amount or percentage indicated for the total years covered by said act.

ARTICLES DUTY FREE.

The third column of the above table shows the average per cent of imports admitted free of duty under the various tariff acts. The percentage of articles admitted free increased from 8.19 per cent of all imports under the act of 1870 to an average of 67.17 per cent under the Underwood Act. Of this increase of 59 per cent of articles admitted free since 1870, noticeable increases in the free list of various tariff bills were as follows: Over 21 per cent under the act of 1872, over 19 per cent under the McKinley bill of 1890, and 15 per cent under the Underwood bill of 1913.

AD VALOREM RATES.

Column 4 shows the average ad valorem rates on the dutiable imports to have ranged between 40 and 49 per cent under all acts, except the Underwood Act, in which the ad valorem rate has been 29.03 per cent. The average ad valorem rate on free and dutiable imports shown in column 5, beginning with over 39 per cent in 1870, ranged downward to an avefage of 9.14 per cent under the Underwood bill. The noticeable decreases in the rates under this column were as follows: About 10 per cent by the act of 1872, over 7 per cent by the act of 1890, over 6 per cent by the act of 1909, and over 10 per cent by the act of 1913.

IMPORTS PER CAPITA.

The sixth column shows the average imports per capita under the various bills. The least imports were under the act of 1894, during the Cleveland administration. The noticeable increases were about $5 per capita under the act of 1909 and about $10 per capita under the act of 1913. The lowest imports per capita of any one year during the last 50 years was $8.05, under the first year of the Dingley bill. The greatest imports per capita, of $49.42, were in the year 1920. The highest per capita imports prior to the Underwood bill during the period covered was $17.94, under the last year of the Payne law.

BALANCE OF TRADE.

Column 7 shows the average balance of trade that resulted under these acts. From an adverse balance of over $129,000,000 under the act of 1870, each succeeding act resulted in a favorable balance, until the maximum average balance of over $2,473,000,000 was reached under the Underwood Act. This favorable balance, stimulated by war conditions, has equaled about $25 per capita for each person in the United States.

Seven of the 50 years included in the above table produced unfavorable balances of trade, as follows: Each of the two years of the act of 1870, 1871, and 1872; under the act of 1872, 1873 and 1875; under the act of 1883, 1888 and 1889; under the McKinley Act of 1890, in 1893.

During 11 fiscal years of the 50 covered by this table our annual balance of trade dropped over $100,000,000. During 16 years of that period there were increases of over $100,000,000. The decreases occurred under each of these acts, and such increases occurred under each of the above acts, except the act of 1883, under which our balances of trade were uniformly low.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, following the enactment of the Underwood Act on the 3d of the preceding October, the balance of trade in our favor was over $470,000,000. This balance was $8,000,000 less than the average balance under the Payne law and was over $182,000,000 less than the balance of the preceding year, and represented increased imports amounting to about $81,000,000 and decreased exports amounting to about $101,000,000. The balance of trade under the last year of the Payne bill was $102,000,000 greater than any former balance of trade in the history of the country up to that time.

"FREE TRADE" ACTS.

The above table is of particular interest in reference to the act of August 27, 1894, under the Cleveland administration. A typical reference to this act for political purposes was made on the floor of the House last Friday, when a Member declared it was a "free trade measure." Referring to its operation, the Member declared, "Our export trade was destroyed. Imports from every country on the face of the earth poured into our ports, and the United States was flooded with goods and products of every description."

The gentleman then went on to refer to the bankruptcy and poverty that followed the enactment of this "free trade measure." The gentleman ignored the fact that the business depression of the nineties reached its peak in 1893, more than a year before the Wilson Act was enacted, and when the highest tariff of the last 50 years was in force. There is no question about having hard times in the nineties, and it is equally certain that those hard times were not primarily caused by either the McKinley Act or the Wilson Act.

A reference to the above table will show there were less average imports per capita under the act of 1894 than under any other tariff bill during the 50-year period covered. The average yearly imports under that act were over $100,000,000 less than the McKinley bill, which preceded it, and more than $200,000,000 per year less than under the Dingley bill, which followed it. There were 3.41 per cent more free imports entering the United States under the McKinley bill than under the Wilson Act. The average rate of duty on dutiable goods was over 41 per cent. The average duty on both free and dutiable imports was 21 per cent, which was only 1.91 per cent less than under the McKinley bill. Imports under the act of 1894 averaged $1.06 per capita less than under the McKinley bill and $1.14 less per capita than under the Dingley bill.

The balance of trade under the first year of the Wilson Act was over $75,000,000; over $102,000,000 the second year; and over $286,000,000 the last year of the Wilson Act. This last balance of trade was the greatest in the history of our country up to that time. It was followed by a still greater increased balance under the upward trend of business during the first year of the Dingley Act.

So the claim that the act of 1894 was a "free-trade measure" and that our markets were surrendered to the foreigner is a fiction of American politics. The fact that a Member of Congress would make such an assertion after the public records of the Government established its error 24 years ago simply illustrates the perversion of politics that too frequently characterizes public affairs of America. When a Member of Congress is a vehicle of such misinformation how great is the difficulty of the average citizen in comprehending and performing the duties of a citizen.

From the facts of our tariff history, at least, some conclusions can be safely drawn. Neither a high nor a low tariff is a guaranty of success. Prosperity and depression have prevailed under each.

The Tariff Commission is an effective aid to tariff legislation.

America must eventually follow the lead of enlightened nations and eliminate the tariff as a party question, free business from politics, and make the tariff a business question.

HON. WILLIAM WILLIAMSON,

OF SOUTH DAKOTA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, in the brief time that is allotted to me, I desire to discuss the expenditures of the Government and make some observations with reference to some of the means proposed for raising the necessary revenue.

EXPENDITURES AND TAXATION.

According to the figures submitted by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in April to Chairman FORDNEY, of the Ways and Means Committee, the total disbursements of the Government for the year 1922 will total $4,565,877,033. The total of State, municipal, and school taxes is not less than $3,335,000,000, making a staggering total of over $8,000,000,000, which the American people will have to raise in the form of taxation during the next fiscal year. While Congress has nothing to do with State, municipal, and school taxes, we should not be unmindful of them in a discussion of Government expenditures and revenues. Figuring our population at 106,000,000, this means a tax of $75 for every man, woman, and child in the Nation.

The total earnings and gains of the American people for 1922, based upon the most dependable figures of the past, will probably not exceed $50,000,000,000. Of this sum probably less than $5,000,000,000 is actually saved and added to the capital of the country. This means, Mr. Speaker, that nearly one-sixth of the total earnings of the people will be taken by various Government agencies. That presents a situation such as has never confronted the people of this country in its entire history. It is no wonder that rumblings of dissatisfaction are rolling in upon us daily, and unless there is a vast reduction in expenditure, National, State, and municipal, no one can predict the political upheavals that may take place. Already recalls are in progress in at least one State and threatened in many counties and municipalities in an effort to retire public officials who have been too free with the public moneys. The people are in no mood for any new ventures and are demanding that no money be voted out of the public treasuries except for those things which are absolutely essential to keep the Government and its subdivisions functioning as healthy business institutions. It is no longer a question of how many new enterprises and activities should be undertaken, but a question of finishing present undertakings at a minimum of cost.

A tax which takes one-sixth of all the people's earnings out of which they must live is confiscatory in character when applied to all of the people, and weighs heavily upon the poor and moderately well-to-do who in one way and another pay more than their proportionate share. Whenever a government becomes so top-heavy from the burdens it imposes that a large proportion of the people begin to question whether its benefits are not overbalanced by the taxes and impositions it levies, its position becomes perilous. It is high time that we act the part of statesmen and conservators of the public interest.

Had war prices and conditions continued people would have been less disposed to hold us to strict account as stewards of their affairs, but when it is remembered that the total assets of the Nation—the accumulated savings of a century—shrunk from an estimated value on January 1, 1920, of $360,000,000,000 to $260,000,000,000 on January 1, 1921, it is small wonder that they are demanding the strictest economy. Upon every hand we find the pamphleteers discussing methods of raising the necessary revenue, always with a view to shifting it from their own shoulders. They would better employ their talents by suggesting workable economies.

But with the utmost economy large sums must be raised for current expenses, interest on the public debt, and for the numerous war hang overs. How to raise the vast aggregate with the least inconvenience and disturbance to the economic conditions of the country is the problem.

The special committee on taxation of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States says:

> After very careful consideration the committee has reached the conclusion that it is most consistent with the principle of correct taxation to raise the additional revenue at the point where it will cause the smallest interference with the proper conduct of business and will have the least influence upon prices which customers pay. (Report Dec. 17, 1920.)

It has become an axiom that taxes in the main should be paid by those best able to pay. The measure of ability to pay for the support of the Government is net income, and the size of that measure should be progressively larger as the net income increases. Another reason why this tax is fundamentally correct is because it is the most difficult to pass on to some one else.

SALES AND TURNOVER TAX.

Yet in spite of this fundamental principle, able men in both the Senate and House have earnestly contended that taxes derived from the higher brackets of net income must be radically reduced and that the excess-profits tax on corporate income must be entirely abolished. To make good the resulting loss in revenue, these advocates have proposed in lieu thereof a universal sale or turnover tax. In other words, an attempt is to be made to take it from the shoulders of those who can bear it with ease and put it upon those to whom it will come as a crushing burden.

All students of the question agree that a sales tax will in every case be paid by the ultimate consumer. In place of being paid out of affluence and plenty, it will come out of the living wage. Not even the poorest can escape, for all must eat, wear clothes, provide shelter, or die. In proportion to what they earn, the poor would have to pay a hundredfold more than the rich, reversing the accepted maxim that should be the groundwork of all taxation. It seems to me that nothing but the gravest emergency could justify such a tax. Even then, it should be used as an additional tax and not as a substitute for a tax on net income.

The sales tax favors the big operator, the chain stores, and the mail-order houses. It fosters monopoly, by relieving big business and falls with withering effect upon the small operator who is not able to transform the raw material into the finished product in his own plant, but who must of necessity take it through one or more intermediaries, often resulting in the tax being applied several times, not to mention its pyramiding tendency. We must depend upon the small operator for effective competition, and anything which will tend to put him out of business should be avoided. Objection has been raised to the excess-profits tax because of its uncertainty in yield of revenue, but gross sales fluctuate more widely than net income. If revenues have been uncertain under our income-tax laws, they will be more uncertain if the proposed change should be put into effect.

Out of 25,000,000 heads of families and single men and women without dependents in the United States, income-tax returns are filed by less than 5,000,000. In other words, four-fifths of heads of families and single persons have less than $2,000 and $1,000 income, respectively. Senator SMOOT says the sales tax would raise $1,500,000,000, which would be paid pro rata per consumption. That means that of the 25,000,000 heads of families and single persons without dependents, the 20,000,000 which are below the $2,000 or $1,000 income class would pay at least two-thirds of the tax, while the richer would pay only one-third.

Thomas W. Lamont, in an article in the March number of Harper's Magazine, which was reprinted and sent to every Member of Congress, complains that for the year 1917, 2 per cent of those making tax returns paid 73½ per cent of the income taxes, while 98 per cent paid only 26½ per cent, but according to his own figures, the income of the 98 per cent supported at least 8,000,000 persons at an annual cost of not less than $4,000,000,000, while the other 2 per cent supported only 131,000, which, upon the same basis of computation, cost only $6,550,000. This puts a different face upon his figures.

He also complains because in that year those having incomes ranging from $2,000 to $40,000 paid on an average only 2 per cent income tax, while those having incomes over $40,000 paid on an average 0.152 per cent, but a little computation shows us that the average income of those whose incomes ranged from $2,000 to $40,000 was only $5,000, while the average income of those who had incomes over $40,000 was $102,000, or over twenty times greater.

Will anyone contend this was an unjust proportion if ability to pay is to be taken as any criterion? Not only was the proportion taken by the Government in taxes not unjust, but much more could have been taken without in any way trenching upon their standards of living, while that taken from those having the smaller incomes in many cases came out of their living wage.

EXCISE TAXES.

Much as it may seem desirable to abolish excise taxes, and particularly those known as nuisance taxes, it is clear that these in the main will have to be retained. These taxes have been, and must continue to be, one of our most important sources of revenue. For the 12 months ending with October, 1920, these taxes produced an income of $1,466,000,000. Some of them, however, may well be discarded. Among these are taxes on nonalcoholic beverages, ice cream, and the like, which for the period just mentioned produced only $63,600,000 and which required a host of inspectors for checking and collecting. Indeed, the expense of collection is so great that little net revenue is realized for the Government. Excise taxes should be levied upon such articles only as are not of first necessity, but such as are largely used and so produced that the tax can be easily collected. To save expense in collection and annoyance to local dealers, it should be paid by the primary distributer or wholesaler and added as a separate item on the invoice sent to the retailer.

TRANSPORTATION TAX.

The transportation tax should be abolished, as it has been clearly demonstrated that it is a burden that the traffic should not be called upon to bear. While it is not paid by the transportation companies, it has hung like a millstone about the neck of the transportation business and helped make rates prohibitive for many of the products of primary production.

TAX-FREE SECURITIES.

I again desire to call to the attention of the House the menace of tax-free securities, National, State, and municipal. Any benefits which may accrue to the public in lower rates of interest is more than offset by the mischief caused by taking capital out of productive industry and in the opportunity they afford for the wealthy to escape all taxation. Not only this, but such exemption has encouraged governmental agencies to go into debt to an extent that threatens universal municipal bankruptcy and has resulted in untold extravagance and waste by these same agencies.

Everywhere taxation has increased by leaps and bounds. Complaint is universal, and yet people do not seem to grasp the underlying difficulty but are still continuing to vote bonds for purposes that could well be deferred. The bond indebtedness of the States and subdivisions has reached the appalling sum of $19,000,000,000, according to a recently published interview of Senator SUTHERLAND, while that of the Government is approximately $24,000,000,000.

The major portion of these vast sums are held by the rich. It is this that in large measure has curtailed credits for business and agriculture and greatly increased the burden of taxation for the ordinary man of the street.

EXCESS-PROFITS TAX.

It is conceded by all that some kind of a corporation tax must be retained in order to raise the necessary revenues. Corporations as creatures of the law occupy a privileged status and enjoy many advantages which make it peculiarly appropriate that they should share in carrying the common burdens of government. All of their agents are paid and many of their official heads enjoy princely salaries. Their net receipts are capital earnings derived largely because of their privileged status as legal entities; and as such should contribute in some measure to the maintenance of the Government. It has been proposed by eminent Members of this Congress to entirely eliminate the excess-profits tax and to substitute in lieu thereof an increased ordinary or so-called normal tax on all corporations. Mr. Speaker, I entertain serious doubts as to whether this would in any measure relieve business conditions, and it would contain a large element of injustice for the small and struggling corporations whose existence and prosperity should be encouraged as the most effective check to the monopolistic tendency and character of the large concerns.

Under the present law all corporations, so far as the excess-profits tax is concerned, enjoy an exemption of $3,000 plus an amount equal to 8 per cent of its invested capital for the taxable year. No other person or business entity in the Nation enjoys such a privilege, and surely it is sufficiently liberal not only to keep alive present invested capital but to encourage further investments in promising industries. A tax which does not effect a fair return on invested capital of a corporation does not affect the cost of production and can not legitimately enter into the cost of its products to the consumer. On the contrary, the assurance that all corporations would be allowed this standard of return on their invested capital should result in lowering the cost of living.

But having in mind the natural human tendency to shift burdens whenever possible, this tendency should and could be effectively checked by lowering the present normal tax on all corporations or, if necessary, by its abolition. This would free the smaller corporations and would certainly and effectively prevent any shifting of the excess-profits tax on the ultimate consumer.

Much as the excess-profits tax has been condemned, it is sound on principle, as it only affects earnings over and above very liberal exemptions. It has been repeatedly asserted, as coming from Government agencies, that the excess-profits tax has increased the cost of living 23 per cent, and our sales tax friends have asserted, with a persistence which would be admirable in a better cause, that at least 20 per cent of this increase could be saved by abandoning the excess-profits tax for the sales tax. The trouble with this statement is that it is not true, and no responsible Government agency will stand sponsor for any part of it.

The large concerns that have paid the bulk of the excess-profits tax have had to compete with the small concerns that paid little or none of it. The best evidence of the fact that the tax has not been shifted to any considerable extent is the desperate attempt made by big business to shift it onto the consumers in the form of a sales or turnover tax. Upon the one hand we are told that the rich are investing in tax-free securities to avoid paying the excess-profits tax and on the other that the tax is shifted onto the ultimate consumer. The mere statement of these two propositions in the same breath disproves the contention.

The high cost of living bears little or no relation to the imposition of the excess-profits tax. Prices continued to increase between 1915 and 1917 when there was no excess-profits tax, and this rise in prices continued in practically the same ratio for many months after the tax had been lowered. The rise in prices was due to causes quite apart from the tax.

That the excess-profits tax has discouraged business to any considerable extent seems to be entirely disproved by the fact that the records of the formation of new corporations of over $100,000 capital for the year 1918 shows an investment of $2,599,000,000; for 1919, $12,677,000,000; for 1920, $13,998,000,000. The income of corporations rose from $3,000,000,000 in 1909 to $9,000,000,000 in 1919. The present stagnation in business is not due to the excess-profits tax but to high prices. These prices, as disclosed by the statistical abstracts published by the Government, bear little relation to the rise or fall in tax rates, but are due to general economic conditions and manipulation. High prices have in large measure been caused by the grossest kind of profiteering. It has been a game of soak the other fellow, and the other fellow, for the most part, has been the ultimate consumer. It has not been a question of a fair return on the capital. From 50 to 200 per cent profit on invested capital was by no means uncommon during 1917, 1918, and 1919.

A point was finally reached when the public went on a buyer's strike, and this strike is likely to continue until business from the highest to the lowest is forced to reduce production costs and selling profits to a point somewhere near the prewar level. When this is done prices will come down and conditions will speedily improve by brisk trade, which will again put money into circulation. There will be a demand for the products of industry, delayed construction will resume, labor will be employed, and prosperity will again settle down upon the country.

Owing to its universal use in industry and construction of all kinds the price of pig iron is perhaps the best barometer of business conditions that we have. The appended tables, published in the June number of Industrial Management, afford an interesting illustration of what I have just said. When prices get so high that it becomes apparent to men of business judgment that construction no longer can be profitably continued on account of high costs they quit buying. The lead sheep having refused to jump, everybody else refuses, and stagnation and depression settles upon the country.

My own judgment is that the principle involved in the excess-profits tax should be retained, but that the percentage now taken should be somewhat lowered, especially in the higher brackets, and that the so-called normal tax on corporations should be entirely abolished. Undistributed profits should be subjected to a tax of at least 10 per cent so as to prevent, so far as possible, the tieing up of earnings to which stockholders are entitled in the form of dividends. No credits should be allowed the individual stockholder for any tax paid by a corporation and all individual surtaxes should be discontinued. In other words, all taxes should be levied on a progressive income basis.

The present income tax law seems to have been drawn by some one who took a fiendish delight in making it as complicated and unworkable as possible. The system could be immensely simplified by levying all taxes on a progessive income basis. I never could understand why it should have been thought necessary to complicate the income-tax system by first imposing a so-called normal tax and then superimposing upon this excess-profits taxes, surtaxes, credits, and the like, when the whole matter could have been disposed of by a graduated income tax on net income with proper exemptions for individuals and the allowance of a reasonable return upon the capital investment of corporations. Such a system could be comprehended by the ordinary individual. The same results could have been secured so far as revenues are concerned and the cost of checking and collecting would have been greatly reduced.

The present system is not only expensive and slow from an administrative standpoint, but is so complicated that private firms and individuals have been put to great and unjustifiable expense in hiring experts to compute their taxes and make out their returns. The more complicated the system the more opportunity there is for fraud for the dishonest, while the honest will give the Government the benefit of the doubt, which often results in their paying more than is actually due. It ought to be possible, gentlemen, to write a revenue measure that can be understood and computed by the men who pay the income taxes and to prepare blanks that a man of ordinary intelligence could understand and fill out in making his tax return to the collector of internal revenue.

SPEECH

HON. EVERETT SANDERS,

OF INDIANA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, June 3, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6611) to establish in the Treasury Department a veterans' bureau and to improve the facilities and service of such bureau, and, further, to amend and modify the war risk insurance act.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, all of the discussions of this bill have been very interesting. The discussion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SWEET] was interesting and exhaustive and showed the result of great and untiring industry. Too much credit can not be given the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SWEET], who, although he has shared the responsibility with others, has taken the lead in procuring this very desirable legislation which coordinates the bureaus of the departments of this Government in so far as those bureaus deal with service to the American soldier.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SWEET] is perhaps the best authority in Congress, if not in the country, on soldier legislation. He is the author of the original Sweet bill, which generously provided for compensation for disabled ex-service men of the World War and made liberal provision for allotments and allowances and for insurance. It was not an easy task for him to master the details of all the laws on this subject and be able to draft new legislation to care for the soldiers, sailors, and marines in a manner to properly reflect the gratitude of this great Republic. In comprehending and carrying out of this difficult task the gentleman from Iowa had the twofold duty to deal fairly and liberally with these natural recipients of the country's gratitude and at the same time deal justly with the Government, in which all the people are interested. He has not failed in the performance of either duty. His untiring industry, his comprehensive vision, and his sound judgment, as reflected in this and former legislation on this subject, have not alone given him a place in the affections of the ex-service men but will win for him a place of eminence among the great legislators of our country.

I am very happy to note that the Members of this House who have served in the war have given their approval to the provisions of this bill. I was interested in the very eloquent short address of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL].

In my opinion, this measure will give to the American soldier the relief which he has not had under the present organizations of the departments of the Government. I do not think any of us, however, are so optimistic as to think that in dealing with the question of granting compensation and insurance, awarding hospitalization or the right to training under the Board of Vocational Training all of those things will now be done so promptly that there will be no delay, that there will be no mistakes, and that there will be no injustice. If anyone is so optimistic as that, then when this bill has been enacted for over a year, I think he will have lost the spirit of optimism. There is not any of us who have not at times criticized the Bureau of War Risk Insurance in cases of delay. We have been in close touch with the soldiers, to whom we have granted relief by legislation, and we have seen the failure of relief in the execution of those laws. I think sometimes we have been somewhat unfair to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. The bureau was criticized to-day on the floor because it did not make certain rulings which, in my opinion, are not justified by the laws which we have passed. I think at least in our criticism of that bureau, or any other bureau of the executive departments, we ought not to complain because they carry out the laws which we pass. After all, although the Bureau of War Risk Insurance has failed in individual cases and sometimes injustice has resulted, that great bureau has had a tremendous task upon its hands. It has dealt with intricate problems. It has been hedged about by the laws we necessarily have passed requiring the proof by soldiers of their right to be given the benefit of those laws.

I wish there were some magic wand which we could use after the passage of laws for the benefit of four or five million men, by which we could give to them at once all the benefits of the legislation, but there is not. In passing those laws we have to provide that the soldier must make his proof; that he must show himself to come within the provisions of the law laid down by Congress, and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance very frequently has been blamed for conditions for which it is not to blame. It is not thought by this legislation that there will not be cases where the individual soldier will have some delay in making his proof, in submitting his affidavit, in getting the examination of the physicians, and so forth; but it is hoped by this reorganization to put the activity of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, of the Board for Vocational Training, and of the Public Health Service, in so far as it relates to the soldier, under one responsible head—the director of the veterans' bureau—so that he shall have the responsibility, and we shall put the organization and the execution of these laws under one management; and that by doing that this Congress will do all that is within the power of Congress to so provide that the soldier shall get the benefit of the legislation which we pass. When we have performed that duty, then we can do no more, for the execution of the law will be with the executive branch of the Government. In my opinion, however, this will remedy many of the evils of delay and miscarriage of justice.

We have provided for 14 regional offices. There has been complaint that that will give 14 different viewpoints in administering these laws. Of course, everyone realizes that that suggestion has some weight to it, but nevertheless no one man in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance now passes finally on all of these claims, for that would be an impossibility. They now have many different men who finally pass upon all of these papers, so that the matter of providing for 14 regional boards is a mere matter of geography rather than a change in respect to the number who shall pass upon these questions. We provide for not to exceed 50 suboffices. That is for the purpose of bringing these activities close home to the soldier. We do not give the suboffices power to pass finally on the compensation claim or on the insurance claim, or upon the right to vocational training. We do give the director the right to delegate to the suboffices any other powers except the final power in those cases.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. McDUFFIE. I notice that the bill provides that not exceeding 50 suboffices shall be established by the director. Is it contemplated that there must be one office in each State?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. No; there is nothing said about the distribution of the offices.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Does not the gentleman think there should be one of these suboffices in each State?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I doubt if we should make a specific provision that there shall be one in each State. I really think it would be preferable to leave that matter to be decided by the director. Of course, if we provide that there be 59, he can put one in each State, if he so desires. There may be cases where it would not be desirable to put one in each State.

Mr. McDUFFIE. It occurred to me, if the object is to bring these matters closer home to the soldier who is seeking the benefits of this legislation, it would be wise to have these offices so located that the soldier would not have to go from one State into another in the event he wished to seek the benefits of the legislation by doing so. That is the thought that occurred to me—that probably we ought to provide specifically that they shall be so located that at least one office shall be in each State.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. It is my opinion that since we are giving one man the responsibility we ought to locate the responsibility in that one man to make the division, and the reason I think there should be a limit of 50 is because I think there should be some limitation. Of course, when you think of the question of bringing the suboffices close to the soldier you have immediately got the question before you of how many offices you shall have. We might provide one for each county. That would bring it closer; but there must be some limit.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would suggest, if the gentleman will permit, that in all probability there will be one in each State, with a few exceptions. In a State like New York, or a State like Texas, there might be two, while in such a State as Delaware or Rhode Island it might be to the advantage of the soldiers in either one of those States to have the offices located in some other State near by.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I think we have wisely left the matter of detail and organization in the man upon whom we place the responsibility. The figures that have been put into the RECORD by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SWEET] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] and others show that the American Congress has not forgotten the soldier.

We have provided bountifully to take care of the soldier in all of his needs, and this legislation broadens the provisions of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance in one part of the bill, title 2, and in title 1 we undertake to provide an organization by which the provisions of all of these laws for the benefit of the soldier may be best executed. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Against Fordney Tariff Bill.

OF

HON. J. D. BECK,

OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, July 20, 1921.

Mr. BECK. Mr. Speaker, it will be remembered that I voted for the emergency tariff bill, not because I was satisfied it would help, but because I felt it could make conditions no worse for the farmer. I voted for it in the hope that it might help. While the bill was pending in the House newspapers throughout the country carried such headlines as these: "Wheat goes skyward at prospects of emergency tariff bill passing House," "Hogs take upward turn at prospects of tariff legislation," "Farm produce higher because of certainty of tariff bill passing."

Immediately after the emergency tariff bill passed the House the headlines changed for several days: "Wheat takes slump," "Hogs down," and so forth. Then for a day, perhaps, they would change back; then for four or five days "slump." So where does the benefit come in? Producers get no more for their products, and the price to consumers is about the same. If, therefore, I am to judge of the probable effects of this bill becoming a law by the effects of the emergency tariff law, I can not see much good in it for anyone except the trusts. There may be some good in it for others, but as I see it that good is so overbalanced by the harm to the common people that I can not vote for it. I wish I could. I am a Republican. Protection of infant industries has been the very foundation of Republicanism for 60 years.

But in the case of dyes certain kinds are absolutely barred from entering the United States. These are dyes monopolized by the Du Ponts of America and the Levensteins of Europe. These two companies are backed by over $500,000,000 in capital, and in a recent Senate hearing the Du Ponts confessed their purpose was to crush all competition in the manufacture of dyes in this country.

Dyes are a coal-tar product. By treating coal tar with certain chemicals, perfume is made; by treating it with others, one kind of dye is made; treating it with certain others produces high explosives; extracts are still another result of treating coal tar with chemicals. So by a very simple process dyes, perfumes, extracts, and the like can all be transposed into high explosives or munitions of war and back again. I have a susa war machine such as nearly every country in the world is trying to rid itself of to-day. I believe that is true. But whether it is or not, one thing is certain, and that is that the Du Ponts, with their millions in capital, need no protection at the hands of the business men of our small cities and villages, the wage earners, and the farmers.

In reading over the bill one can not help but compare the tariff on manufactured articles with those of agriculture. To illustrate, the tariff on indigo, or any color made from it, is 35 per cent of its American value plus 7 cents per pound. A pound of the best indigo, I am told, can be bought in some other countries for about 4 cents in American money. That same indigo has been selling in this country at from 90 cents to $1.50 per pound. As soon as it lands in the United States it is fair to assume that its value will be about $1. Forty-two cents duty is placed upon it at once, and the indigo which cost 4 cents in Germany costs laid down here, freight and all, about 48 or 50 cents on the basis of $1 per pound, American value, or about ten to twelve times more than its original cost. Before the war we bought this same dye in this country for 15 cents a pound.

Finished articles of cellulose have a duty of 65 cents per pound plus 25 per cent of their value. The tariff on any finished article of casein is 40 cents per pound plus 25 per cent of its American value. Opium used in medicine has a duty of $3 to $6 per pound, depending on its purity. The tariff on paints is from one-fifth to one-third their American value. Unglazed tiles have a duty of 35 to 50 per cent of their American value. The Cement Trust is protected to the extent of 4 cents per 100 pounds to 17 per cent ad valorem, American value. Crockery is protected to the extent of over one-fourth its American value. Bottle manufacturers are protected to the extent of two-fifths, or 40 per cent of the value of the bottle. In other words, a number of bottles worth $10 has a $4 duty. Sheet glass has a duty as high as 15 cents a square foot. The price of glass is now four times what it was before the war. Plate glass is protected to the extent of 25 cents per square foot. Glass lenses are protected to the extent of two-fifths their American value; watch crystals, two-fifths their value. And all this regardless of cost in foreign countries.

The Steel Trust has a protection of $1.25 per ton on pig iron. Boiler plate and sheet iron are protected to the extent of one-fifth their value. Balls and rollers used in ball bearings have a duty of 10 cents per pound plus 35 per cent of their value. Hospital kitchen utensils, that ought to be admitted free, have a duty of 5 cents per pound plus 30 per cent of their value. Fishhooks are taxed 35 per cent of their value; common pins, 28 per cent of their value; hooks and eyes, 4½ cents per pound and 15 per cent of their value; penknives, as high as $8 per dozen; butcher knives, butter knives, and so forth, 16 cents each; surgical instruments, as high as $5 per dozen plus 35 per cent of their value; shotguns, as high as $10 each plus four-fifths of their value; watches, as high as $10 each; shovels, 25 per cent of their value; German silver, one-fourth its value; shingles, 50 cents per thousand; toothpicks, one-fourth their value; furniture, one-fourth its value; and all this regardless of how cheap they may be bought in foreign countries.

It will be noted that on all these manufactured articles the tariff is from one-fifth, one-fourth, one-third, to one-half their value, and in some instances even higher. This is all on American value and not on the value of these articles in the country where they may be purchased. But let us look at some of the articles raised on the farm and see what the tariff provides. On cattle the tariff runs as high as 1½ cents per pound. That looks like a heavy duty and large enough to protect the cattle raiser. But when it comes to fresh beef, the tariff is only 2 cents per pound, or less than one-seventh its value. So cattle will come into this country butchered and not as live stock. Hogs have a tariff of 1 cent per pound, or about one-seventh their value, while pork has only three-fourths of a cent per pound. The reindeer farmers of Wisconsin, however, are amply protected, because they have a 20 per cent duty on reindeer meat. There is a duty of 1 cent per gallon on fresh milk, which is at most only about one-fifteenth its value. Butter has a duty of 8 cents per pound, which is now about one-fourth its value, but only one-eighth its value in March. The oleomargarine interests have the same protection, 8 cents per pound, as the farmer. The farmer's cheese and the manufactured cheese substitutes both have a duty of 5 cents per pound. The farmer who raises either black or silver foxes is protected to the extent of $350 per head, so he has nothing to fear. Other "live animals not specially provided for" have a 15 per cent duty, or less than one-sixth their value.

Barley is protected to the extent of 15 cents per bushel; buckwheat, 30 cents per 100 pounds; corn, 15 cents per bushel; rye, 15 cents per bushel; and oats, 10 cents per bushel. It will be noted that the tariff on these articles is a flat rate per bushel or some other unit of measurement. What is true of grains is true of other farm produce, and the higher the price for farm produce the less protection the farmer has.

To illustrate, oats sold this spring for about 30 cents per bushel. That is equal to 33⅓ per cent ad valorem, or one-third their value. But should oats go up to $1 per bushel, as they were a year ago, the tariff remains the same, 10 cents, but instead of being protected to the extent of 33⅓ per cent ad valorem, the duty becomes only 10 per cent ad valorem, and offers practically no protection at all.

That is not true with manufactured articles. Take the ordinary bedroom suit that sold before the war for $40. The tariff under this bill would be $10. But when the suit rises in price to $160, as it did during the war, the tariff rises to $40 instead of $10. In other words, the duty increases in proportion to the price, or American value.

As prices are now, as I see it, the protection afforded the farmer under this bill ranges around 10 per cent to 20 per cent of the value of the product, while the protection afforded the manufacturer ranges from 20 per cent to 50 per cent, and in some cases so high as to absolutely prohibit importation. That is true with most dyes. An absolute embargo is placed upon them to protect a $250,000,000 corporation making high explosives used in war. The manufacturers of dyes say, "This proposed tariff or embargo means only about 60 cents increase in cost of dyes per person per year." But think what that means. Sixty cents per person in the United States means nearly $65,000,000 to the people of the United States, and $1,560,000 to the people of Wisconsin, in one year, on this one item alone, just to bolster up an infant industry that has a capital of $250,000,000 behind it.

So, while this bill offers some protection to the farmers, the duty on the things he buys is so much greater than on the things he sells that I feel that so far as he is concerned, we had better have no tariff at all.

Take the question of coconut oil and copra. Copra is dried coconut meat containing about 20 per cent coconut oil.

Before the war there was practically none of this article shipped into the United States. But during the mad rush for wealth by our "100 per cent American dollar-a-year men"—and while our country was at war—it was found that an imitation butter could be made by using coconut oil and other ingredients that closely resemble the genuine article, and it was also found that an imitation condensed milk could be produced by extracting the butter fat, worth 75 cents a pound, from the milk and substituting coconut oil, worth only 15 cents a pound. With these two discoveries began the importation of coconut oil and copra. Prior to 1915 there was practically no importation of these articles. In 1919 we imported nearly 302,000,000 pounds of copra, containing 60,000,000 pounds of oil, while in the same year nearly 345,000,000 pounds of coconut oil were imported, making a total of nearly 405,000,000 pounds of oil, equal in weight to the butter fat produced by 2,600,000 average cows for the year 1910. I do not claim that all of this oil goes into imitation butter and condensed milk, but I do claim that it goes into articles where formerly butter and other animal fats were used, thereby becoming a serious menace to the dairy industry.

But it goes further than this. It threatens the very life of farming itself, and anything that threatens this basic industry threatens all industry. We had a painful example of this back in the early eighties, when filled cheese made its appearance. That article was made by extracting the butter fat from whole milk and substituting other ingredients therefor. Butter and cheese were forced down to 5 cents per pound, and dairy cows were sold by the thousands for slaughter, the farmers generally keeping only enough cows to satisfy their own demands. As a result the soil became depleted. According to statistics given out by the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, the yield of corn per acre fell to 28 bushels in 1890, the oats yield fell to 30 bushels, the rye to 13 bushels, barley to 24 bushels, and potatoes to 75 bushels.

In 1886 Congress passed a law which put the filled-cheese industry out of business. In 1890 the number of cows on the dairy farms of Wisconsin had decreased to less than 1,000,000. Since that time and up to 1920 the number of cows has about doubled. With the increase in the number of dairy cows came the increase in yields of farm products. During the same period the average number of bushels of corn per acre has increased from 28 bushels to 36 bushels, rye from 13 to 17 bushels, barley from 24 to 32 bushels, oats from 32 to 38 bushels, potatoes from 75 to 100 bushels. So, as I see it, the protection of the dairy interests of the country is of vital importance.

During the war, and because of it, practically no goods were shipped into the United States. The effect of the war upon trade with other countries was the same as the effect the dye schedule in this bill will have upon trade in that article. Its effect was prohibitive. The war made a very fertile field for the mad scramble for wealth that followed. Over 20,000 new millionaires were created. To me this bill proposes to perpetuate that condition, and the people of this country will not stand for it. The cry of "tariff" is no longer the sweet music to their ears that it was in the days of McKinley and Mark Hanna. What the producers want to-day is a greater share of the products of their own toil to do with as they please, and not an instrument of law that permits the lion's share to go to those who do not produce wealth.

As I said before, I voted for the emergency tariff bill. That bill related almost wholely to the products of the farm. It was said that the legislation was necessary in order to put the farming industry upon its feet. Where is the farm that it has placed on its feet? You can search this country from Maine to California, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, and you will not find one. If that bill did not help the farmer, where in the name of common sense is this bill going to help him?

"Oh," but gentlemen have said, "this bill, if enacted into law, will start the wheels of the factory moving and give employment to labor. Then labor will have something to buy with, labor will furnish a market for the products of the factory." That is to say, "Labor will buy the products of the steel mills with the wages it gets from the manufacturer, while the manufacturer gets his money from the wage earner, who buys his products," and there you are. Plain as day. It is a wonder some one had not thought of that before.

How silly! It is like building a house by beginning at the top of the chimney. It is beginning at the wrong end. The farming industry is the very foundation of all industry. If it is in a prosperous condition, all other legitimate business will prosper. If it is not, then other industry will not prosper. The farmer will prosper when you protect him against the production of fraudulent imitations of his products. He will prosper when you repeal the Esch-Cummins law, which is exacting millions upon millions of dollars from him every year in excessive transportation charges. He will prosper when this Congress finds a simple and economical way for him to get the products of his toil to the consumer without having to go through six or seven hands, each of which exacts its "pound of flesh."

But think of potatoes selling in central Wisconsin for $1 per 100 pounds, costing the consumer 150 miles away in the city of Chicago $4.50 per 100 pounds. Think of cabbages costing $20 per ton in Texas selling for $240 per ton to the consumers in New York. Think of Georgia peaches that did not yield the grower enough to pay the freight costing the consumer in Chicago nearly $500 per car.

Think of a carload of lambs netting a farmer 33 cents per head after paying the freight and other charges when you can not get a lamb chop in any restaurant or hotel for much less than 30 cents. Think of a barrel of apples yielding the farmer who raised them near Buffalo $3, going through seven different hands and costing the consumer in New York City $22.50. Think of a carload of sugar selling at 18 cents wholesale being sold and resold eight times without moving an inch from the place where it was loaded and finally costing the consumer 38 cents a pound.

These things have actually happened and are happening to-day, and yet the Congress of the United States is fiddling away its time upon a bill that will produce only one thing, and that is a Democratic Congress in 1922.

In May a carload of cattle was shipped from Kendall, Wis., to Chicago that netted the farmers less than $10 per head. I have a shipping bill of a load of hogs from Norwalk to Chicago. The freight charges were over three times what they were before the war and the returns to the farmer were about one-third what he would have received during the war. One farmer shipped a fat cow in a carload of cattle from this station to Chicago that was assessed at $55 a week before it was shipped. This cow netted the farmer $5.68. The farmers at Norwalk, Wis., are complaining that the cost per 100 pounds for shipping live stock is almost prohibitive. It costs from 60 to 75 cents per 100 pounds. One farmer at Sparta, Wis., received $2.50 net for a cow he shipped in a carload made up by farmers of that locality.

I hope that the Senate will so amend the bill that I can vote for it.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. CHARLES B. TIMBERLAKE,

OF COLORADO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, July 25, 1921.

Mr. TIMBERLAKE. Mr. Speaker, in the building of a tariff platform on which the industries of our country are to stand for many years to come it is absolutely essential that no gaps be left in this platform through which any worthy industries may fall to bankruptcy and extinction. There has been much talk before Congress of raw material, of free raw material. What is a raw material? I will tell you what a raw material is, and in telling you I will use substantially the words of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee [Mr. FORDNEY] in his statement in the hearings before our committee of the Southern Tariff Association of April 20, 1921, when he said:

> I will tell you what raw material is in my opinion. I do not know whether you will agree with me. It is the round world untouched by man. Iron ore in the ground is raw material. Timber that stands in the wood is raw material. The hide on the back of a range steer that has never had human care is a raw material. But the minute you introduce one iota of human labor into that you have some man's finished product. If for the protection of this finished product, if for the existence of the industry on which it is based, it is necessary that a tariff be levied, then the principles of protection apply equally to this as a raw material as it does to it as a finished product.

What do these raw materials, so called, include? They include the products of our farms and our ranges; they include the products of our mines and our smelters; they include those industries which employ labor in greatest quantity; they include those industries which are the bone and sinew of our Nation. It was in the consideration of these basic mineral and metal industries that the portion of the committee, the subcommittee with which I served, had to do, and I will therefore deal somewhat with these first.

Numerous objections have been raised to these proposed tariffs on so-called raw materials. First, repeated statements have been made on the floor of the House as to the alleged increased cost to consumers because of the proposed tariff. Let us take some actual cases in point and see what happened under free trade. Under free trade we have built up no ferromanganese industry. When the need for ferromanganese came on us suddenly during the war we had no domestic source of supply. The price of ferromanganese went to $400 and $500 a ton. We had no protection for potash. Large potash reserves in this country were totally undeveloped. When our supplies from Germany were cut off the price of potash rose from 25 cents per unit to $5.50 per unit. The same thing has happened with regard to quicksilver, which rose to $127 a flask in 1918. Now, what has happened to the commodities of which these raw materials form the base? Permit me to tell you. The finished commodities have advanced in price to a point commensurate with their high cost based on the high cost of these raw materials under a period of free trade. With quicksilver at $127 a flask in 1918, and copper at 30 cents per pound, blasting caps, which are made of these two component materials, were $16 per thousand. To-day, with quicksilver at $40 per flask and copper at 13 cents per pound, blasting caps are $18 a thousand. While the price of potash ran over a range of 1 to 18, the price of fertilizer varied during the same time only as 1 is to 3, ranging in price from $25 to $60 per ton during the period named. Now, the point of these statements is this, where there is a wide range of fluctuation of price of basic raw material in an industry not protected by a tariff there is a much higher actual price cost to the consumer over a period of years on his finished product than there is in the industry which is protected by tariff and which can figure on its raw material at a level price over a period of years and can make its manufacturing cost and its prices to the consumer over a long period of time.

This applies to other industries than the metal industry. In 1912 a company in the Middle West which operated its own woolen mill, where it manufactured wool from entirely domestic sources into woolen cloth and made this woolen cloth into clothing, made a high-class suit of clothes which sold at wholesale as low as $8 a suit. It did this under a protected market for domestic wool. While a comparison with to-day's conditions is distorted because of the economic conditions following the war, yet with wool on the free list to-day and domestic wool lower than it has been for many years and begging a market at any price, this same woolen mill is not selling the same suit of all-wool clothes at $8 wholesale. It is selling the same suit at from $18 to $29 wholesale. Why? Simply because the manufacturer has had his price raised by an extreme fluctuation in the cost of his raw material under free trade.

Under such wide range of price fluctuation we have to-day free wool and high-priced clothing. We have free lumber and high building costs. We have free importation of agricultural products and high-priced foodstuffs. It was not the purpose of our committee in the framing of this legislation to take any stock in the principles of such industries as appeared before it when those industries would support protection for themselves and every step above them on our economic ladder and want to refuse protection to every industry below them, industries on which they were dependent for the materials which went into their manufactured products, industries which wanted everything they bought on the free list and everything that they sold protected, industries which wanted free ores and protected finished metals, which wanted free manganese ore and protected ferromanganese, free tungsten and protected alloy steel, because we knew that this meant ruin to the mining industries on which these very manufacturing industries were dependent. It meant loss of billions in revenue to the United States, and we knew that over a period of years it meant actually a higher cost to the consumer of every article into which a pound of this metal went because of the extreme price fluctuation which I have just cited.

Another objection which has been raised against these tariffs is that these minerals, being valuable materials for war purposes, should be left in the ground as potential reserves. The best statement which I can quote to you on that was made by Guy P. Riddell, formerly metallurgical engineer for the United States Tariff Commission, when he said that as between a totally undeveloped natural resource in time of emergency and a totally depleted one there was no choice. Representatives of the General Staff of the War Department appeared before our committee, at our request, and stated positively that the length of time necessary to get one of these mineral industries in operation, to get the material produced, and to get it to the front was, at the very shortest, three years. Can we wait three years while some country has shut off our entire supply of these materials? We saw the most utter fiasco in an effort to stimulate the production of these war-time materials by an advertising propaganda, on which the Government has never made good, during the last emergency. Do you think that one of those war mineral operators could be got to go forward and produce these materials again in time of emergency? I fear not. Not only have they been met with bad faith on the part of the Government since, but we can not ask any industry to stand as a front line of defense between the citizenry of this country and foreign aggression, to stand desperately holding on to his closed-down property in a condition of bankruptcy, and expect him the moment danger threatens to put resources, funds, hundreds of thousands of men, and billions of money immediately available for the development of these needful materials.

Private enterprise unprotected will never go into the operation of these necessary mineral industries in war or peace times either. If an emergency arose the Government itself would have to open up these industries if they were closed down. By the time the necessary legislation could be enacted and these industries financed and opened up by the Government, we could be thoroughly overridden by our foes. The suggestion has been made that the Government should buy up a supply of such of these materials as is not subject to deterioration. That is a splendid suggestion. If the Government wishes to protect itself, let it buy ferrotungsten, ferromanganese, and other necessary metals and minerals. The American miner does not ask to be subsidized by these purchases. Let the Government buy them from foreign sources at their present low prices, if it wishes. There will be no expense to the Government for duty. Let it store these minerals and alloys against times of emergency; but that does not affect the necessity of keeping these mineral industries in operation, for such a store of material would not only be a real protection for time of war but a real preventive of war-time emergency, because it was Germany's assurance that through the control of potash and the manufacture of tungsten, she could vanquish the world, and that made her maintain her arrogant position. Every American industry which is as necessary to our industrial life, which needs protection for its maintenance, should be placed in the position to hire American labor on an American scale of wages for its continuous operation as a worthy American industry. Another objection which has been raised against these proposed tariffs, is that our position is greatly altered since the World War. We have become a great creditor Nation, we are told, and we have. And we must therefore permit other countries to sell us goods as freely as they desire.

I think we will all grant that the position of a creditor nation is a desirable one. The quickest way we can lose that position is by stimulating imports and hampering our own domestic industry by putting it in competition with foreign labor at foreign scales of wages. It would not take us many years to lose the benefits of being a creditor nation by such a method. Such a statement is based on the theory that a protective tariff means a prohibitive tariff. Every Member of this Congress knows that such is not the case. Every Member of this Congress knows that our imports from foreign countries, except when interfered with by war, have progressed steadily from year to year, whether we were operating under a system of free trade or under a system of protective tariff. The difference has been that the nature of these imports has changed. It is better for us that we import raw silk free and put a protection on manufactures of silk. It is better for us that we import tea free and put a protective duty on sugar, that we put a tariff on coconut oil and import raw coconuts free, than that we have a tariff whose basis is fixed in revenue and in which the duties are levied against those articles which we necessarily import in greatest amounts from foreign countries. Under a system of protective tariff our internal prosperity is increased and our volume of foreign purchases in articles which are not competitive with our own production is greatly augmented. Such an objection is based on the further theory that there is an international balance sheet between nations which is struck off every year. This is not the case between nations any more than it is the case between individuals. We all know that the nations from whom we buy in greatest quantity are not the nations to whom we sell in greatest amount.

Theoretically it might be safe to say that every Member of this House is a free trader. Theoretically I might be a free trader. The only trouble with free trade is that fortunately a majority of the people of the United States have found out that it does not work. And to support a theory of international equality which has never yet been proved in the history of the world, and proof of which is still in the far and distant future, is too much to ask of American industry. The import statistics, showing the total value of imports from foreign countries into the United States, will show what is happening to us under free trade. The total imports into the United States for the year ending June 30, 1919, were $3,095,000,000. For the calendar year of 1920, $5,205,000,000. This almost doubles the money value of the imports, and, taken into consideration the lowering of prices, depreciation of foreign exchange, means during that period an increase in import tonnage of over five times what it was in 1919. We all know the deplorable condition of our transportation system. The railroads are not moving freight. Freight rates are too high. Tonnage is too low. How does this affect the tariff, you say? I will tell you. What do you suppose is the loss in revenue to the railroads of the United States in this five times increase in import tonnage of materials produced and manufactured in foreign countries? Between one and two billions of dollars. This is what the railroads of the country lost in revenue which they would have had in moving this material about over the country from the point of its first production to its finished product to points of consumption, based on the usual percentage of transportation costs in any finished article—one to two billions of dollars. A correct adjustment of our tariff problem will go a long way toward settling our transportation issue. In deciding this tariff question this Congress is deciding a question which is going to reverse our whole present state of industrial chaos quicker than any other thing that could be done.

Frequent reference has been made to the $10,000,000,000 debt which is owed to us by foreign Governments and foreign nations. This is a staggering sum of money—more than we could have contemplated in this country prior to the Great War. It is $90 per capita for every man, woman, and child in the United States, and yet, what is it going to avail us to collect every cent of that debt, if to do so we adopt as a method free trade, which will lower the wage return of every workingman in the United States from $300 to $500 per annum for an indefinite period? Yet this debt must and will be collected.

Is there any gentleman in this Congress who is so bold as to tell me that the only way which we can achieve a readjustment which will bring about plenty and peace, and the smooth-running industrial activity in this country is to sit idly by and live on our fat until the nations which are indebted to us can catch up with us economically? Must we sit in idleness while others do the work of the world? Must our American workingman be forced into idleness to give labor to European workingmen to pay off their governmental debt to the United States? We have a large export business, it is true. We want to keep all of it. We want more if we can have it in conjunction with sound internal, industrial, and financial business conditions. But what, after all, is export business? It is the disposal of surplus merchandise produced in going American industrial organizations. You can not have surplus production from bankrupt domestic organizations which are fighting with each other and with foreign competitors for a share of their home market. The political, industrial, and economic history of this country will show this conclusively, that we have learned from bitter experience that it takes 20 years of protection to prepare this country economically to stand 4 years of free trade.

OF

HON. JAMES C. CANTRILL,

OF KENTUCKY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. CANTRILL. Mr. Speaker, the average citizen of our country does not give sufficient consideration to the study of the tariff question. He proceeds in his everyday life on the theory that the tariff does not affect his condition in a financial way and that it has no bearing on his affairs. Nothing could be farther from the fact, because the tariff law that is on the statute books of our Nation has a direct effect on every business transaction and in reality comes closer to the pocketbook of the citizen than any other law. It behooves the intelligent citizen, therefore, to wake up and take full notice when a new tariff law is being made by Congress.

A new tariff law is now pending before Congress for consideration, and to this measure I am asking the consideration of the House and the country.

First, let us fix in our minds a clear conception of a tariff law. What is a tariff? A tariff is a tax, and no amount of discussion can make it anything else. A tariff is a tax upon foreign articles imported into this country. Although in the first instance the tax is paid by the importer at the port of entry into this country, yet in the end it is paid by the American consumer, who must buy and consume the article imported. Even the Republican Party has long ago abandoned the idea that the tariff tax was paid by the foreigner who exports his merchandise to this country.

The American citizen therefore pays a tax on every article of merchandise imported into this country when he makes a purchase of the necessities of life for himself and his family. The average citizen of intelligence will agree that his Government has no right to levy a tax on him unless it is for the need and benefit of the Government. No patriotic citizen will begrudge being taxed for the absolute expenses of his Government when it is properly and economically managed; therefore, when a tariff is levied for the expenses of the Government alone there can be no objection. On the other hand, when a tariff is levied for the benefit of a few manufacturers in our country and 100,000,000 of American citizens are taxed to enrich these manufacturers, then such a tariff law is class discrimination of the worst type and should not be tolerated by a free people. Yet the tariff bill now pending before this Congress, brought here by the leaders of the Republican Party, is drawn by and in the interests of a few manufacturers of the Nation, and the consuming masses of the country will foot the tax bill running into billions of dollars per annum, because the tariff rates in this measure are the highest in the history of the country.

The Democratic Party from its beginning has always held to the theory that Congress had no right to lay a tariff tax on the backs of the people except for the one idea of raising revenue to pay the running expenses of the Government.

The Republican Party from its birth has advocated the theory that a tariff should be levied for the protection of the American manufacturer from foreign competition.

The Democratic theory means a tariff for revenue only, while the Republican theory is a tariff for protection for the manufacturer, regardless of the heavy taxing burden it places on the shoulders of the American people as a whole.

On what ground shall the Government impose a tax to help the business of one at the expense of another? The manufacturer with a Republican protective tariff behind him can not increase the price of his goods without forcing the man who buys them to pay it. Why should the Government assist one class out of the labor of another class, when under our American form of government all citizens should stand on an equal footing? The Democratic Party denies the right of the Government to build up one man at the expense of another. I protest strongly against the passage of the proposed bill, because this measure taxes tens of millions of American citizens to benefit in untold measure the very few in number of American manufacturers.

When you enact a high protective tariff law like the pending measure the Government surrenders the taxing power to a favored few individuals in the manufacturing business and permits them to levy tribute on the American people for their own selfish interests. I am opposed to such a principle of government and protest against it with all my power.

As a Democrat I hold to the old-fashioned idea "that, subject to the necessities of the Government, every man has the right to sell what he produces where he can get the best price and to buy where he can buy the cheapest." This is an approved doctrine of political science and the plainest teaching of justice. "It individualizes men; it begets in them a spirit of independence; it turns their eyes from the Government to themselves; it limits Government to its proper sphere and leaves individuals free to choose their own career, develop their own resources, and build up their own fortunes."

By what right, either moral or legislative, should the manufacturer of Connecticut say to the farmer of Kentucky that he should pay 50 per cent more for a woolen suit of clothes and that 50 per cent increase go into the pocket of the Connecticut manufacturer and not into the Treasury of the United States, where all taxes should go? Yet, this is exactly the principle upon which this bill is constructed, because the tariff rates are so high on thousands of articles of everyday use that imports from foreign countries are practically cut off and the manufacturers are enabled to extort from the American consuming public. The millions of American consumers can rest assured that they will suffer as never before, in order that the greed of the small manufacturing classes shall be satisfied.

These manufacturers who are demanding this bill—and they are the people who in the main compose the great trusts of the country—are the very ones who complain the loudest against socialism. When the laboring man or the farmer comes to Congress with some project to better their condition these same manufacturers are the ones who cry loudest in protest, because as they say, Government aid is socialism, and yet these same manufacturers are now demanding a law from this Government which will permit them in the name of the law to extract billions of dollars from the pockets of the people. The bolsheviks of Russia could do no worse.

Once I read in some book that the word "tariff" got its name from the island of Tarifa, which is the most southern point on Continental Europe. The town of Tarifa was situated at the narrowest point on the Mediterranean Sea and the straits were so narrow that the pirates of old controlled this point and levied tribute on every ship which passed through. In plain English they stole what they pleased from the owners of ships passing that way. By force they levied such tariff as they pleased, and pirates are hard to satisfy. No wonder then that a high protective tariff levied against imported merchandise in this country should be called a tariff from Tarifa of old, and this bill will permit the protected manufacturers of this country to stand at every port of entry and levy tribute such as would bring a blush of shame to the cheeks of Capt. Kidd and the pirates of the old Spanish Main.

But, let the American people never forget that they are the ones who are paying tribute to the robber barons and the pirates of commerce.

Let the laboring man ask for an 8-hour day; let the farmer ask for help from the Federal farm loan bank; let the ex-service man ask for adjusted compensation, and these tariff pirates would be the first to cry to heaven that these things meant socialism, and that the Government should have no part in them, yet they use the Government to the furthest limit for their own selfish interest when it comes to the passage of a tariff law.

In very recent times the voting population of our country has been doubled by women securing their just and full rights as voters and citizens. The women of the country are the ones who do the purchasing for American families, and it behooves them especially to take up the study of the tariff question because under this bill almost every item which goes into the everyday use of the household is taxed for the benefit only of the American manufacturer, who made his large campaign contributions last year to bring about Republican victory and who now reimburses himself at the expense of the consuming American public more than 100 per cent.

What good reason can the farmer and laboring man give for keeping in power a party which forces him annually to render billions in tribute to the manufacturer protected by a tariff wall built around this country by the Republican Party?

For the sake of argument, let us admit that the laboring man who works in a protected industry gets some increase in wages from a protective tariff. As a matter of fact, he does not, but for argument's sake alone, let us grant this. What proportion of our population own and labor in protected industries? To place it at the highest figure not over 20 per cent, so at the outset we are confronted with a proposition of taxation which penalizes with heavy taxes 80 per cent of our population in order that 20 per cent may get higher wages and profits. Let us remember that 50 per cent of our population live on the farms of the Nation and they surely are not protected manufacturers. Over 2,000,000 men operate the railroads of our country who, with their families, run into the millions of people, and they certainly get no benefit from protected industries by the operation of a tariff law.

Millions of lawyers, doctors, preachers, teachers, professional men and women of many classes, clerks, day laborers in all lines of industry, middlemen and retail dealers in all lines—these millions together making up 80 per cent of our population—can under no circumstances receive any of the benefits of a high protective Republican tariff law, but, on the contrary, are forced to pay tribute to the small class constituted of the American manufacturers. Why in the name of common sense and justice should we have a taxing system of a protective tariff which forces the great majority of our citizens to pay tribute to the favored few? This system will not prevail any longer than the next election if the American people will only wake up and give full consideration to this damnable scheme written in the pending tariff bill.

In order to get clearly in our minds the difference between the two great parties let us quote from the platforms of the Democratic and Republican Parties as adopted in their national conventions in 1920.

The Democratic Party states clearly and emphatically that "We reaffirm the traditional policy of the Democratic Party in favor of a tariff for revenue only," and the Republican Party states without reservation that "The Republican Party reaffirms its belief in the protective principle and pledges itself to a revision of the tariff." In other words, the Democratic Party holds that the Government can only levy a tariff tax to supply revenue for the Government and that every dollar so raised by taxation should go into the Treasury of the United States. The Republican Party holds that high tariff rates should be exacted from the people so that imports will be kept out of this country to a great extent and that the increased cost of products from this system should go into the pockets of the manufacturers instead of going into the Treasury of our Nation. The Democratic Party levies tariff taxes for the welfare of the Nation as a whole, while the Republican Party levies a tariff for the benefit only of a rich but small number of manufacturers who pocket the taxes while the Government gets comparatively but a small portion of the taxes wrung from the pockets of the great majority of American citizens.

In order that we may have an everyday illustration of the workings of the proposals in the pending bill, let us take for example a medium grade straw hat. This grade of hat could be manufactured in this country, say, for $12 per dozen. It could be made for example in France for the same amount. This bill puts a tariff tax of 60 per cent at the port of entry upon the hat, which means that it would force the French manufacturer to pay $19.20 per dozen to get his hats into this country. It is easy to see that such a provision of law enables the hat manufacturer of this country to add the tariff tax to his cost of manufacture, shut out the French hat, and force 100,000,000 of American citizens to pay an extra tax of $7.20 per dozen on all the hats used in the country. Bear in mind that the Treasury of the United States does not get this $7.20 per dozen, but it all goes into the pockets of the few hat manufacturers of America. The same principle in everyday life applies to thousands of articles in this bill protected by a tariff tax which make up the necessities of life and which the American people must use in their daily lives. In short, a high protective tariff law like the one now pending, drawn by the Republican Party, is a tax on the consuming public and falls hardest on the poor man. In collecting State and city and county taxes the citizen is taxed on what he is worth, but under a bill like this a poor laboring man with a family of children is forced to pay a heavy tax on what he and his family consume, and consequently the poorest man pays more to the support of the Government than does the millionaire. Such a policy of taxation is a travesty on justice and should not be tolerated for a day by the American people.

The Democratic Party should give a vote of thanks to this Republican Congress for recently passing what they called the emergency tariff law, which placed a tariff tax on wheat, corn, cattle, and other products of the farm. It has always been the contention of the Democratic Party that a tariff on farm products was of no help to the farmers of this country, because our American farmers always raised a surplus of farm products above our home consumption which had to be sold in the open markets of the world, and that therefore the price of wheat and other farm products was set by the world market. Our Nation has for years been a heavy exporter of farm products and but little of farm products have been imported into this country. Very recently under the Republican administration the prices of farm products have fallen very materially in price and brought such consternation to the Republican Party that they were forced to pass a farmers' tariff law in a vain attempt to fool the American farmer. Last spring the Republican Party passed a tariff law putting a tariff of 35 cents a bushel on wheat and 15 cents a bushel on corn, and this law has been in operation for some time. What has been the result? Instead of raising the price of wheat and corn, as the Republican Party promised the farmer it would, owing to the protective theory of the law, the prices of wheat and corn have steadily decreased to the American farmer, and for the first time in the history of the country we have a demonstration in a practical way to the American farmer that a protective tariff on his products was a snare and a delusion, and that no benefit came to him from a tariff on what he produced.

The American farmer has always been forced to sell in the open markets of the world because he produces a surplus above his home consumption. He should be allowed to buy what he consumes in the open markets of the world, but this bill not only denies him that right, but on the contrary forces him to buy under a market surrounded by a high-tariff wall. All of the articles the American farmer consumes from the manufacturer are protected by a high tariff under this law, and the chief burden of taxation under this measure must be met by the American farmer, who makes up almost 50 per cent of our population.

Every student of political economy and every political party states that the prosperity of our country depends on the prosperity of our farmers, who constitute 50 per cent of our population, and now here we are confronted with a law by the Republican Party which forces the farmers of the land to pay the highest tariff rates ever known on every article which they must consume. The promise to the American farmer to reduce the high cost of living is met with the Republican Party by piling more taxes on his back, already bent.

The Republican platform adopted at Chicago last year states that "the farmer is the backbone of the Nation." So he is, but his backbone will be broken by this heavy load which this Republican tariff bill put upon him.

The Republican platform also states that, "The burden of taxation imposed upon the American people is staggering." So it is, but when this Republican platform was written, the Republican Party for two years had had control of the legislative branches of the Government and had made no effort to reduce that burden. Now, after having been in power over two years they propose to reduce that staggering burden of taxation by passing the highest prohibitive tariff law in the history of the Nation. No party in the history of our Government has been more guilty of violating its solemn pledge to the people than is the Republican Party now in passing this notorious and shameful measure.

The Republican platform also states, "We condemn the Democratic administration for failure impartially to enforce the antiprofiteering laws," and yet in passing this Republican bill the manufacturers will be licensed to profiteer at their own sweet will at the expense of 100,000,000 American citizens.

The same principle of legislation embodied in this bill which lays such a heavy tax on the farmers of the Nation will also oppress the laboring and professional men and women of the land. No set of men or women can possibly derive any benefit from legislation like the pending tariff bill, except the very limited number of manufacturers. These manufacturers, although few in number, are perfectly organized and know what they want in legislation. They knew that the Republican Party was the only party in the Nation which would be brazen enough to offer such legislation, and consequently during the last campaign they raised the largest campaign fund ever raised in the world to swing the election to the Republican Party. Congressional investigation has shown that almost $10,000,000 was raised by the protected interests and every citizen knows that millions were raised that no committee could trace. The amount of money spent in the last campaign would put to shame the old political bosses of the Republican Party, and one distinguished gentleman, now high in the Republican Party, said in a public speech last fall that fifteen million would be a cheap price for the campaign. So it would be, but the American people can rest assured that the protected manufacturers who put up this tremendous campaign fund, which is a scandal in our public life, will reimburse themselves through the agency of this bill with which the Republican Party will present them.

The farmer and the laboring man should never forget that the greatest prosperity which they ever enjoyed was under a Democratic administration, headed by that great statesman and patriot, Woodrow Wilson, and that the law under which this prosperity came was a low-tariff Democratic law drawn by that illustrious statesman of the South, OSCAR UNDERWOOD. The people last year were fooled by the great propaganda which the millions of dollars referred to above in the Republican campaign fund circulated over the country. These millions of the Republican campaign fund poisoned the minds of the people in many localities by appeals to class and racial hatreds and by false promises and misrepresentations which brought about a change of administration, and the country at once shifted from a great era of prosperity and plenty to a condition of want and misery. The Republican Party has realized that it can not make good its false promises, and now falls back into the arms of its faithful ally, the protected selfish manufacturing interests, with the hope that millions of dollars in the next campaign will again give them success at the polls.

If there ever was a time when there was no need for a new tariff law that time is now. Until the opening of the great World War the United States had been a debtor Nation, but in recent years we have become the creditor Nation of the world. All of our former tariff laws have been written when we, as a Nation, owed Europe, but now every great nation in Europe owes our country enormous sums of money, amounting to about $11,000,000,000. This money was raised from the American people by taxation during the war and loaned to our allies in war to enable us to win the final victory. It is known to every American citizen that Europe is now practically bankrupt and is unable to pay even the interest on her debts to our country. The only way in which Europe can possibly hope to pay any portion of her debt to us, and relieve the great financial strain in this country, is by exporting manufactured goods to this country and paying in her manufactured products the debt due the American people. Instead of encouraging Europe to get back on her feet in a business way and take her manufactured goods in exchange for the debt she owes us the Republican Party by this high-tariff bill is keeping out her imports and rendering her helpless to discharge her obligations to us.

Unless we permit Europe to export her goods to this country she will be unable to pay us for the surplus of farm products which we have to sell, and under this Republican plan there is no hope for the resumption of business, and the present hard times will continue.

The Republican Party seems to have come to the conclusion that it cares nothing about what happens to the farmers and laborers of the Nation, which constitute a great majority of our population, so long as they can build a prohibitive tariff wall around the United States and permit the manufacturers to have a complete monopoly of the home market at the profiteering prices which they will be able to demand under this law. This Republican tariff bill is built apparently on the theory that the manufacturing industry is the basis of our national prosperity, when every intelligent citizen knows that agriculture is the basis of our happiness and business welfare. This measure of the Republican Party lays the heaviest burden of taxation upon agriculture, and thereby renders hopeless the return of the prosperity of the Nation. Whatever argument the Republican Party may have had in the past for a protective tariff system when our Nation was a debtor nation certainly does not exist now, when we are the creditor nation of the earth. This great country of ours can not be prosperous when it is isolated in business from the balance of the world. If we desire to sell to the other nations of the earth, we must permit them to sell their goods to us. If we pass this bill and build this tariff wall around this country, we can surely expect that other nations will retaliate against us by similar legislation, which will keep our products from their shores. The American farmer and laboring man can compete with other nations of the earth, and what we need to-day are new markets in all parts of the world instead of pursuing the policy of isolation, as is outlined in this Republican tariff bill. In plain English, the purpose of the Republican Party in this country to-day is to give a perfect and complete monopoly to the American manufacturer, so that he can exploit our home market to his own sweet will. How any man or woman who is interested in farming and who labors in any other line of industry can support a party which advocates such legislation is beyond my comprehension. The men and women in industry and on the farms of our country make up 80 per cent of our population, and our laws should be written in the interest of the great majority of our citizens. This has always been the policy of the Democratic Party, but under this Republican law which that party will soon put on the statute books only a small per cent of our people will be benefited and enriched at the expense of the great majority. This measure is so brazenly drawn in the interest of a small protected class under its operation that I sincerely believe the American people will drive from power in the next election the Republican Party, which is the agent responsible for this shameless legislation. The Republican Party in its last platform was very careful not to pledge itself to a high protective tariff law and the tariff question was not an issue in the last election.

The American people were making no demand for such tariff legislation as is embodied in this bill. But the protected interests of the country, who financed the campaign of the Republican Party last fall, began to give orders to the Republican leaders after the election was over, and this bill is the result. It is but another example of deception practiced on the voters in the last election. I am sure, however, that when the people consider this measure and feel its effects after it becomes a law that the Republican Party will understand that "they can not fool all the people all the time."

This tariff scheme of the Republican Party is on a par with the plan pursued by the Republican Party in reference to the League of Nations. Great Republican leaders like Taft, Hughes, Hoover, and others of national reputation gave assurance to Republican voters that the only way to get a league of nations was to vote for Harding and the Republican ticket. These great leaders were sincere, of course, in their statements, but they, as it turns out, were not making the policies of this Republican administration. The great protected interests of this country, who dominate the policies of the Republican Party, did not want a league of nations, and the Versailles treaty, one of the greatest documents in all history, was thrown aside and the solemn pledge of the great Republican leaders was repudiated after election by the Republican Party. What hope in the future can the American people have in a party which so lightly disregards its campaign pledges?

Failure to enter the League of Nations and the enactment of this prohibitive tariff law makes complete the Republican doctrine of isolation from the balance of the world. Great disaster and suffering is bound to come to our country with such a selfish and shameful policy. A few years ago, under the leadership of that master mind, Woodrow Wilson, we had the love and friendship of nearly all the nations of the earth. Now, with our policy of isolation, we will receive the hatred of the entire business world, and it will retaliate against us at every opportunity. During the war we built a great merchant marine, which will be useless under this policy of business isolation urged by the Republican Party. Of what use is our merchant marine, which cost us billions of dollars, when foreign countries close their ports to our ships with American cargoes in them because we have closed our ports with a prohibitive tariff? If we will not permit foreign ships to come to our ports, it is a certainty that other countries will not permit our ships to enter their ports. Therefore, under this Republican policy the billions we spent for a merchant marine are absolutely wasted. If our American manufacturers had the same spirit in going out after the business of the world in American ships, now idle in our shipyards, as the American soldiers and sailors had when they went to France, the markets of the world to-day would be ours and we would be enjoying the greatest business prosperity in our history.

Instead of having true American courage and capturing the markets of the world in open competition, the American manufacturer comes to Congress begging protection and hides behind the high tariff fortifications built up for him in this bill by the Republican Party. The protected manufacturer who seeks this bill is certainly lacking in grit and courage, which is the greatest characteristic of the American people. The markets of the world were ours if our manufacturers had had the business nerve to move forward and capture them. In my humble opinion, the manufacturers who are asking this tariff bill are their worst enemies, and when disaster comes later, as it surely will, they will have no one to blame but themselves.

No wonder that the Republican Party in this bill put "fossils" on the free list. The American manufacturer who asks for this bill is a splendid specimen of that article, which will be admitted duty free. Think of what great good will come to the American people by having "fossils" on the free list. If there is anything which should be taxed out of existence in wide-awake America, it should be a "fossil."

While we are naming a few things put on the free list by the Republican Party in this bill and which will pay no tax at the port of entry, while every necessity in daily life is heavily taxed, let us name "dried blood," "bones," "skeletons," "turtles," and "leeches." What a boon to our great Nation to have these articles come in free of tax. How generous is the Republican Party to the people who trusted them with power to permit these articles to be imported into this country without a tax. The lifeblood of the Nation will surely become dried blood and the bodies of our laboring men and women will become bones and skeletons, indeed, when the tribute has been exacted from them to satisfy the leeches who are demanding this law.

In order that we may have a clear conception of the tariff laws which have been written on the statute books of our country, let us recite the chief tariff laws by name in order of their enactment, with the date of their passage by Congress:

The high protective tariff of 1828, called by its opponents "the tariff of abominations," which led to the nullification movement.

The tariff of 1833, known as the compromise tariff, introduced as a compromise measure by Henry Clay, which provided for a graduated reduction of the duties year by year until 1842, when they should stand at 20 per cent as a horizontal rate.

The Walker tariff of 1846, framed by Robert J. Walker, then Secretary of the Treasury, which modified the protective duties and grouped articles into various schedules at different rates, all the articles in each paying at the same rate.

The Morrill Act of 1861, which increased tariff rates for war purposes.

The McKinley Act of 1890, which raised duties to a high point.

The Wilson Act of 1894, which had lowered duties in many lines from those imposed by the McKinley Act.

The Dingley Act of 1897, which was a protective tariff act, which raised duties higher than they were under the McKinley Act.

The Payne-Aldrich Act of 1909, which brought about a political revolution and defeated the Republican Party, which was responsible for its enactment.

The Underwood tariff act of 1913, in which there were substantial reductions in a large number of tariff duties.

The pending bill, which is known as the Fordney bill and carries a higher rate of protective tariff duties than any tariff bill ever considered by the American Congress.

Let us understand that the pending law is so unfair and obnoxious to the consuming public that it does not command the support of all the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, which prepared the measure. Mr. FREAR, a Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, has filed a minority report against the bill, stating in emphatic terms that the Republican Party has violated its campaign promises to the American people and that the bill will prove so burdensome to the consuming public that he can not support it. The country owes a debt of gratitude to this courageous Republican who dares denounce his party for perpetrating such an outrage on the American people.

I will quote a few extracts from the report filed by Mr. FREAR, which is as emphatic as any statement which I have made against the bill:

If, however, a bill is believed to be fundamentally wrong in principle in important schedules no Member is bound to its support.

Measured by that standard this minority Member of the Republican majority Members dissents from portions of the bill as reported by the committee for the following reasons: First, they do not meet specific party platform pledges; second, they contain provisions fundamentally indefensible.

A brief statement as to these objections is offered.

A platform pledge under which this bill is prepared reads that tariff rates "should be reasonable in amount and so adjusted as to prevent undue exactions by monopolies and trusts." By that standard the bill will be considered.

Whenever any industry is controlled by a monopoly or price-fixing agreement and real competition ceases to exist, then any tariff duty in excess of the difference in cost of production here and abroad serves to raise the cost of the article produced to the consumer here and is beyond legitimate protective rates because it only benefits the monopoly. Whenever tariff duties are placed so high that foreign-made articles can not be imported so as to compete with American-made goods, then the tariff becomes prohibitive in fact, and to that extent debtor nations are prevented from paying their debts to us in trade.

Excessive tariff rates thus imposed, unless for the purpose of promoting domestic competition, necessarily result in higher prices to the public with excess profits to the producer.

The chemical-dye schedule is fundamentally objectionable and is a high-handed proposal to grant practically exclusive dye rights to a recognized monopoly.

Protection, the keystone of Republican doctrine, is thrown to the winds in the chemical-dye schedule.

Dr. Hesse, an eminent authority, states that coal-tar dyes affect the livelihood of more than 1,000,000 employees, who work in 11,000 manufacturing establishments in this country, having an invested capital of more than $2,500,000,000, and producing annually $2,600,000,000 in manufactured products. Congress is asked by the dye schedule to give this infant dye trust, with aggregate assets of over a half billion dollars, exclusive picking of the 11,000 factories that require dyes and of 110,000,000 American consumers who ultimately pay the bills. By giving an exclusive monopoly of our home market dye prices have been kept up from 300 to 400 per cent higher than before the war, with a certainty that the American public will be fleeced as long as the little fellow gets "trimmed" and "soaked" for cutting prices.

In other words, at a time when the Treasury needs every dollar that can be raised by tariff duties, Congress is asked to hold up the American consumer by the throat while the dye monopoly goes through his pockets, keeping for its own use the tariff duty that otherwise would help pay expenses of Government. That is the effect of the chemical schedule reported for passage by the committee.

When Congress out-Herods Herod, with its unprecedented gift to the dye monopoly, what will be the judgment of the country on this bill? Lest we forget, Republican platform pledges are for tariff rates "reasonable in amount and so adjusted as to prevent undue exactions by monopolies and trusts."

Surely when such a strong and influential Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee as Mr. FREAR objects to this bill in such emphatic and forceful language as I have quoted above, it is high time that every man and woman who must buy the necessities of life should join with the Democratic Party in the next election so that it will be impossible to keep such a shameful law on the statute books of our Republic. My opinion is that next year, when the iniquity of this measure is fully understood by the American people, that they will rise in their majesty and vote the Republican Party out of power, just as they did in protest against the protective and prohibitive Payne-Aldrich law which the Republican Party fastened on the people until the Democratic Party gave them relief from its oppressive tariff schedules.

This pending bill is so objectionable that the Republican Party, even with its overwhelming majority in this House, did not dare put the bill on its passage without a gag rule of the worst type behind it, which makes it impossible to throw the bill open to amendment from the floor of the House. The Republican Party leaders in the House knew that their majority was so large that they had but little to fear from the Democratic side, but they were afraid of their own side of the House. They not only gagged the Democratic side with a rule which, in effect, denies the House the right to even offer amendment to the measure, but gagged their own side for fear that there would be many more Republicans with the courage of Mr. FREAR, who would destroy their bill. If the Republican leaders are afraid to trust their judgment to their own Members in this House, in the name of fair dealing and justice, how can they hope to make an appeal to the judgment of the American people in the next election? Those of us on the Democratic side of this Chamber can well afford to bide our time and carry this issue before the people in the next election with full confidence in their verdict. It should be borne in mind that when the Democratic Party wrote the Underwood tariff bill that it was read, line by line, before the full House, and every Member, whatever his politics, had the right to offer amendments to that bill and discuss them. There was no gag rule when the last Democratic tariff bill was enacted into law. The Republican Party is drifting back to the old days of the CANNON régime in grinding out legislation under gag rule. The American people once put an end to that system and will surely do so again when given the opportunity at the polls.

Mr. FREAR has pointed out in splendid detail the outrageous workings of the dye schedule in the pending measure, but every other schedule in the bill is almost as bad, and the Fordney tariff bill as a whole is but a diabolical legislative scheme to burden the many with heavy taxes in order to enrich the favored few who constitute the protected manufacturing class.

The American voter should always bear in mind the close relationship existing between a high protective tariff law and the high cost of living. The Republican Party passes a protective tariff law in order that the protected manufacturer might get higher prices for his products. The Republican Party in the last campaign, in order to fool the voters and make them believe that the high cost of living would be reduced, wrote these words into their national platform:

We pledge ourselves to earnest and consistent attack upon the high cost of living.

What has been done by the Republican Party to make good in this Congress this campaign pledge? Absolutely nothing; but, on the contrary, the Republican Party has openly repudiated the solemn pledge to reduce the high cost of living by passing this high protective tariff bill, the highest in the history of the Nation, which will increase in great measure the tariff rates and thereby increase the price on nearly every article which enters into the daily consumption of the people. When the Republican Party has so little regard for its pledged word to reduce the high cost of living, how can it appeal to even its own members for support at the polls in the future? If the Republican Party had desired to reduce the cost of living it would have left intact the present tariff law, written by a Democratic administration, and under which the American people of all classes of business enjoyed the greatest prosperity ever known. Their present policy is but a repetition of past history, when that party was in power, namely, to take care of the favored few at the expense of the many. Farm products are lower and labor prices are lower than they have been for years, but when this bill goes into effect under this Republican administration the farmer and the laborer will be forced to pay higher tribute than ever to the protected manufacturers of the United States. What a great crime is being committed against the consuming masses by the Republican Party. I am confident that the farmer of the West and the laboring man of the East and North will rise in united action to protest against this measure and punish the Republican Party, which has given them a stone when they asked for bread.

The high cost of living is the great question which is close to every American household, and the burden will be added to by this Republican tariff bill.

There are in the main three ways in which the Federal Government derives its revenues. First, by the income tax law; second, by internal-revenue taxes, as the tax on tobacco; and third, by the tariff tax. These sources of taxation account for practically all of the revenue received by the Federal Government. It should be carefully borne in mind that the Federal Government has an entirely different method of raising revenue from the county and State governments. The State taxes its citizen on what he is worth. The man with a hundred thousand dollars' worth of property pays to his State exactly 100 times as much tax as does the man with $1,000 worth of property. In the State the poor man with no property pays no tax, but the Federal Government, under the system of tariff laws, forces the citizen to pay taxes on what he consumes. The higher the tariff the more tax he must pay. It can be easily seen, therefore, as a matter of justice, that no tariff should be levied except for the absolute necessity of the Government. Under a tariff law like the proposed Republican bill the poorest laboring man with a family dependent on him will pay more tax to the Government than will the rich man who has no family to support, because the tariff law puts a tax on the articles consumed, and it is obvious that the poor man with his family will consume more of the necessities of life than will the rich man with no dependents.

The fact being evident, no party has the right to lay the heavy hand of taxation on the poor because he is forced to consume in order that he and his children may live, and the party which is responsible for such a scheme of taxation against the poor should be forever doomed. The income tax, one of the three methods of taxation for the Federal Government, is the only tax law based upon the wealth of the citizen, and the Democratic Party is responsible for its enactment. This law, to some extent at least, raises the load of taxation from the shoulders of the poor man. As long as the Republican Party was in power it fought the enactment of the income tax law in order that they might do as they are doing in this law; namely, to protect the rich manufacturer from paying his just share of the taxes for the support of his Government. Wealth means luxury for the owner and luxuries and not necessities should bear the burden of taxation, yet under this bill diamonds are permitted to come into this country with but a nominal tax while actual necessities of clothing are taxed to an enormous degree. Of the thousands of articles which come under the provisions of this bill and which enter into the daily life of the citizen, all are taxed at the port of entry with higher duties than ever before in our history. Under such conditions, pray what excuse can the average citizen have for casting his vote for the Republican Party which is foisting this iniquity upon the American people? It is hard to employ polite language in describing the evil characteristics of this tariff bill.

In order that I may be fair in describing the bad features of this measure I will use the words printed in the report made by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee:

> It is doubtful if in the history of political affairs a measure so irredeemably and universally vicious has ever been submitted to the lawmaking power of a civilized society as H. R. 7456.
> In these days when the cost of living is so high and unemployment so widespread that many millions are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain means of subsistence, the American Congress is asked to make dearer and therefore scarcer the commodities essential to support of human life. At the very time when extraordinary efforts are afoot to save from utter ruin great nations, devastated by the late war, it is proposed by this bill to declare a savage commercial war upon the whole human family. Its adoption will be the establishment by the United States of an economic boycott against the civilized world. The countries that fought with us in the late war will be victims of its savagery in exactly the same degree as those who fought against us, while at the same time it will oppress grievously our own people, who would indeed be its chief victims were it not that nations reduced to extremity of distress—literally gasping for breath—through the most destructive war ever waged, will suffer still more severely from its operation, because all efforts to restore their industrial life to normal conditions will be grievously impeded, if not wholly frustrated, by the drastic restrictions on trade which it imposes.
> It is conspiracy to benefit a few favorites at the expense of all humanity. Like every conspiracy it has been hatched in secrecy.

The above quotation is a fair statement, and you will observe that it is not any stronger in criticism than is the statement of that courageous Republican, Mr. FREAR, of the Ways and Means Committee. This pending bill not only raises tariff rates to oppress the majority of American citizens but dashes to the ground the rising hopes of all mankind to get back to the paths of peace and prosperity.

The greatest breeder of trusts and monopolies is the protective tariff system. The history of our country will fully bear out this statement. When a protective tariff has shut out importations of manufactured goods from foreign countries it is much easier for the domestic manufacturers to get together into a combination to maintain any price they set on their products, and they have never failed to take advantage of their opportunity under high tariff Republican laws. A combination of domestic manufacturers to gouge the American public is not possible when foreign manufacturers have access to our home markets. The high and prohibitive tariff wall which this measure will build around our Republic will invite the manufacturers on our shores to combine as they did in the old days and pillage the American consumer according to their own sweet will.

In the old days of Republican control the greatest menace which confronted the people was the open and defiant attitude of the great trusts of the country, which were built up under Republican rule and were permitted unchallenged to exploit the American people. The Republican Party is now writing on the statute books of the Nation a tariff law which will enable these great trusts to be resurrected and to again cast their dark shadows over American business and enterprise and to again force the American public to submit to industrial slavery.

It is not my purpose to take up the time of the House in discussing the many schedules embraced in this bill. The same principle is behind each schedule and the thousands of articles mentioned in the bill, namely, the principle of protection to the manufacturer and the levying of tribute on the consumer. The debate has clearly brought to the surface the greed and selfishness which underlies all protective-tariff legislation. The manufacturing interests, especially of New England, are controlling this measure, and they have in the main been successful in having put on the free list the raw materials which they must buy for manufacture, but in almost every instance they have succeeded in getting high tariff duties on every article manufactured in New England. If there was ever a tariff bill drawn in the financial interest of one small section of our country it is certainly the pending Fordney high protective, prohibitive tariff measure.

The bill is sectional and against all principles of American justice and fair play. The day of sectionalism should be a thing of the past in our great country, and the American Congress should legislate for the good and welfare of the people as a whole. The greatest good for the greatest number should be the golden rule of legislation, and this has always been the policy of the Democratic Party. The pending bill violates every right of the great majority and legislates simply in the interest of a small minority.

It has always been the cry of the Republican Party during political campaigns that the great financial panics of the country came under low-tariff Democratic bills. The reverse is true, and the impartial reading of the history of our country will prove that the greatest financial panics came under high-tariff laws. The great panics of 1873 and 1893 came on the country when Republican tariff bills were the law of the land. Our Republican friends do not in any political campaign fail to misrepresent the facts if they think that by so doing they can gain political victories. The last presidential campaign is the most open evidence of this statement in our political history. In closing this statement I wish to emphasize further the fundamental difference between the Democratic and Republican Parties on the tariff issue.

The Democratic Party levies a tariff tax only for the purpose of raising revenue to pay the running expenses of the Government economically administered; the Republican Party levies a tariff tax openly and brazenly declaring that it is simply for the purpose of protecting the manufacturer. The Democratic policy means a low tariff and low taxes on articles consumed. The Republican policy means a high tariff and high taxes on articles consumed in this country by our own citizens. Our form of government can only be maintained by legislating for the best interests of the masses, and this the Democratic Party from the days of Jefferson until the present has always done when it was in power. The Republican Party ignores the welfare of the masses and legislates only for the rich and favored few by giving them special privileges under high protective tariffs.

The Democratic Party believes in a tariff for the people, while the Republican Party believes in a tariff for capital only.

The Democratic Party lays a tariff burden justly and equitably distributed and falling lightly on the shoulders of the people, while the Republican Party lays a burden of taxation heavily on the shoulders of labor and agriculture and gives the bounty so raised into the pockets of the favored manufacturer.

The Democratic policy of the tariff shields the people from the exactions of home monopolies and trusts, while the Republican tariff laws offer a shelter for monopoly and bids welcome to every combination of capital which would oppress the people.

The Democratic policy on the tariff gives every citizen an equal chance and opportunity under our laws, while the Republican policy gives out special privileges to the selected few.

The Democratic policy is the American policy of the square deal, while the Republican policy is un-American in every detail and particular. I have an abiding faith that in the next election the American people will return to American policies and to the Democratic ideal of "equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

The Republican Party in all of its campaigns has charged that the Democratic Party lacked constructive ability and was unable to properly conduct the Government. All fair-minded people know, of course, that such a charge is purely for political effect and that such a charge is contrary to the history of our country. To call to mind those things fresh in the memory of the people I assert without fear of contradiction that during the eight years of the administration of Woodrow Wilson more constructive legislation in behalf of the people was written on the statute books of our Nation than under any previous administration in our history, and the substantial achievements brought about during the eight years of Democratic control will make up the brightest pages of our national history.

Under the Wilson administration the greatest war in the world's history was fought and won. Let us not forget that Woodrow Wilson was Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy in that great struggle. The American Army and Navy brought the World War to a successful conclusion and secured imperishable fame for the American Republic. The Democratic administration financed not only the World War for our own country, but financed our allies and came through without a panic and with the credit of our Nation secure—surely in a business way the most stupendous undertaking in history.

The Democratic Party passed the Federal reserve law, which has made us the debtor Nation of the earth.

The Democratic Party passed the Federal farm loan law, which enables the farmer to borrow money on long-term notes at low rates of interest in order that the farms of our country might be developed and our food supply made secure.

The Democratic Party passed the Underwood tariff law under which our Nation saw the greatest prosperity in its history.

The Democratic Party and its leaders had control and won the war and the Republican Party during its two years of power has been unable to even make a treaty of peace.

The Democratic Party passed the Smith-Lever agricultural extension act, established the Bureau of Markets, the Bureau of Farm Management, the cotton futures act, the grain grades bill, the cooperative farm administration act, and the Federal warehouse act.

It was the Democratic Party which developed the parcels post act and gave the American people relief from the express companies' trust.

The Democratic Party established the Department of Labor and gave the laboring men a member in the President's Cabinet.

The Democratic Party passed the child labor act and the workingmen's compensation act.

The Democratic Party established a women's bureau in the Department of Labor, which has since been destroyed by a Republican Congress, withholding appropriations for its support.

It was a Democratic President who appeared before Congress and urged that the woman suffrage amendment be submitted to the States for ratification.

A list of other measures enacted under a Democratic administration for the public welfare could be named, but to what single measure can the Republican Party, since its two years in power, point with pride in the interest of the great majority of American citizens? Let it be remembered that the Republican Party has had a majority in both branches of Congress for the past two years.

Our great leader, Woodrow Wilson, was stricken down before his administration came to a close, but the great record which the Democratic Party made under his leadership will always be an inspiration to those who love justice and to those whose hearts go out to struggling humanity. He was cut down in the prime of life, but his words and deeds will be forever honored and cherished because he labored for humanity with the ideals of the Democratic Party always before him as his guiding star. Let those who love justice and equality before the law; let those who believe in serving the masses rather than the classes; let those who want to see America take her rightful place as the leader of nations strike hands with the Democratic Party, so that progress and not reaction shall be our national policy.

OF

HON. EARL C. MICHENER,

OF MICHIGAN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I am one of those who have always believed that the tariff should be taken out of politics and placed in the hands of a nonpartisan tariff commission. The wisdom of this conclusion is proven beyond a doubt by the debate on this tariff bill. With the exception of the speeches made by the members of the committee explaining the various schedules and rates, the debate has been devoted almost entirely to the old political question of tariff for protection or free trade. The protective tariff policy and not the bill has been discussed. Of course, some of our Democratic friends insist that free trade is a misnomer and assert that they believe in a tariff for revenue only. If a tariff is levied upon importations solely for the purpose of raising revenue, then the advocates of that system oppose a protective tariff and are in reality free-traders. This being true, a tariff commission, having in mind the raising of revenue only, would necessarily avoid placing any tariff for the purpose of protection, and on the other hand, if a majority of the commission believed in a protective tariff we might expect a revision of the tariff on a protective basis. Practically all of the speeches made have either extolled the virtues of the protective system or condemned that system and advocated free trade in so far as possible.

Personally, I am a protectionist. I would not build a tariff wall around this country so high and so impregnable that the products of other nations would be utterly excluded, but I would at all times maintain that wall at such a height as would insure the operation and prosperity of American industry. I believe in the American people, in American institutions, and know that much of the real prosperity of this country has, in the days gone by, been due to a protective tariff system. There is no other real way by which American standards of living can be maintained. Our industries pay the highest wages in the world; our wage earners maintain the highest standards of living anywhere to be found. The prosperity of these industries, the wages paid, and the standard of living established, have been brought about by reason of the fact that the United States has, by a tariff wall, made it possible for these industries to flourish and these wage earners to prosper. A discussion of the merits of a protective tariff or a tariff for revenue only is, I believe, at this time, academic. This is surely true so far as the section of the country from which I come is concerned.

In Michigan we have always believed in a protective tariff. Not a tariff which prohibits, but one that does prohibit the importation into this country of any article which will compete with American industry, the manufacturer, and the farmer, unless a duty is paid at the border which at all times safeguards our home institutions and our home labor.

Of course, it is impossible for each Member of Congress to be familiar with all the items included in the Fordney bill. The several schedules contain thousands of items and the bill itself covers 346 pages. The Ways and Means Committee has been working on this legislation for many months, and the Members of this body who are not on that committee must of necessity rely largely upon the committee's judgment as to the amount of the rates levied. We are assured by the committee that these rates have been established after a thorough consideration and after very carefully considering all the evidence obtainable. On the whole, the rates are lower than those contained in the Payne-Aldrich bill and, of course, higher than those contained in the disastrous Underwood bill. Much has been said about the American valuation clause in the Fordney bill. Common sense dictates that this system should have been adopted years ago. The fact that the foreign valuation system was used in the beginning seems to be the precedent for and the only reason for continuing that system down through the years. In my judgment, it will be much easier to arrive at the proper valuation under this system of valuation, and so eminent an authority in matters of this kind as Herbert Hoover, of the Department of Commerce, tells us that this is the only practical method to pursue under existing conditions. No opportunity will be permitted to offer amendments to the bill on the floor excepting committee amendments. While the rule under which the legislation is being considered on its face does not prevent the offering of amendments, yet the practical operation of the rule will have this effect. I do not believe in camouflaging anything.

A tariff bill is a Republican measure. Our Democratic friends, if given an opportunity, would attempt to ruin the legislation by unreasonable amendments; not for the purpose of bettering the legislation but for the purpose of destroying the legislation. We Republicans believe one thing about the tariff; the Democrats believe another thing. Therefore, our party will be responsible for this legislation and we should assume the authority to make the law in accordance with our theories and our policies. In the Republican national platform we promised to do this, and I for one am ready to assume my part of the responsibility.

It is urged that this is not the proper time to revise the tariff. No one can deny that the conditions throughout the world are much disturbed, and that it may be necessary to revise certain rates in this legislation as time goes on. However, it is of prime importance that the bars be put up at the earliest possible moment to keep out the importations which are now flooding our markets, silencing our mills and factories, depriving our citizens of work, and robbing the farmer of a reasonable price for his finished products.

The enactment into law of this tariff measure will not solve all our economic ills but will go a long way toward helping us get back to normalcy. Personally, I was one of those who felt that the present special session should give its first attention to the revision of the tax laws. I appreciate that labor can not prosper in this country without a prosperous employer. We all want to get along well, and our present tax laws, enacted to raise revenue to carry on the war, are not adapted to peace-time prosperity. The excess-profits tax should be removed and the law must be revised in many other respects, the principal thing being that business men will know what taxes they must pay and the manner in which they must pay them. We are assured, however, that the Ways and Means Committee will immediately begin the consideration of these changes, and I predict that before the 1st of September this House will have passed a revised tax law.

The Fordney bill gives more consideration to the products of the farm than any tariff bill ever enacted by any country. The Congress appreciates that if a tariff is good for the factory it must be good for the farm. There was a time when this protection was not necessary, but to-day if the American farmer is to continue to live as he is now living, if he is to produce the things we eat and the things we wear, if his children are to enjoy the advantages to which they are entitled, he must receive such price for his products and his labor as will insure the continuation of his business. His farm is his factory, his produce is his finished product, his standard of living is different than the general standard maintained by the farmer in any other land, and it is just as essential that he receive this protection as it is that the factory be protected.

I shall vote for the tariff on hides, and I am perfectly willing to vote for a reasonable compensatory duty on leather. Careful study of all the facts has changed my views to some extent in reference to a tariff on hides. I am well satisfied that a tariff on hides will make very little difference to the man in my district who sells a hide. I also feel that the man who sells his cattle will receive little, if any, additional compensation because there happens to be a small tariff on hides. I do not believe that a tariff of 15 per cent ad valorem on hides should warrant more than a 5 per cent compensatory duty on leather, and am satisfied that this compensatory duty would not be reflected in the price of boots and shoes and leather articles generally. It sounds well to tell the farmer that we are placing a tariff on his hides and then opposing a like protection on the article made from the hides. Many votes cast in the House during the consideration of this bill have shown that to some a protective tariff is a local measure. The New England Representatives want high protection for their factories' products; at the same time they insist upon free raw material.

And I want to say to you gentlemen from this section right now, that the time is past when we can or will receive such consideration. If we men who represent the agricultural districts, which raise the things which your factories use and which your employees consume, and which furnish protective-tariff majorities on election day, are denied protection for our finished products which, in some cases, constitute your raw material, then you can not expect us to continue this policy of favoritism. If a protective tariff is good for the factory it is good for the farmer, and if the factory is to have this protection the farmer demands it.

I shall have no hesitancy in voting to amend the present bill placing crude oil on the free list. To me there is a difference in protecting an infant industry or a home industry which is being developed, and where the article manufactured or produced can be replaced. Oil is a natural resource, and if we are to believe the authorities our present known supply will be exhausted in approximately 15 years. If this is true, then we must eventually get our supply from other sources, and it has been the policy of our Government to encourage American capital to invest in and develop foreign oil fields. This protection on oil is only asked for by a limited number of independent operators. In fact, the independent producers themselves voted, by a vote of 90 to 43, for a protection on oil. This is sufficient evidence to satisfy anyone that a tariff is not necessary on oil to preserve the industry. Gasoline and oil products are already too high.

As a general proposition, I am opposed to embargoes. However, I am convinced that the situation in reference to dyestuffs which confronts the American people is one of vast importance.

At the beginning of the war the United States was not able to manufacture dyes of fast color. Indeed, the red and the blue in our very flag was put there by German dyes. Germany had developed this industry while we had neglected it. This is a key industry, and of absolute necessity in time of war, because dye is a coal-tar product, and the dye factories are very readily turned into factories for the manufacture of gases, chemicals, and high explosives. No tariff can be placed on certain dyes which will be high enough to exclude German dyes until the American industry is thoroughly established, and if there is to be a monopoly on dyes I for one favor an American monopoly to a German monopoly.

I shall also vote to place asphalt on the free list. There was not a scintilla of evidence given before the committee showing the necessity of placing this product upon the protected list. Never in our history did we need road-building material so badly. The amount of asphalt imported is negligible. And to me a tariff at this time would simply give the combinations which control asphalt in this country an opportunity to raise the price. It is said that the asphalt resources of this country are in the hands of a trust. If this be true, then I for one believe in proceeding against this trust in a proper way through the Department of Justice, and do not favor penalizing all of the American people who are using our roads and roofs and other asphalt creations by giving this trust an excuse for raising prices.

Time prevents my mentioning other items covered in this bill. We are told that in addition to the protective feature this measure will yield over $500,000,000 revenue annually. Of course, this amount will depend upon importations. We must trade with foreign countries if we are to find a market for our surplus products and if we are to keep upon the seas our much-talked-of merchant marine.

The Fordney bill will not interfere with the importation of commodities which we do not produce. It will not stop the importation of commodities which we do produce, unless the barring out of these commodities is necessary for the safeguarding of American capital and the preservation of American standards of living. The duties imposed represent the difference between the cost of production at home and the cost of production abroad, and no industry or manufacturing institution is by the terms of this legislation given protection which is not absolutely necessary to its continued operation. I am for the American market, for the American manufacturer, and have an abiding faith that where proper protection is given American genius will make home competition keen, and in this way, and with our ingenuity and facilities, we will in many lines be able to compete with all comers, and the ultimate result must be the placing in foreign lands of the products of our factories and our farms.

Emergency Tariff.

HON. JAMES A. REED,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,

Tuesday, May 10, 1921.

The Senate had under consideration the bill (H. R. 2435) imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, and to provide revenue; to regulate commerce with foreign countries; to prevent dumping of foreign merchandise on the markets of the United States; to regulate the value of foreign money, and for other purposes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] has just concluded a very interesting speech. It can be fairly summarized as follows: "I have finally concluded to vote for the pending bill, but I want everybody to understand that I am obliged to hold my nose."

Only a few weeks since, the Senator voted against an almost identical bill. The chief reason he assigns for changing front is that the present bill which he supports will only remain in force 6 months, whereas the former bill which he opposed would have been in force 10 months. In a word, the less there is of the thing the better the Senator likes it. If the bill were to be in force 10 months it would be utterly abhorrent, but if the time is to be reduced 6 months it may be accepted "fingers to the nose." Why, then, I inquire, not carry the process of subtraction to the zero point? In that event the Senator could assume his ordinary attitude and endure without torture the atmosphere of his own vote. [Laughter.]

We have heard thus far nothing but apologies for this bill. Perhaps we should except the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] who is valorously backed by the Senator from Pennsylvania. "Farmer PENROSE" has recently manifested great anxiety for the welfare of his brother agriculturalist. He has in the last few days insisted that the bill be rushed to passage and thereby—as he would have us believe—the price of all farm products immediately increased, the downtrodden farmer rescued from bankruptcy and started triumphantly upon the highway of glorious prosperity.

With what indescribable pleasure the farmers of the great wheat and corn belt will welcome this new champion of their cause. Hereafter at eventide they will resign themselves to the embrace of peaceful slumber and the delights of happy dreams, serenely confident that the Senator from Pennsylvania holds sleepless vigil to guard their interests. [Laughter.]

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, will the Senator, as he is referring to me, permit a slight allusion?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. PENROSE. I want to remind the Senator of the fact that the imperial Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which I in part represent in this body, ranks twelfth or fourteenth in agricultural products in the United States, and that one county—the county of Lancaster—has had in every decennial census for some six or seven decades the distinction of being the richest county in the United States in annual production. It may arouse the Senator's interest also to know that Pennsylvania produces more hay than any other State in the Union.

Mr. REED. Probably so, but its products are not limited to hay nor its citizenry to farmers. It is the habitat of other things. [Laughter.]

At least in my section of the country the Senator from Pennsylvania has not in the past been regarded as a particular champion of the tillers of the soil. I am therefore rejoiced that I can now assure them that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE], now experiencing the ecstacies of recent conversion, are looking after their interests and that they need no longer care for themselves. They are to be hereafter gathered within the protecting arms of PENROSE and EDGE. They will undoubtedly be "taken care of." [Laughter.]

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. FRANCE. I merely want to say that I am assured by prominent agriculturists of Pennsylvania that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] has always been most friendly to the agricultural interests. He has made many a fight for laws for the protection of the rights of farmers, particularly on the oleomargarine question and other questions of vital interest to the agricultural workers of the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED. When I find the Senator from Maryland collaborating with the Senator from Pennsylvania I can do no more than to reverently exclaim, "How beautiful a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The cup of my happiness is full; the case is complete. There can no longer be doubt that the farmers of the great West may repose in perfect security.

But I remark that, if the newspapers were to be credited, one of the first interviews the Senator from Pennsylvania gave out, just before or immediately after this session of Congress met, was to the effect "that this farmers' tariff bill had been laid aside permanently." The Senator has experienced a change of heart. Perhaps before I conclude my remarks the reason may appear.

I now yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I merely wish the RECORD to be correct on this matter. As a matter of fact, the Senator from Pennsylvania and myself are often found voting together, particularly where agricultural interests are involved, and I would remind the distinguished Senator from Missouri that the acid test of a Senator's attitude toward the agricultural interests of this country was presented by the food-control bill, the most hostile bill ever presented to the Congress of the United States, so far as agricultural interests are concerned. The RECORD will show that the Senator from Missouri, who has always been a friend of the agricultural interests; the Senator from Pennsylvania, who has also been their friend; and the then junior Senator from Maryland, myself, voted against that bill, and I am proud of it. That, I think, was the acid test of a man's attitude toward the agricultural interests of the country, and I am very happy to say that the distinguished Senator from Missouri, the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, and myself stood that acid test.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am quite willing to admit that when any Senator votes with me he is for the nonce voting right. Was it not Cicero who declared, "He who throws the javelin all day must needs sometimes hit the mark"? So I can understand why gentlemen, who are usually wrong, may happen occasionally to be right, in which case they naturally vote with me. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] clearly indicated his utter disgust with the old-fashioned Republican tariff doctrine. Declaring that the great automobile factory of the present can not be run on the principle of the wagon shop of the past, he drew the deduction that we must not cling to the obsolete notions of 20 years ago, and added that it was about time we should "get down to the basis of common sense." To the Senator from New Jersey, the Democratic Party extends its hand and exclaims, "Welcome, brother." The conversion of the Senator may be regarded as presaging the faint auroral dawn of that day when the Republican Party will recognize certain great economic facts, among which are these:

That we can not get rich swapping with ourselves; that we can not sell goods abroad unless we also buy abroad; that we can not send our merchant marine out laden to the water line and bring it back in ballast and keep the fleet afloat; that if we are to employ the 51 per cent of our population now residing in cities, we must find a foreign market for the surplus goods they produce; that if our surplus goods plus the enormous costs of shipment can be sold in foreign countries in competition with all the world, the claim that they need protection at home, within the very shadows of their factories and under the smoke of their chimneys, is an absurdity that can not be justified. In brief, we must abandon the fallacies of protection for the rule of common sense. I am glad, therefore, that the Senator from New Jersey tells us that he proposes hereafter—saving his vote on this bill—to "adopt common sense" as his guide. Accordingly, I commend him to a reading of Democratic platforms. They may aid him to reach the new goal toward which, somewhat late in life, he is turning his tardy feet.

Mr. President, this bill bears the alluring title of "The farmers' protective bill." It is in fact loaded with provisions to advantage the manufacturers and the great organizations we commonly call trusts. I assert that "it was conceived in fraud and brought forth in iniquity." In the last analysis, it is a fake, pure and simple. It is an insult to the intelligence of the farmers of the United States, who will speedily discover it has benefited them not a dollar, but that it has directly increased the profits of the great protected industries and that it will be employed in the future to justify additional exactions they are now preparing to demand.

Hitherto the proponents of the protective theory have gone no further than to assert that the American manufacturer could not compete with his foreign rival. Now we are told that not only the manufacturer but the farmer and the producer of every kind of article must be protected. Thus, heaping absurdity upon absurdity, we come to this, that the American citizen is the most helpless man in all the world. He can not compete with any man of any country on any single article produced by human skill even when aided by natural advantages or the beneficence of God. Hence, it is asserted that we must build a tariff fence around the country, to adopt the old phrase, homely but very expressive, "horse-high, hog-tight, and bull-strong."

If that be true then we can not ship a single thing abroad, because if we can not compete in our own markets with foreign goods shipped here, we can not ship goods thousands of miles from our shores and sell them in competition with the world. Clearly we can not do this unless we sell our goods abroad for less than they are sold to our own people. That monstrous proposition has indeed been suggested, but the American people will hardly consent to the creation of a tariff wall which prevents them from buying goods abroad and enables American trusts to charge them high prices while it is selling its goods abroad at low prices.

Moreover, while we shut the world out of our markets, we shut ourselves out of the world markets. Trade must be mutual. If we are to sell, we must likewise buy.

The doctrine that no American product can compete with foreign products is the more astonishing in view of the fact that at the present time all of the world is largely dependent upon the United States for financial support.

The absurdity of the claim is further manifest when we consider that our exports have increased from $1,829,000,000 in 1910 to the enormous total of $7,750,000,000 in 1919.

The absurdity is increased by the fact that we have just finished the creation of a great merchant marine for the purpose of trading with the world, yet we are asked to build a tariff wall to prohibit that very trade.

It is claimed, however, that this bill is intended to meet a temporary emergency created by the importation of large quantities of agricultural products which it is asserted are just now, for some mysterious reason, being dumped upon the United States. I shall, I think, demonstrate beyond peradventure that if any such condition ever existed it has now ceased to exist. The bill is brought forward after the alleged emergency has passed. The fire department is dashing across the country with the Senator from Pennsylvania on the front seat lashing his prancing steeds and the Senator from North Dakota on the back step of the engine shoveling coal in response to a false alarm turned in by the Senators themselves. Even at that, their arrival is so late the crowd has discovered the alarm was a fake and has disgustedly dispersed.

As is well known, the products of our farmers from last year's crops are nearly all in the hands of the great manufacturers, the middlemen, and the speculators. The proper title to this bill would be: "A bill for the relief of the factories, the middlemen, and the speculators in farm products; to deceive farmers, bamboozle Democratic statesmen, and to afford an excuse for a sky-high tariff to bleed the farmers and the American people, and for other nefarious purposes."

A plain statement of the case is—

1. That the bill is brought forward after the importation of farm products into the United States has practically ceased.

2. After the dire predictions that the country was about to be flooded with importations of farm products have been proven false.

3. After the crop of 1920 has nearly all been sold by the farmers and is in the hands of middlemen, speculators, and manufacturers.

4. The bill by its express terms expires in six months, so it will have ceased to be a law before the crop of 1921 can be harvested and marketed by the farmers.

In brief, the bill can not benefit the farmer, who has already sold the crop of 1920; neither can it benefit him on the crop of 1921, for before it can be marketed the bill will have expired by limitation.

Behold the miserable farce as it proceeds! The Senator from Pennsylvania to the center of the stage in the rôle of a king with Democratic Senators as his humble servitors.

I present a collation of the bill showing the articles that are taxed, the present rate of duty, and the proposed rate.

I also print at the close of my remarks certain tables compiled from the latest official reports. Careful examination of these tables will show that the articles affected by the present bill naturally divide themselves in three groups.

(a) Those articles of which we annually export much more than we import.

These articles are:

	Annual production in United States, 1920.	Exports.	Imports.
Wheat	937,265,000 bushels	218,280,000 bushels	37,756,000 bushels.
Corn	2,858,590,000 bushels	17,761,000 bushels	7,744,000 bushels.
Meat and dairy products.	Not given	$1,160,643	$37,368,000.
Tobacco	1,064,000 pounds	467,679 pounds	82,221 pounds.
Potatoes[1]	430,458,000 bushels	4,153,000 bushels	6,062,000 bushels.
Apples	2,187,000 bushels	1,797,000 bushels	Practically none.
Butter[2]	Not given	34,556,000 pounds	9,519,000 pounds.
Cheese[3]	do	16,291,000 pounds	15,993,000 pounds.
Milk[4]	do	414,250,000 gallons	27,873,000 pounds.
Onions[5]	11,920,000 bushels	945,000 bushels	1,819,000 bushels.
Rice	3,220,000 pounds	392,312,000 pounds	142,951,000 pounds.

[1] The average imports over a period of seven years are far below the exports. At the present time we are exporting heavily and importing practically no potatoes.

[2] The imports for 1920 exceeded the exports for, I think, a single year but the general average for years show that exports far exceed imports and the amount imported is inconsequential, when considered in connection with the vast amount produced.

[3] The general average for several years show the exports to have largely exceeded the imports.

[4] The general average of exports and imports show an ever greater disparity and the total amount of either exports or imports is almost inconsequential when compared with the vast amount produced and consumed.

[5] The general average for years show more exports than imports.

Of the above articles wheat, flour, corn, meats, milk, and potatoes are at present on the free list. They are under this bill highly taxed.

Onions, tobacco, butter, cheese, and rice are at present dutiable. The present bill largely increases the rate of duty.

(b) The imports exceed the exports on the following articles: Wool, sugar, peanuts, olives, live cattle, sheep, vegetable oils, flaxseed.

Of the following articles we import considerably more than we export, some of the articles not being produced in this country at all, some being of an inferior quality, and in other instances, notably sugar, the country being unable to produce enough for home consumption. Among the latter are peanuts, sugar, wool, flaxseed, olives.

(c) Cotton: Cotton should be considered by itself, because the tariff is not intended to apply to ordinary cotton produced generally in the United States. It is limited to that variety commonly known as sea-island cotton, a cotton of a very long fiber. That cotton can only be produced in very small areas of the United States. It will only grow in a few places. We can not therefore produce anything like the quantity demanded. It is used to mix with our ordinary domestic cotton, and it is also employed in the manufacture of a very superior brand of cotton garments which resemble silk. This cotton can never be produced in the United States in sufficient quantities to supply the demand. The proposed tariff will benefit a few producers and will operate to the detriment of the ordinary cotton producer, because the long-staple cotton can be advantageously mixed with the staple cotton commonly grown. The insignificance of the importations compared with the total production is illustrated by the fact that in 1920 we grew in this country 11,420,000 bales of cotton. We exported 6,159,000 bales and we only imported 600,000 bales.

What I have said very briefly condenses the purport of the bill and throws into relief the salient facts necessary to its proper analysis.

It will be observed that we have taken from the free list nearly all of the chief farm products and levied a high tariff duty on them.

Wheat heads the list with a prohibitive duty of 35 cents per bushel. An examination of the arguments advanced in the support of the bill will demonstrate that they are without support of either logic or fact. An almost identical bill was before the last session of Congress and suffered a pocket veto. The arguments then adduced are being rehashed now. Condensed they amount to this:

(1) That this country was being inundated by a vast flood of farm products from other countries.

(2) That these importations were coming in an increasing rate and that countless bushels of wheat, corn, and other products would be dumped upon the country in the three or four months succeeding the month of December, 1920.

It is now asserted that these conditions still exist and that unless this bill is enacted the country will be ruined. Upon the other hand it is claimed that if the bill is passed the price of American farm products will at once rise to the level of the prices paid in the early part of 1920.

In proof of this I cite the following statement made by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] when the substantial duplicate of this bill was before the Senate during the last session of Congress. On the 14th of December, 1920, he declared:

> If we could stop imports in a month the price of American wheat would be as high as it was a year ago, in my opinion, because there would be a shortage.

He further stated:

> Reports a few days since indicate over 72,585,000 bushels of wheat received at elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur; 45,420,000 bushels have been shipped to the United States, and it is prophesied that there will be considerable in addition to this.
> The 45,000,000 bushels already dispatched to Buffalo or other northern ports take no account of the enormous shipments that have gone forward since December 3, up to which date the records were available. Five million bushels still can be placed aboard vessels now lying in harbor, and before navigation closes Canada will have sent to the United States ports, through elevators here, about 56,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Let us see how much truth there was in that statement, a statement which was accepted by the Senate as a fact and which became the chief basis of argument for a protective tariff upon wheat. The fact was that during the entire year of 1920 we only imported from Canada 37,756,000 bushels of wheat, whereas our friends would have us believe there were 56,000,000 bushels of wheat coming in in the single month of December.

It can not be argued that the wheat came in after the month of December because in the month of January we only imported 4,504,000 bushels, in February 4,403,000 bushels, and in March the importations had fallen to 2,671,000 bushels.

In a word the importations from Canada have already fallen to almost the normal.

I shall show in a moment that wheat comes to us from Canada for economic reasons and that it does not substantially reduce the price paid for the domestic product.

Mr. President, I wish to dwell for a moment upon the Canadian situation, because in my opinion it lies at the very basis of our foreign trade. Canada is to-day and has for years been the best customer of the United States. I insert a table giving a comparison of our business with Canada and with other countries of the world:

	Exports of domestic.	Imports.

Referring to the table it will be found that if we go to 1913 as the year of normality, we exported to Canada in that year—in round numbers—products worth $403,000,000, and imported products worth $142,000,000. The balance of trade in our favor was $261,000,000.

In 1919 we exported to Canada $734,000,000 worth of our products; we imported $494,000,000 worth of products; and we had a balance of trade in our favor of $239,000,000.

Now, let us stop a moment and ask why we should not trade with Canada. There is nothing between Canada and the United States but a red line drawn on the map. The soil of North Dakota and of all of our Northwestern States runs directly on into Canada. They have the same kind of soils there, speaking broadly, that we have in northern United States. They have a population that is more like the population of the United States than has any other people of any land whatsoever. One may visit in Canada and be there a month and scarcely realize that he is outside the borders of the United States. The Canadians pay a little higher farm wages than we do in the United States. That is due to the fact that in a new country wages always are higher than in a country thoroughly developed. The Canadians use the same kind of farm implements, and they buy them nearly all from us. They have the same language, the same school system, the same religion, the same hopes, the same code of morals, and the same high ambition and desire to succeed. They are so much like the people of the United States that I would they were a part of the United States, although I do not expect to see them so.

Mr. POMERENE. They also have the same blood.

Mr. REED. And, sir, as is suggested by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE], they have the same blood as have the people of the United States. Why, then, should we not trade with those people? Trade is based upon economic reasons. We trade with a man because he has something that we want, and we have something he wants. Trade is not based upon the question of national allegiance; it is founded upon mutual advantage. If it be conceded that the people of the United States have enough sense to take care of themselves, we are confronted here with the question of barring us from trade with a country exactly like ours.

If it be asked why Canadian wheat comes to Minneapolis and other great centers of the United States, I answer by asking, why does wheat go from North Dakota to Minneapolis? Both questions are answered by the map which I have had suspended from the wall of the Chamber. If Senators will look on that map and observe the heavy blue lines, they will see that the great trunk lines of railroad run from North Dakota down to Minneapolis. When a farmer wants to get his wheat to a mill, he puts it on a car that is going to the mill, and that is all there is to it.

However, those same lines of railroad cross the imaginary line between North Dakota and Canada and run into and tap the great wheat fields of Canada. The Canadian farmer, who is just across the line, puts his wheat in the same kind of cars on the same tracks that the North Dakota farmer does and sends it to Minneapolis, because it is where the cars go. The wheat seeks its natural outlet. Mr. President, it would be just as sensible to bar North Dakota wheat from Minneapolis as to bar Canadian wheat.

Some Canadian wheat, going over another great trunk line of road, reaches the Lake at Fort William, and there, following the shortest line of travel, it is hauled over the Great Lakes and is milled in the United States, because it is a little shorter and a little better route to a market where the mill is located which is to turn it into flour than it is to carry the wheat clear across the Dominion of Canada to the eastern coast.

Mr. President, when Canadian wheat, following the natural line of travel, comes into the United States and is milled here, does it affect the American market to any material extent? The answer to that is that when Canadian wheat reaches the United States it finds a market which is already oversupplied. That oversupplied market, whether the Canadian wheat comes in or not, must relieve itself by shipments abroad. A large percentage of Canadian wheat must go from Canada, ultimately to be consumed in Great Britain and other European countries. Likewise there goes from American ports a steady stream of American wheat, which must be consumed in the identical countries where the Canadian wheat must find its ultimate markets. There the two wheats meet; they are sold in competition, and the prices in the markets of Liverpool and Berlin fix the prices of the Canadian wheat and of the American wheat. If, therefore, some of the Canadian wheat, because it is raised along certain lines of railroads running into the United States, comes into the United States, it does not affect our market, probably, by so much as one penny, for we must in any event sell our surplus wheat abroad. The whole case is summed up in the statement that the Canadian wheat that crosses our northern line increases by a similar amount what we ship from our eastern ports to Europe. Stated differently, in effect the Canadian wheat is shipped to Europe via American ports instead of via the Canadian ports.

But in the meantime we have had the advantage of mixing the Canadian wheat with the American wheat, producing a better quality of flour than could otherwise have been produced; we have had the advantage of the profit of milling and transporting the Canadian grain; American labor has been employed to that extent, and American capital and labor enriched to that degree, and we have, as a further result, feed for our cattle.

I repeat—and I challenge the Senator from North Dakota to deny the assertion—that there is just as much reason economically for barring the wheat of North Dakota as there is for barring the wheat that is raised just north of the line of North Dakota.

Mr. President, we raised in this country last year, according to the estimates, 934,000,000 bushels of wheat. We shipped abroad approximately 218,000,000 bushels of that wheat. We had left for domestic consumption approximately 700,000,000 bushels of wheat. Now, I want to put to the test the statement that was made by the Senator from North Dakota, who is the leading exponent of this bill and is, therefore, receiving my particular attention. I want to put to the test the statement that he made and which I now again read to the Senate:

> If we could stop imports for a month, the price of American wheat would be as high as it was a year ago, in my opinion.

That statement was made in December, 1920. Let me assume that the Senator is right. The price of wheat at the time the Senator made that statement was $1.44; the price of wheat the year before was $2.15. The Senator tells us that with a crop of 934,000,000 bushels plus, if we had barred out 37,756,000 bushels coming from Canada, it would have raised the price of all the wheat in the United States by the difference between $1.44 and $2.15, which is 71 cents a bushel.

That is to say, that by adding a tariff of 35 cents a bushel we would increase the price 71 cents per bushel. Assuming for the moment that his figures are correct, let us see how much it would cost the American people. We consumed last year 700,000,000 bushels of wheat and we will consume an equal amount this year. If that 700,000,000 were increased by 71 cents per bushel, it would increase the price to the American consumer $497,000,000. If that is true, then the man who with his eyes open casts a vote for this bill, and thus places a tariff of $497,000,000 upon the American people, is guilty of not only a wrong but of a crime.

But how ridiculous is the statement that by putting a tariff of 35 cents per bushel on wheat imported into America we can thereby increase the price of wheat 71 cents per bushel. For, mark you, if that were the result, then a Canadian farmer could send his wheat into the United States, pay the 35-cent duty, receive the increased price of 71 cents, and at the end of the transaction be 36 cents per bushel richer than he was before the tariff was enacted. The inevitable result would be that our markets would immediately be flooded with all the wheat from Canada, because the Canadian trader could realize 35 cents more per bushel by shipping to this market than he could by shipping to other markets of the world.

And yet upon such a statement as that, so at war with everything that is reasonable that I can not characterize them in parliamentary language, this bill is predicated and we are asked to pass it.

But this is not all the story. Just as soon as this miracle is performed and American wheat goes to $2.15, all of our wheat shipped to Europe will begin to be shipped back, because its owner can make 36 cents a bushel by sending it back. That is an enormous profit. If it could be realized all the wheat of the world would soon be crowding American docks. It would come in such quantities we could not unload it. Manifestly, upon such an absurdity as that no bill should be bottomed.

Let us see how it will operate with corn. They tell us that if a tariff of 15 cents is levied upon corn, corn will be advanced to the American farmer by that 15 cents a bushel. What would that do to the consumer of American corn, to the people of the United States, to the cattle feeder and the hog feeder? What effect would it have upon the price of meats? How much would it cost in round numbers?

Last year we raised in this country 2,858,000,000 bushels of corn. If this tariff should add 15 cents a bushel to the price, then we would put a burden of $428,000,000 upon the American people for the corn that is consumed at home. This we are asked to do that we may keep out of this country how much corn? Why, sir, we imported in the month of March 7,000 bushels of corn, in the month of February 3,000 bushels of corn, in the month of January 8,000 bushels of corn, in all of last year 7,744,000 bushels of corn; and against that terrible menace we are asked to levy a tariff which they say will add 15 cents per bushel to the entire domestic production. The more reasonable proponents of this bill assert, however, that if this proposed tariff is levied it will increase the price of the products by the amount of the tariff. Let us examine that proposition for a minute, and see what that means to the American people, and then what the figures of the Senator from North Dakota mean to the American people. If the 35 cents tariff levied added 35 cents to the price of wheat, the price of the 700,000,000 bushels consumed by the people of the United States would be increased by $245,000,000, and the people of the United States would pay $245,000,000 for the purpose of keeping out a total of 37,756,000 bushels of wheat. Now, the 37,756,000 bushels of wheat at $2 a bushel—and wheat is not worth that—would bring only $75,512,000; so that the proponents of this bill tell us that they are going to levy a tax upon the American people of $245,000,000 in order to keep out wheat of the total value—at $2 a bushel—of $75,000,000. We had better buy the 37,756,000 bushels of Canadian wheat imported and burn it than do a thing like that.

Is there anything among all the absurdities that have ever been proposed equal to the proposition that you can levy a tariff of 15 cents a bushel on corn where we produce almost 3,000,000,000 bushels and, by keeping out 7,000,000 bushels through that tariff, increase the price of the 3,000,000,000 bushels by $428,000,000. Is there anything that has ever been proposed by any man outside of a lunatic asylum that is as ridiculous as the proposition that keeping out the 7,000,000 bushels of corn would in any serious manner affect the market of the United States?

This is especially manifest when we remember that always our exports of corn far exceed the imports.

Mr. President, if this pretense which is being given to the farmers were true; namely, that the tariff will increase the value of their products by the amount of the tariff; and if you should figure it upon beef, upon tobacco, upon rice, upon our meat and our dairy products, you would bankrupt the people of the United States. Moreover, you would bankrupt the farmer himself; for if it did operate to increase the price to the American farmer by the amount of the tariff, it would immediately make it impossible for us to sell our excess abroad, because there would be then two price levels, a low price abroad and a high price at home. The result would be that no one would sell abroad. Accordingly all the surplus would remain here and at once break the domestic market.

What an absurdity it is to say to the American farmer that he can be protected on wheat when he must sell nearly one-third of his entire crop abroad every year. When it goes abroad it is sold upon the level of foreign markets. The moment the price at home goes above the foreign market by virtue of a tariff or any other reason, the wheat ceases to go out, and then you have a surplus in your home market, and immediately the price goes down in the home market. How ridiculous to tell a farmer in a country where we raise 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn annually and import only 7,000,000 bushels, and export 17,000,000 bushels, that the American farmer can have the price of his corn increased by levying a tariff that shuts out 7,000,000.

What kind of logician conceived the idea that when we produce in the United States 2,500,000,000 pounds of rice every year, and having more than we can use, export 375,000,000 pounds, we can raise the price on the entire crop by levying a tariff upon rice? You say there are some importations. Yes; in the case of rice, we import about 8,000,000 pounds, but we send away 17,000,000 pounds—twice as much as we bring in.

It is no wonder that the proponents of such a bill flee the Chamber. Its doughty champions will be found here only to answer to their names on the roll call. Thus they pass this measure, with their fingers to their noses and a leer in their eyes, thinking they are imposing upon farmers. I know many farmers who have more sense than some United States Senators. The intelligent farmers will not be fooled by this measure.

Let us take the item of tobacco. We produced in this country in 1920, 1,508,000,000 pounds. We imported 82,000,000 pounds, but we exported 467,000,000 pounds. Clearly we imported some special varieties of tobacco which we could not advantageously raise here. This imported tobacco we use largely to mix with the domestic product. The sole effect of this tariff will be to raise the price to the American consumer on a variety of tobacco which the American farmer does not produce. Yet there are men who support this bill because of the tobacco schedule, vainly hoping that they may fool somebody who raises tobacco. Let me say to those gentlemen that the boy who has sense enough to pick tobacco worms off the plants in the field can see through so transparent a fraud and sham as this is.

Let us take the question of meats. The tariff which this bill proposes to levy upon meats is 2 cents a pound on fresh meat; on preserved meats, 25 per cent ad valorem. If the tariff does not add to the price, then clearly it does the farmer no good. If it does add to the price, then the American consumer must pay the added price. If you add 2 cents a pound to the meat consumed by the American people, the tribute will be enormous. There are no figures giving the production of meat in the United States, as far as I have been able to discover, just as there are no figures giving the production of milk and butter, as far as I have been able to find. Perhaps some one will be more fortunate than I have been, but I think the correct reason is that so much of the butter and milk is consumed at home where it is produced and so much of it is consumed in the near-by villages that there is no way to tell what this huge production may be, and that is similarly the case, although not to so marked a degree, in the matter of meats. But if you should add 2 cents a pound to the price of all the meat the American people consume, and if you should add 2 cents per gallon to the price of milk and 5 cents to that of cream, you would place a burden upon the consumers of America which, in my opinion, would run into the billions of dollars.

But let us see, again coming to the question of meats, whether it is possible for this tariff to have any material effect at all. In the year 1919 we imported $37,368,000 worth of beef, but we exported $1,160,643,000 worth. What an absurdity it is to say that a country which is exporting billions of dollars' worth of meat and importing millions of dollars' worth can be benefited materially by this tariff, so far as the price to the producer is concerned.

Again, if you inquire why that meat came here at all, you will find it is due to the fact that there have been some cattle slaughtered and shipped across the Canadian line from farms which are just like our farms, and there have been some small quantities of meat imported into this country from South American countries, but the amount is, nevertheless, absolutely negligible, and the benefit flowing to the farmer from this bill will be equally negligible.

The virtue of this bill is not to be found alone in the fact that it will last but six months; it is to be found in the greater fact that it will not do anything during the six months.

Suppose this tariff did raise the price of American meat 2 cents a pound by shutting out $37,000,000 worth of meat; then what would happen to the $1,160,000,000 worth we send abroad? If it should be increased in value 2 cents a pound in this market, it could not be sold abroad in competition, and hence it would stay here, and, from the farmer's standpoint, it would break his market. Of course, you could put an embargo on the shipment of meat, but if you put an embargo on the shipment of meat, while you might temporarily benefit the consumer, you would ruin the farmer. The great trade barometer of the world must fix and does fix these prices, save where they are juggled by combinations in America.

Now, putting aside the meat which may drift to this country from the Canadian market, let us see who it is ships meat into our market. It nearly all comes from South America, and from 50 to 60 per cent of all the meat from South America is controlled by the same gentlemen who are charged with controlling the American market, to wit, the five big packers. Do you imagine you are going to change their prices to the American farmer by saying that a little meat can not be shipped in here from their own packing houses in South America? The proposition is simply absurd. There, indeed, one might rest the entire case.

Mr. President, perhaps one of the most ridiculous things in this bill is its cotton provision. We propose to levy a tariff of 7 cents a pound upon long-staple cotton; that is, cotton that has a fiber 1⅛ inches long or longer. Let us examine this question a little. This country needs the long-staple cotton. It can not be produced in the United States in sufficient quantities, simply because there is only a little land in the United States which will grow it. But when it is brought here—and I am addressing myself now to the people of the cotton States—it can be mixed with the shorter cottons of this country, which are produced in great quantities, to the advantage of the shorter cottons, so that the more we get of it here the better chance we have to make good fabrics for the American people and fabrics which we may sell abroad.

Now it is proposed to levy a tax upon this cotton that is raised by a few men who have, fortunately for themselves, a monopoly of the only ground in the United States where it will grow, a few places in the South and an irrigated patch out in Arizona that is not big enough, I think, to have a rabbit chase on. Because these men have already this advantage over the other cotton farmers of the United States, because they have already seized the only ground on which this variety of cotton can be raised, it is proposed to levy a tariff upon that particular variety of cotton, which, speaking broadly, may be said to be already monopolized in the hands of a few men. All the rest of the cotton raisers of the country must sell their cotton in competition with the world.

There are some Senators who appear to be unable to see beyond the narrow limits of their constituents' little sea-island cotton patches and the votes of the said constituents.

They are willing to place a sort of embargo upon manufacturing, and also to do a thing injurious to the raiser of short-fiber cotton in order that they may get a few votes for themselves. That is the plain English of it, and it is time we begin to employ language that can be understood.

Let us see about cotton. We imported of all kinds of cotton in the calendar year 1920, 600,000 bales, but we exported during that calendar year 6,159,000 bales. We produced 11,420,000 bales. That which was not sent abroad was, of course, consumed at home. In 1919, 1⅛ per cent of our production for that year was imported, but 6⅛ per cent of our production for that year was exported. How is the cotton farmer then to be benefited? You shut out of this country the long-fiber cotton that is needed to mix to a certain extent with the short-fiber cotton, and thus you injure the domestic market for short-fiber cotton, you injure the foreign market for goods that can be made by mixing those two grades of cotton, and you injure the vast army of men who are raising ordinary short-fiber cotton for the benefit of the few men who have the advantage of these little patches of land and who can not supply the United States. The proposition is merely monstrous, without rhyme, reason, or sense. It does not rise to the level of sophistry, for sophistry presupposes a proposition that may deceive a man of ordinary intelligence.

Mr. President, I desire to print as a part of my remarks a series of tables brought, as nearly as I have been able, to date, covering the various items of the bill. Broadly speaking, they demonstrate that importations such as were for a time flowing into this country have practically reached the normal state. Therefore, if, indeed, there ever was an emergency, that emergency is past. The bill can be of no benefit. It may do much harm.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the matter referred to will be printed as requested.

Mr. REED. The tables referred to will be found at the end of my remarks.

I have just a word to say as to the methods being employed to get the bill over. They resemble those formerly used to pass appropriation bills. It is well known that appropriation bills in the old days were passed by combining the selfish interests of Congressmen in order to get votes. That was accomplished in this way: Congressman A would want an appropriation in his district that probably ought not to be made at all, but that he sought to have made in order that he might secure more votes when he ran for reelection. Congressman B, and so on down through the alphabet, would have similar propositions. Any one of these men would have been opposed to many other items in the bill, perhaps to every one except his own, if he had voted his conscience and his judgment. But he had "a piece of pork in that barrel," and in order to secure his own piece of pork he was willing to join his vote with that of every other pork Congressman. The aggregate of the pork votes would pass the bill. Each rascal would get his little slice, but the country in the end would be robbed.

That exact process is being attempted in connection with the pending bill. Here is a Senator from a State that has a piece of ground that will raise cotton with a little longer staple than the ordinary planter can produce, and so, in order to increase the price of the cotton from that little patch of ground, he will vote to tax 110,000,000 people. In the last analysis I assert that he is casting that vote because he wants to benefit himself. He may deceive himself. He may put up some sort of sophistry that will confuse his own mind, but in the back of his head, where conscience may lie sleeping, is the knowledge, after all, that he is not voting for his country but for himself.

Here is another man who finds that the farmers of his State are distressed because the price of corn has dropped. Whereupon this demagogue comes forward declaring, "I am your great champion. I am going to put a tariff on corn that will raise the price." And yet he knows we are sending abroad much more corn that we get from any other country. He knows that the price of corn went down in the American market just at the same time it went down in every market of the world. He knows that it will not go up until it does go up in the markets of the world.

He knows that the price of the surplus we send abroad regulates the price at home and does it for the reason that if you cease sending it abroad and try to sell it all at home you will break the home market. He knows corn can only be sold abroad at world prices. He is not brave enough to go to the people of his State and say to them, "Prices have fallen, you have been hard hit, but there is no way in the world to increase your prices by levying a tariff to keep things out of this country when you are producing more than can be consumed in this country and you are obliged to sell your surplus on a world market."

Here is a gentleman who raises some sugar. Now, let me pay a little attention to the sugar schedule. Here we have an article we can not and never will produce in the United States in sufficient quantity to supply our people. Hence, we must always be large importers.

Broadly speaking, we import into the United States about one and one-half times as much sugar as we produce. The exact figures will be found in the sugar table at the close of my remarks. In Cuba and in the Hawaiian Islands cane sugar can be produced cheaper than it can be produced in Louisiana. We have been developing in this country, by means of a tariff, a beet-sugar industry. The present tariff is ninety-eight one-hundredths of a cent and 1.82 of a cent, and it is now proposed to raise those figures, respectively, to 1.16 and 2.12. For what reason; to benefit whom? Is it to benefit the beet raisers of the West? The fact has been demonstrated over and over again that the beet-sugar manufacturer of the West pays to the beet farmer just what he has to pay in order to get the beet farmer to raise beets; that the beet farmer is absolutely at his mercy; and that the proprietor of the beet-sugar plant is a part of the great sugar-refining trust. Oh, the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] shakes his head and says, "No."

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. REED. Well, I happened to have been on the lobby-investigating committee a few years ago, and the demonstration was perfectly complete, that the proprietors of what is called the sugar-refining trust—which is a somewhat loose term and embraces several large concerns that seem to operate in concert—owned large blocks of stock in the beet-sugar refineries.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Missouri is perfectly correct in the statement that he has made as to the condition at the time the investigation to which he referred was conducted. The sugar refiners did own I think it was 51 per cent of the stock in many of the beet concerns of the West at that time, but they have sold out that interest. I thought, of course, the Senator from Missouri would like me to state the facts as they exist to-day.

I wish to say further to the Senator that since the hearing to which he referred the beet grower is now paid on the basis of what the sugar brings. There is a flat rate paid him for all of his crop, and he gets one-half of all over and above the flat price that the sugar sells for during that one year, and the manufacturer gets the other half.

Mr. REED. Yes; and the rates are so fixed that Mr. Manufacturer takes good care of himself first. However, I do not dispute the perfect good faith of the statement of the Senator from Utah; I could not do that; I have no desire to do it; but I have seen these "dissolutions" and yielding of stock and the claim made that there is no longer any community of interest. I saw it when the Tobacco Trust was "dissolved." I saw it when the Standard Oil Trust was "dissolved," and I found that the only result of the "dissolutions" was that the concert of action remained and the institutions went forth with a bill of health granted by some court.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield further?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. In the case of the sugar industry, there was no dissolution of the Sugar Refiners Trust, but I want to assure the Senator that the refiners received the money for their stock in the beet-sugar factories; they own no interest whatever in those sugar factories, and will lose none of the money that those factories will lose this year.

Mr. REED. Very well. How much did those sugar factories make last year? What were their profits, I want to ask the Senator from Utah, for he knows?

Mr. SMOOT. They made no profit whatever, I will say to the Senator from Missouri, but they have lost millions of dollars.

Mr. REED. When?

Mr. SMOOT. Last year. They paid the farmers $12 a ton for their beets and the sugar that was made out of those $12 beets is being sold by the manufacturer to-day for $6.40, which was the price quoted for it the other day in New York. The manufacturers are losing from 2 to 3 cents a pound on every pound of sugar which they sell.

Mr. REED. I am glad of it.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Missouri may be glad of it, but I am stating the facts.

Mr. REED. I am going to tell the Senator in a minute why I am glad of it.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say that some of the men who bought beet-sugar factory stock from the Sugar Trust, of course, will never get out of the loss, because they borrowed the money with which to make the purchase. The Senator from Missouri will find that the sugar refineries of the country are now engaged in every possible way in an effort to destroy the beet-sugar industry of the country. If they can do that, then, of course, they can charge the people here for refined sugar almost anything they may wish.

Mr. REED. I have heard that cry about destroying the beet-sugar industry of this country before. It was made here for 10 years on this floor by men who knew when they stood on the floor that the Sugar Refining Trust owned the beet-sugar factories. Let us see what are the facts. Moody's Manual of Industrials, 1920, page 2206, shows that the American Sugar Refining Co., commonly known as the trust, does now own one-third of the beet-sugar factories in the United States. It also shows that of the 22 cane-sugar refineries in the United States this company owns, directly or through its subsidiaries, 6, of which 5 are in active operation and the sixth is in reserve, and has a capital stock interest of 24 per cent in the National Sugar Refining Co., which owns two active refineries. Of the 101 factories in the United States producing sugar from beets it is interested through stock ownership in 30 factories.

The outstanding capital stock is $45,000,000 preferred stock and $45,000,000 common stock, totaling $90,000,000.

1916	$13,703,000	$2,019,000	$18,348,000
1917	14,212,000	1,912,000	20,261,000
1918	12,587,000	1,121,000	21,383,000
1919	15,250,000	1,768,000	23,152,000

Dividends have been paid at the rate of 7 per cent per annum on preferred stock since 1891 and on common stock as follows:

	Per cent.		Per cent.
1891	8	1900	6½
1892	9	1901 to 1918, inclusive	7
1893	22	1918 to 1920, inclusive	10
1894 to 1899, inclusive	12

On November 28, 1910, the United States Government entered a suit in equity seeking the dissolution of the company for alleged violation of the Sherman antitrust law. No decision had been rendered up to August 1, 1920.

Now, I will explain why I made the remark awhile ago that if they are losing money I am glad of it. When we were paying 28 cents a pound for sugar in this country all of the sugar men stood together and exacted that price. The beet-sugar men, who had made their sugar out of beets, that did not warrant any such price as that, exacted it——

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator is mistaken so far as the beet-sugar men are concerned.

Mr. REED. Just a moment—and I can prove that they sold their sugar at the very doors of their factories at as high a price as it was sold for when it had been shipped two-thirds the distance across the country and the freight paid. They stood there like old Shylock, demanding of the American people not only their "pound of flesh" but all of the blood that went with it.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, it is pretty hard for men who have not done what the Senator from Missouri has intimated to be classed with the speculators in sugar who bought it and traded in it. Sometimes sugar was transferred to different speculators eleven, twelve, and thirteen times and never taken out of the car until it finally reached the ultimate consumer.

Mr. REED. Very well, I will answer that.

Mr. SMOOT. The beet factories in Colorado kept their sugar down to the price that the Government itself here, through its agency, stated they were entitled to receive. I am perfectly aware that the sugar that came into the United States from Cuba and the sugar that was otherwise purchased was transferred sometimes, as the Federal Trade Commission finds, a dozen or more times, and with every transfer there was a profit.

Mr. REED. Yes. Now, Mr. President, let us see about this speculating business. Here is a staple; it does not spoil. You can keep it indefinitely. All you need is a building that is wind and water tight.

Mr. SMOOT. It would require some money to do that, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. REED. Oh, yes.

Mr. SMOOT. Really, it does cost a little to make sugar.

Mr. REED. Do not let us go into the discussion of a little detail like that.

Mr. SMOOT. No; of course, it does not amount to anything.

Mr. REED. It does not amount to anything in the equation that I am going to discuss.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator had to pay the cost of making sugar and had to borrow the money to do it, and the payment of the money was being demanded of him, he would find that it was quite a different proposition.

Mr. REED. I know what the Senator is arguing, but it does not meet the question, as I shall show in a moment. I am discussing the excuse the Senator put forward, which by implication is this: That sugar mounted to these exorbitant prices of 28 and 30 cents a pound, but the sugar men were not to blame; some wicked speculators had gotten hold of their sugar and speculated with it. I started to say that sugar is a staple; it is not like melons in the market or green corn that has to be sold within a day or two. It is not only staple but the lines of trade are marked out. Every one of these factories had its regular customers; they knew substantially what the customers were going to need, and the customers were ready to buy the sugar at a decent price; but they preferred to sell it to speculators, and they did sell it to speculators until the speculators boomed the market, and they moved right up with the speculative market and took the last dollar.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. REED. No; I am not mistaken. I had a client who was practically bankrupted by buying in the regular way from the house he had bought from for years. He was told that sugar was going above 28 cents a pound, and was induced to buy a large quantity. He operated a wholesale house that had existed for 60 years. He was buying from his regular dealer, who had moved his price up. Then, in 10 or 15 days, the bottom was pulled out of the price, and the same thing happened to him that happened, I will say, to hundreds and perhaps thousands of wholesalers in the country.

What does the Senator say about his sugar—that it can compete with sugar from abroad, or that it can not. If it can not compete with sugar from abroad, no matter who owns it or who runs it, then the whole American people are being taxed for the benefit of the Senator's sugar-beet patches. They are being denied the chance to get cane sugar from Cuba and Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands and Java and South America and all the other places where sugar is produced. All the people of the United States are being taxed for the benefit of a few sugar manufacturers in some of the Western States and a few gentlemen down South who raise sugar and ought to be raising something else. But you can not get any of these gentlemen to lift his eyes above the balance sheet that shows the profits for his own institution.

That is what this comes to. Each man is trying to get his share of pork out of the barrel. Each man's horizon is bounded by the interests of some particular locality of his State, and ultimately it is controlled by the desire to please people who have votes. And so we have the spectacle of the gentlemen from down in the Eastern States who say, "Behold how we love the common laboring man; our hearts are wrung with anguish every time we look at him. We must have a tariff on our manufactured goods to take care of oppressed labor." But generally he has just been in counsel with the proprietor of a trust engaged in extorting money from the people.

Let me just give you a little example.

The American Woolen Co., one of these beneficent institutions, has had written into this bill a 45-cent per pound duty upon woolen goods to compensate it for the 15 cents per pound duty levied on the raw wool; they not only get the duty upon the wool at 45 cents which they put into the garment, but as the bill is drawn they get the duty on the weight of the entire garment if the chief article of value is wool. Assuming an overcoat weighs 5 pounds, the tariff would be $2.25 if the chief article of value in that overcoat were wool. If the coat be largely shoddy, yet, if the chief article of value is wool, all the linings, all the cotton batting or wadding, all the buttons, and all the burlap will be protected the same as virgin wool. The coat may be 95 per cent cotton or shoddy; the duty protects the entire coat, and the farmer who buys that coat pays the tariff on the whole miserable thing.

By the way, the American Woolen Co. is the same concern that sent its secretary down here to Washington a few years ago and had him employed as the private secretary of the Finance Committee. He sent telegrams every night, sometimes four or five, reporting to his chiefs that he was making fine progress in getting their ideas and desires into the tariff bill, and finally wired them that he had gotten every one of their desires and demands into the bill. They thankfully received him on his return home, gave him a great banquet, and raised his salary. Of course, the gentlemen representing the State that has that institution in it are here to take care of it, because it is a local concern.

Now, let us see just a minute about this institution. Its net profits in 1919 were $15,513,000. Its surplus for that year was $12,029,000. Its total surplus in 1919 was $31,754,000. It controlled 55 woolen mills. It owns and operates the American Woolen Products Co., which is the exporting organization for the American Woolen Co. This concern that comes here demanding a protective tariff is exporting its goods abroad to-day. It is selling its goods in other countries for less than in the United States; otherwise it could not sell them, or otherwise, again, it would not need a tariff to protect it.

Mr. President, the gentlemen representing the places where those industries are located are here to tax the American people for the benefit of those industries—always, however, in the name of the downtrodden workingman. And so it goes. We always understood what was being done to us in the West and the South by these laws. They told us they were only to protect infant industries; but now they inform us that an industry which existed when Adam was discovered by Eve in the Garden of Eden must be protected—this, too, in the most favored land on earth. They also say that we can protect that industry by barring out imports at the very time when the country is obliged to sell an immense part of its agricultural products abroad!

But, Mr. President, I must not forget, as I discuss this pork barrel, the gentleman who raises peanuts. There are some peanut patches in the United States; accordingly we must tax all the people of the United States who eat peanuts, in the vain hope that we will raise the price of peanuts in some sand patch down in some Southern State. The advocate of peanut protection solemnly protests that he only acts to protect the proud American peanut against the pauper peanuts of other countries. I sometimes think he really wants to protect a peanut politician at the polls.

Thus we go down the scale, each man grabbing a little, each man willing to sell his soul for the pottage that is so contemptible—the amount he gets for his people and his crowd—that the performance of old Esau, who swapped his birthright for a mess of pottage when he was hungry, appears respectable.

When we get through with all this taxing, then we will all be rich. We are going to raise the farmers' prices by taxing farm products, and thus the farmer will get rich. We are going to raise the price of woolen goods by taxing woolen goods, thus the woolen manufacturer will get rich; and that is true in his case. But at the same time all the working people under him who get just what they can exact and no more are going to get rich. We are to put a tariff on the products of miners of the West and make them all rich. We are going to levy a tax upon everything human desire may reach out for or produce, and everybody else will get rich. If that is a good philosophy, why do we not make the tariff a little higher and all get rich more quickly, and why do we not make it high enough eventually, producing wealth by decree of law, so that everybody can quit work?

Why not? If I could produce happiness and wealth by legislation, if I had the formula, I would make everybody happy and rich in the next 15 minutes, and I would keep them that way forever. The cold, bitter truth is that men are going about teaching that by these laws they will benefit all the people, when, as a matter of fact, they are merely trying to enable a few people who are their special favorites to rob the many people.

There never was a dollar produced in this world by the passage of a statute. If you could produce wealth by passing a law or issuing a decree, mankind would have been happy and contented thousands of years ago. Every dollar there is in the world was wrought out by human energy and skill. For every dollar somebody's brow has sweat, somebody's back has bent in toil, somebody has endured the agony of labor.

You may bar out the goods of foreign countries, and you may thereby enable some favored individual to extort some of the dollars the rest of the people earn. You may fatten monopoly, you may foster cupidity, you may feed avarice, you may enable one man to pick the pockets of the many men, but you can not create a single dollar of wealth by the enactment of a law. This miserable farce is to be enacted. The farmers are to be told that they will be enriched. In sober earnest, the apple of promise will change to ashes upon the lips.

I congratulate the great Republican Party. It comes into office with a flourish of trumpets, with unlimited votes, with the power, if it has the ability, to do something of a steadying character in this country which will allow trade to flow out again in its natural channels, enabling industry to have its shackles broken, and abnormal to be succeeded by normal conditions.

It has strength to do something to open trade and commerce with other countries. But the first thing it puts upon the boards is a farce, which the proponents of the farce themselves are ashamed of.

It hopes to succeed by fooling somebody, but it is too early to do that. If you were enacting this bill 10 days before the election, before anybody could find out about it, you might deceive the unwary, but this bill has to stand the test of three years before the next campaign comes on. In that time its absurdity will be demonstrated, its chicanery will be exposed, its deception will be laid bare, its false pretenses will be put upon the table, and the process of dissection will have been undertaken and completed. While you are doing this you are closing the markets of the world, which the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] declared should be opened. Closing them? Let me be fair about that. You are keeping them closed, for they had been closed by a prior administration. I refer to the fact that right now the bill which would make complete peace with Germany and restore trade relations, making it possible to deal in the ordinary way, is being held up in the House of Representatives. I am told it is being held up under suggestion; but there it is, anyway, held up. Every day you delay opening the markets of Germany you place an embargo on American trade and you permit England and France and all the world to invade those markets, to sell their products there, to get gold for them, and to furnish labor for the employees in their respective lands. Why is that resolution not passed in the House of Representatives? The situation is significant. The reason for holding it up will ultimately be known and the name of the one responsible for the delay will also be known.

Why are we not trading with Russia? There is a domain nearly four times as large as the United States, with 180,000,000 people residing within its borders. They have never been at war with the United States, although some of our soldiers were unjustly and illegally sent there to make war upon them. Then they were withdrawn.

We have assisted in supporting three or four attempted governments in Russia out of the funds of this Government, which in part we paid out illegally; but the Government which exists there now seems to be able to maintain itself. Speaking for myself, many of the principles of that Government are utterly abhorrent to me. But so are the principles of the Turkish Government, of the Japanese Government, of the Chinese Government, and of the governments of many other countries. I agree absolutely with none of them; I disagree in various degrees from them. But we trade with them.

I said the other day, and I repeat, we traded with the redskins of the forest; we trade with Hottentots and cannibals. Indeed, we set up a government on the coast of a cannibal country, and we paid the expenses of the delegates from that enlightened country to the world's peace convention. We do not believe in the Chinese religion or the Chinese form of government; yet our Government gave its sanction to an arrangement between the capitalists of this and several other Governments to finance vast operations in China.

We do not believe in the kind of a government they have in Santo Domingo. So little do we believe in it that we send marines down there to enforce a kind of order; yet we trade with those people. We do not believe that the Turk is living according to a high moral code when he establishes a harem, or when he cuts the throats of Armenians; but we trade with him. And as we trade, he rattles a scimitar by his side. Such a character has been described as—

> One who could pause and kneel, unshod,
> In the warm blood his hand had poured,
> To mutter o'er some text to God
> Engraven on his reeking sword.

But we trade with him.

Here lies this great country of Russia, with 180,000,000 people, with unparalleled and unexampled resources, a people struggling from the darkness of the night of tyranny on through the twilight, where they are blundering and making mistakes, sometimes doing very wrong things, but still stumbling on, I hope, to the sunlit plains of liberty and progress.

And as they go we say, "We will not trade with you." They answer, "We have gold to pay; let us have agricultural implements to till the soil." We reply, "We will not trade with you. Continue in your poverty. Let the people still starve. There are no tears in our eyes for starving children if they are on your side of the line on the map, but if they are on the other side we will not only trade with the parents, but we will feed the children out of our beneficence." Yet are they not all alike the children of God. Each has a nerve that feels the sting of pain; each has a soul to save, a heart to break.

We close the doors of American factories in the face of American workmen in order to close the door of hope to the Russian, and we call that statesmanship. Then we pass a bill like this thing for the benefit of farmers. Nothing could benefit the farmer of this country more than to have every factory humming, to have our ships carrying our surplus to other lands. How much of wheat and corn does Russia need to-day? I do not know, but if half the things we are told be true, then she needs many of our cereals. How much of our beef does she need to feed her people? How much of our pork does she need? If she had a market there and gold was sent here, that would stiffen our market in a way that would be material and vastly beneficial. While we thus deny ourselves the right to trade, Great Britain, who has led us into an attack upon Russia, has made her trade compact. The evangelists of British trade are thronging over every highway of Russia to extend Great Britain's path of commerce.

If this administration, following in the footsteps of the former, and more culpable than the former because we are further from war, is to continue such policies as I have adverted to, denying a market for American skill and energy, for American products, both of the farm and the loom, then we shall see a time of real hardship and disaster for the Republic. Against it, sir, I protest. Against this policy of commercial isolation and this scheme of pocket-picking I protest. The American people will some day have their hour of reckoning. You can not successfully put a fraud upon the American people.

HON. FLORIAN LAMPERT,

OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, July 25, 1921.

Mr. LAMPERT. Mr. Speaker, in revising our tax laws there is one class above all others whose economic interest we must not only be careful to protect, but whose condition we must earnestly endeavor to improve. That class is the American farmer. I say this not because I believe in giving the farmer a special advantage not enjoyed by any other class, but because in all past legislation he has always been the chief "goat" of greed and plunder. Practically every tax law heretofore enacted seems to have been drawn with the express purpose in view of taking out of the farmer's pocket all that his patient and long-suffering soul can possibly bear; or to put the same thought in other words, of "plucking the most feathers with the least amount of squawking." This even now, I am sorry to say, is the very object of those "patriotic" gentlemen among us who are lying awake nights straining every effort to find some way to "put over" a general sales or turnover tax which would relieve the wealthy and put a still heavier burden on everything that the common people of this country eat, drink, and wear.

The time has come, Mr. Speaker, when such unwise, unjust, and un-American methods of raising revenue must be stopped. The purchasing power of the working classes, and of the farmer in particular, has already fallen to a point that is dangerous in the extreme, and if it is forced still lower by unfair and injurious methods of taxation the result will be nothing short of industrial and commercial disaster. If we want to continue to enjoy the blessings of abundance and peace the present process will have to be reversed. Taxes will have to be lowered on the working farmers of the country, not raised, and a greater share placed on "unearned incomes," on owners of large inheritances and estates, and especially on the possessors of the immensely valuable monopolies and special privileges of our Nation.

I have given a great deal of study lately to the vexatious tax problems confronting Congress. I have tried to approach every suggestion offered with an open mind and to examine it impartially and with care. I frankly confess, however, that I have found no satisfactory solution to the problem except that offered by my distinguished colleague from Minnesota, Mr. OSCAR KELLER. In his tax program I see not a program such as the vicious sales-tax program, which will inevitably pile a still heavier load of taxes on the already overloaded agricultural population of the country but a program which will do more to relieve the agricultural class of this load than any other program ever before introduced into the House of Representatives.

THE KELLER FEDERAL REVENUE PROGRAM.

Mr. KELLER, as you know, has introduced four revenue bills—the first bill (H. R. 6767) repealing all taxes on production and consumption except those on tobacco, alcohol, oleomargarine, and the products of child labor; the second bill (H. R. 6769) amending the income tax so as to distinguish between "earned" and "unearned" income; the third bill (H. R. 6768) increasing drastically the inheritance tax; and the fourth bill (H. R. 6773) placing a tax of 1 per cent on the privilege of owning lands and natural resources worth, after deducting all improvements, over $10,000, but with further allowances and deductions so as purposely to exempt the man who tills the soil.

I now want to go into detail and show you the great and far-reaching benefits that will accrue to the farmers of our country if these four revenue bills of Mr. KELLER's are passed.

UNTAXES THE CONSUMER.

Take the first bill—H. R. 6767. This bill, as I have said before, repeals all taxes on production and articles for consumption except those on tobacco, alcohol, oleomargarine, and the products of child labor.

These taxes should have been repealed long ago; in fact, they should never have been levied in the first place. They are bad from beginning to end. As one economist has well said, "They were conceived in iniquity and born in sin." Their only effect has been to hamper production, to penalize industry, to strangle commerce and trade, and to add a much higher price to everything the consumer buys.

Every time you have placed a tax on food products you have increased by so much the price of food; every time you have placed a tax on clothing you have increased the price of clothing; every time you have placed a tax on transportation, fuel, shelter, or luxuries of any kind you have increased the price of transportation, fuel, shelter, and luxuries.

And not only have you increased the price of these things by the amount of the tax itself, but you have increased it by the amount of the interest and profit on the tax besides. For instance, by placing taxes of every conceivable kind, first on the tanner of leather and then on the manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers of shoes, you have not only increased the final selling price of the shoes by the combined amount of these taxes, but you have increased it by the interest charges and profits collected on the tax money advanced by these businesses, so that a $10 pair of shoes now costs the buyer at least $2.50 more than would be the case if such taxes were not levied at all. So it is with everything else whether household goods, furniture, kitchen utensils, fencing, building materials, automobiles, farm machinery, or food, clothing, shelter, or luxuries in any of their multitudinous forms. In each and every case the final selling price of the article is from 20 to 40 per cent higher than it ought to be, not only because business—whether transportation, communication, manufacturing, wholesaling, and retailing—will and must inevitably get back its taxes by passing them on to the consumer, but because it will and inevitably must secure interest and profit on the tax money advanced.

The amount of taxes repealed by this one bill will amount, as Mr. KELLER has estimated, to about $810,000,000 a year, but will actually save the people from three to five times this amount in lowered living costs. In other words the bill means an annual saving to the farmer in reduced prices of manufactured products of from $30 to $50 per individual or from $150 to $250 per family of five.

DISTINGUISHES BETWEEN "EARNED" AND "UNEARNED" INCOMES.

So much for the first bill. Now for the second—H. R. 6769. This bill, as you are aware, amends the income tax so as to distinguish between incomes that are "earned" and incomes that are "unearned."

"Earned" income is defined as income received from wages, salaries, or services personally rendered or from any business personally conducted either individually or in partnership.

"Unearned" income is defined as income received from rents, mortgages, notes, stocks, bonds, royalties, and annuities—in short "from any source whatsoever other than the labor, skill, or personally conducted business or individual enterprise of the persons receiving the income."

Under the provisions of this bill the tax on "earned" incomes is cut in two, while the present taxes on "unearned" incomes remain as they are.

Now, I do not think that either the distinctions above made or the different rates imposed are as sound as they might be. I am averse to taxing "earned" incomes at all so long as "unearned" incomes can provide the necessary revenue, and, moreover, I think that some of the incomes classified as "unearned" should be placed in the class with the "earned."

However, I agree with Mr. KELLER and others that this is the very best distinction that can be made at this time, and since this is the case, I am very much in favor, as I am sure every fair-minded man is, of taxing the "earned" incomes at a lower rate than the "unearned."

In any event this bill will cut every farmer's income tax in two; for every farmer's income is earned, and very much earned at that.

But this, I want to emphasize, is not the only way in which this bill will benefit farmers. The present heavy tax on legitimate earnings has, as you well know, seriously crippled the activity of business men everywhere and driven thousands of them to the wall. In every city in the land business and industry are now almost prostrate; hundred and thousands of mills and factories are closed; their machinery standing idle and their workmen unemployed. According to the Department of Labor statistics approximately 5,000,000 workers are at this time idle and a very large proportion of this, as I need not tell you, is simply due to our foolish, yea, criminal policy of overloading with taxes those who make the things that we all want.

Think of it, gentlemen! Five million people out of work in our industrial centers! Do you realize that here we have one of the chief causes of why there is so small a market for farm products? Five million unemployed men and women, many of them ill clad, ill fed, ill sheltered, and on the borderline of absolute poverty and starvation; all of them wanting and needing the products that farmers are anxious to sell, yet most of them unable to fill their wants simply because they possess little or no purchasing power at all.

Mr. Speaker, I contend that this bill by cutting in two the "earned" incomes of producers will do more to start again the wheels of commerce and industry, will do more to get the millions of unemployed back to work, and therefore will do more to enable the farmer to dispose of his surplus products at a profit than any protective tariff that could possibly be devised either in this or any other Congress.

IMPOSES A DRASTIC INHERITANCE TAX.

Let us now turn to the consideration of the third bill—H. R. 6768. This bill increases very drastically the present rates on large inheritances and estates. Whereas the present inheritance tax law begins with estates of $50,000, on which there is a tax of 1 per cent goes to estates of $10,000,000 or over on which there is a tax of only 25 per cent, this bill begins with estates of $20,000, on which there is a tax of 1 per cent, and goes to estates of $100,000,000 or over, on which there is a tax of 90 per cent. In other words, whereas the existing inheritance tax law now brings in a yearly revenue of about $103,000,000, the inheritance tax law embodied in this bill will bring in a revenue from estates of at least $750,000,000 the very first year and a still larger sum in the years to come.

I need not point out to you the great merit and justice of this bill from the standpoint of the farmer. A tax on inheritances is not a tax upon production and does not therefore have an injurious effect upon production. Instead it aids production by taking overgrown fortunes which would otherwise be held by individual heirs or trusteeships, generally in the form of tax-exempt securities, and diffusing them for productive purposes. It is estimated that there are now in the United States at least $20,000,000,000 or $25,000,000,000 worth of tax-exempt securities—Federal, State, and municipal—most of which is concentrated in the hands of a few multimillionaires, and this huge aggregation of wealth can be reached in no other way than through a stiff increase in the inheritance tax as provided in this bill.

THE LAND VALUE TAX BILL.

Now, for the last and most important bill of all—H. R. 6773. This bill imposes a tax of 1 per cent on the privilege of holding land and natural resources valued over $10,000 after deducting all improvements. "Land and natural resources" includes town and city lots, agricultural ground, coal, oil, and mineral deposits, water-power sites, water fronts, fishing grounds, railroad rights of way, public franchises, timberlands; in short any part of the natural earth itself exclusive of any improvements.

EXEMPTS THE FARMER.

The extreme fairness of this bill to farmers is shown by the fact that it is drawn so as to exempt fully 99 per cent of the entire agricultural population of the country. In the first place, all improvements on farms are exempt—buildings, live stock, crops, machinery, implements, fences, wells, orchards, vineyards, and so forth. The cost of clearing, draining, plowing, and preparing the ground for cultivation is classed as improvement values. So is the natural or artificial fertility of the soil, a factor which frequently makes up 50 per cent of the whole value of a farm. On top of this there is an additional exemption of $10,000 of pure land value to each landowner, so that a farm would have to be worth at least $35,000 before it would be called on to bear a single dollar of taxes under the bill.

But many farms valued at a much higher figure than this would also escape, for, besides the above, the bill also provides that the earning power of the soil shall be taken into consideration in determining the value of the farm. That is to say, after making due allowance for cost of hired help, interest on borrowed capital, insurance, depreciation, and other farm expenses, a farm would have to yield a net return to the owner of at least $3,000 a year before it could be affected in any way by the terms of this bill. How many farmers in America do you think have, after making the necessary allowances, a net income exceeding $3,000 per annum? Not 1 in 100.

GREAT BULK OF LAND VALUES OUTSIDE OF FARMING DISTRICTS.

But with farmers exempt, the land-value tax will still return a revenue of close to a billion dollars, for by far the greater part of the land values of our country are found, not in farm lands but in our great natural resources—public franchises, water fronts, water powers, timberlands, coal, oil, gas, and mineral deposits, and especially in town and city lots. And these land values, it should be remembered, are not widely distributed among the people as are farm-land values, but are concentrated in the hands of a relatively few persons, which, of course, brings the great bulk of these values within the limitations of this bill.

We think that $250 an acre is a pretty good price to pay for an acre of agricultural land with improvements, but there is not a city of any size in this broad Nation of ours that does not have land worth anywhere from one thousand to one hundred thousand times as much per acre, and the improvements are not counted either.

To prove this I want to give some examples of land values in Chicago, which Mr. Emil O. Jorgensen, assistant secretary and statistician for the Farmers' Federal Tax League of America, has furnished me from the official records in that city. In examining those figures I ask you to bear in mind that they are not the most striking illustrations that could be found; and, further, that the value of the land given is the "assessed valuation" and constitutes, according to Messrs. George C. Olcott & Co., expert appraisers, only about 70 per cent of the "full selling value."

FARM VALUES VERSUS CITY LAND VALUES.

Now, if we compare the value of city lands, as supplied us from official sources, with the value of farm property as given in the 1920 census report, just out, we discover a condition that is positively astounding.

Take, for instance, the Marshall Field store given in the above table. The land under this store alone, without the improvements, is assessed at $11,723,474, and this, according to valuation experts, is only 70 per cent of the land's full value! With this $11,723,474, however—the "assessed" value of a 2½-acre patch of ground—you could buy, according to the census figures just disclosed, more than 1,000 average farms of 117 acres each, including all buildings and like improvements, in my own beautiful State of Wisconsin! Yet some people try to make the farmer believe that he owns the whole country!

Marshall Field store, Chicago (assessed value of land only), $11,723,474

Value of 1,000 average farms in Wisconsin, 1920 census (buildings included), $11,558,000

Or take the ground in the same city lying between Michigan and State Streets on the east and west, and between the Chicago River on the north and Roosevelt Road on the south—a small area of ground comprising 32 square blocks. This ground alone, without the improvements, is valued at $231,583,255—a sum greater by $25,000,000 than the value of twenty thousand 114-acre farms, including all buildings and other improvements, in the rich and fertile State of Ohio!

32 blocks in Chicago (80 acres) (value of land only), $231,583,255

Value of 20,000 average farms in Ohio, 1920 census (buildings included), $207,760,000

If this, however, is not impressive enough, take the half section business district in Chicago know as the "loop." This district has a value, not counting the improvements, of approximately $800,000,000—just $68,000,000 more than it would take to purchase 100,000 average farms in the good State of Michigan, with all buildings and improvements thrown in:

"Loop" district in Chicago (½ section, value of land only) about $800,000,000

Value of 100,000 average farms in Michigan, 1920 census (buildings included), $731,900,000

But perhaps some of you may think that this fortune-bearing land in our cities is exceptional. If so, look at the boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn, in New York. These two boroughs have an area of 63,747 acres and an assessed land value, outside of improvements, of $3,895,986,572. For this neat little sum you could to-day buy every one of the 1,051,600 farms, together with all buildings and similar improvements, in the four populous States of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, and still have $230,000,000 left to throw at the birds:

Manhattan and Brooklyn boroughs in New York (assessed value of land only), $3,895,986,572

Value of all (1,051,600) farms in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, 1920 census (buildings included), $3,665,189,438

Turning to the entire city of New York we find that the assessed value of the land alone, regardless of improvements, amounts to $4,938,332,177—just five and one-half times the total value of the 154,114 farms, buildings included, in the six old and thrifty States of New England—Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. Where is the man who says the farmer owns the land value of this country?

New York City (assessed value of land only), $4,938,332,177

Value of all (156,114) farms in the six New England States, 1920 census (buildings included), $916,468,584

Look at the proposition in another way. We have in this country to-day 1,537 cities containing a population of 5,000 or over. Of these 1,537 cities, 25 of them alone—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Washington, Chicago, Indianapolis, New Orleans, Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Jersey City, Newark, Buffalo, New York City, Rochester, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Portland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Seattle, and Milwaukee—have land values, estimated, after deducting all improvements, at $19,119,600,000. This is a sum greater by $400,000,000 than the value of all farms, including buildings and other improvements, in the 34 States of Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, West Virginia, Virginia, District of Columbia, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Delaware, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania—34 States containing a total of 3,519,301 farms, or over one-half of all the farms in the United States. And bear in mind, please, that the census figures for 1920 were gathered during the period of highest inflation when the price of farm property was a great deal higher than it is to-day.

25 largest cities in the United States (estimated value of land only), $19,119,600,000

FARM VALUES V. OTHER LAND VALUES.

Let us pass from city lands to other lands and see how the value of our American farms look in comparison. Here, however, we are handicapped somewhat by the fact that accurate statistical information is not always to be had; nevertheless, from such information as is available we can safely make estimates that will not go far from the truth.

The value of such lands and natural resources as water powers, fishing grounds, harbors, and water fronts we can conservatively place at $4,000,000,000. This is by no means as much as other resources are valued at, nevertheless it is some $300,000,000 more than all of the 436,033 farms in the great State of Texas are worth with all of their buildings, wells, fences, orchards, vineyards, and so forth, thrown in for good measure.

Water powers, fishing grounds, harbors, and water fronts (estimated value of land only), $4,000,000,000

Value of all (436,033) farms in Texas, 1920 census (buildings included), $3,717,799,544

As regards standing timber, the Government eight years ago estimated this to be worth "at least $6,000,000,000, not including the value of the land." (See "The Lumber Industry," part 1, Government Printing Office, 1913.) Since this time the timber has, of course, vastly increased in value, and if we count the value of the land underneath the timber, as we must, the total will easily run from $10,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000. Taking the lower figure, we find it is greater by $2,200,000,000 than the value of all the big farms and ranches with their improvements in the eleven Mountain and Pacific States of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, and California.

Timber rights and timber lands (estimated value), $10,000,000,000

Value of all (478,273) farms and ranches in the 11 Mountain and Pacific States (buildings included), $7,833,338,616

Franchises, pipe lines, stock yards, railroad rights of way, terminals of all kinds, Government land grants and like monopolies and privileges can fairly be put down at $15,000,000,000—or more than the total value of all farm property in 22 States.

Franchises, pipe lines, stock yards, railroad rights of way, terminals, and Government land grants (estimated value of land only), $15,000,000,000

Value of all (2,721,839) farms in 22 States, 1920 census (buildings included), $12,786,447,321

Last, but not least, we have our vast and immensely valuable coal, oil, iron, copper, lead, zinc, gold, silver, marble, granite, and all gas, stone, and mineral beds—a single small deposit of which is ofttimes worth more than all the farm property within a radius of 100 miles, and whose total can safely be estimated at not less than $75,000,000,000—or more by $7,000,000,000 than the value of all farms, buildings, and other improvements included in the 48 States of our Union.

Coal, oil, iron, copper, lead, zinc, gold, silver, marble, granite, and all gas, stone, and mineral lands (estimated value of land only), $75,000,000,000

Value of all (6,448,366) farms in the United States, 1920 census (buildings included), $67,795,865,384

I do not think any further proof is necessary to show that the very great bulk of land values in this broad Nation of ours is not owned by farmers. The prevalence of this notion is partly due to unfamiliarity with the facts, but is mostly due, I am sorry to say, to the gross misrepresentation and falsehoods of "big business" and the tools of "big business." For "big business" knows that so long as it can fool the farmers, so long as it can make the farmers believe that "the land-value tax will remove the burden from the wealthy people in the cities and place it on the agricultural class," it can escape its own proper share of the heavy revenue burden. Farmers, however, like other people, can not be misled all of the time. They are going to see that while this bill will raise a billion dollars of revenue, it will not be paid by them.

JUSTICE OF THE LAND-VALUE TAX.

In this connection I want to say a word about the essential justice of the land-value tax. The justice of levying a tax upon land values lies, not merely in the fact that it will compel those who are now notoriously undertaxed by the Federal Government to bear their fair share of taxation, but in the fact that the value of land is not an earned but an unearned value. It is not the result of individual effort, but the result of collective effort. The increase in population, the progress of industry, and the growth of the community—these, and these alone, are what give value to the land. Being the product of the whole population, therefore, Government may in all equity and justice take for the benefit of all what of right belongs to all.

THE LAND-VALUE TAX CAN NOT BE SHIFTED.

Nor can the land-value tax, as some people seem to think, be shifted. It can not be "passed on" either to the tenant or to the consumer. It stays just where it is put—on the monopolist of land. For a tax upon land values falls upon idle land as well as upon used land, the result being that idle land is thrown on the market, which inevitably tends to reduce the price instead of increasing it.

Let us now see more specifically some of the various ways in which this bill will benefit the farming class.

THE LAND-VALUE TAX WILL CHECK FARM TENANCY.

In the first place it will check the increase of farm tenancy. It will make it easier for hundreds of thousands of rack-rented and impoverished tenants to obtain farm homes of their own. It will do this by breaking up big land holdings in the rural districts, and forcing into the market at lower prices millions of acres of fertile land now held out of use by speculators, railroads, and other monopolists for increase in value.

Few people realize the colossal extent to which the soil of America is monopolized by a few individuals and held vacant for speculative purposes. According to a recent Government report ("The Lumber Industry," Government Printing Office, 1914, Pt. II), 265 holders of land in Arkansas own 3,318,000 acres, or almost one-half as much as all of the improved acreage of the 214,678 farmers in the State. In Colorado 14 known holders own 3,355,000 acres, as against 4,302,101 improved acres owned by 46,170 farmers in that Commonwealth. In New Mexico again it is reported that the Holland Land Co. has 4,500,000 acres, more than three times the combined improved acreage of the 35,675 farmers in that State. In Texas one man living in Chicago holds title to 3,000,000 acres of agricultural land, while another individual, a nonresident, owns enough land which, if all put together, would form an area larger than the State of Rhode Island.

Kern County, Calif., a fair sample of the 58 counties in that big State, is owned chiefly by four land monopolies—the Kern County Land Co., 391,497 acres, which are assessed at $13.90 an acre, but most of which could not be bought for $200 an acre; the Times-Chandler ranch, 351,698 acres, which pays about 3 cents an acre taxes; Miller & Lux, 125,488 acres, which are assessed for taxation at $17.70 per acre, yet most of which could not be bought for $100 to $500 an acre; the Southern Pacific, 579,086 acres, including valuable oil and mineral rights. In other States land monopoly conditions are even worse, as may easily be seen from the following table compiled from the report above mentioned:

To cap the climax the same report shows that three railroads—the Northern Pacific, the Southern Pacific, and the Santa Fe—still own undeveloped a total of 33,493,000 acres of land, or enough, if divided into 80-acre tracts, to give a decent home to more than 400,000 of our impoverished, overworked, and despairing tenant farmers in America.

In breaking up these vast land holdings, therefore, and making the land available to the land-hungry multitudes who want to use it the land-value tax will do more to stop the appalling increase in farm tenancy, and consequent deterioration of rural life, than any other measure proposed during the last generation.

IT WILL LOWER THE FARMERS' TAX BURDEN.

In the second place it will remove a heavy though unseen tax burden from the shoulders of the farmer and place it upon monopoly and special privilege.

In my discussion of the first bill I pointed out how the taxes on industry and the products of industry which that bill repeals are always shifted from producer to consumer in the higher prices of goods. No matter whether the tax be levied on middlemen, on manufacturers, on transportation companies, on wholesalers, on retailers—or, in short, on anyone engaged in producing or distributing the commodities that we all use—the effect is only to increase the final selling price to the consumer. Taxes of this kind are like a rolling snowball. They may be small in the beginning but they are very large in the end, when they fall with both interest and profit on the tax money advanced on the one who buys the goods.

Not so, however, with the land-value tax. This tax can not be shifted. It can not be "passed on" either in the form of higher rent to the tenant or in the form of higher prices for goods to the consumer. All economists admit this. It is one of the accepted dictums of political economy and has been recognized by every writer, from Adam Smith, Ricardo, Hume, Anderson, and Say of a century ago on down to the college professors of the present time. A tax on land values stays just where it is placed—on the monopolist of land. There is no way in which the landowner can get the tax back, for the owners of land collect all the rent they can get now. If they could get more, they would take it. On the contrary, instead of raising rent when a land-value tax is imposed they will have to lower rent and lower prices. This is true because, as I have already stated, a tax upon land values falls not only upon the used land but upon the land which is unused, whether it be agricultural, urban, coal, oil, gas, mineral, water-power, or timber land.

The added burden on the unimproved land will therefore compel the owners either to use it themselves or place it on the market and sell it at a lower price to some one who will use it. (For further proof that a tax on land values can not be shifted to the tenant or consumer, see Prof. Thorold Roger's "Political Economy," second edition, p. 295; Walker's "Political Economy," p. 413; John Stuart Mill's "Principles of Political Economy," book 5, chap. 3, sec. 2; Ricardo's "Principles of Political Economy and Taxation," chap. 10, sec. 62; Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," book 5, chap. 2, pt. 2, art. 1; Prof. E. R. A. Seligman's "Incidence of Taxation," p. 222.) In other words, the imposition of a land value tax will increase the competition among landowners for tenants and producers which will inevitably have the effect of lowering rent and not raising it, and of reducing prices and not increasing them. It is this fact which makes the land value tax so bitterly disliked by those who own the highly valuable lots in our industrial centers as well as those who control the great natural resources and advantages of our country.

What a great relief to the farmers therefore this bill will be in this respect alone may be realized when it is remembered that the unseen Federal taxes which monopoly and special privilege now avoid, and which the consumer inevitably pays in the price of the goods and services he buys, amounts annually—including profits and interest on the tax—to from $30 to $50 per individual or from $150 to $250 per family of five.

IT WILL BREAK THE MONOPOLY OF NATURAL RESOURCES.

In the third place, this bill will break the monopoly of coal, oil, iron, timber, water power, and other natural resources, stop profiteering in the basic essentials of life, and enable the farmer to buy his goods at a greatly reduced price.

I hardly think that anyone here will deny for a moment that the farmer is paying entirely too much for the goods he buys, as compared with the small return he gets for what he sells. Take any article you like—coal, gasoline, automobiles, farm machinery, fencing, fertilizer, lumber, brick, furniture, clothing—I contend that the final selling price, on the average, is at least from 50 to 100 per cent higher than it ought to be. And the reason it is from 50 to 100 per cent higher than it ought to be is simply because of the holding out of use of large bodies of land and natural resources from which the basic materials are secured out of which these articles are made.

In 1919, for example, the farmers of the country expended the sum of $329,189,912 for fertilizer alone. Yet the American Agricultural Chemical Co., valuing its property at $113,254,547, boasted when floating its last bond issue of $30,000,000 that "it owns over 120,000 acres of land containing phosphate deposits estimated sufficient to meet the company's requirements of this basic raw material for more than 100 years."

In the Middle West hard coal cost the farmers $20 a ton last winter—two or three times as much as it should have cost. Why? Simply because, to quote the words of Robert S. Feeney, vice president of the Seiler Coal Co., an "independent" concern, "a few big coal operators controlled by the Morgan-Stotesbury interests own in the neighborhood of 70 or 80 per cent of the virgin coal lands in Pennsylvania, hundreds of thousands of acres of which are held out of use."

Take another case. Farmers in my section of the country are now paying two, three, and in some cases five times as much for lumber as they did a few years back. Yet "three timber holders" says a Government report—the Lumber Industry, Bureau of Corporations, 1914—"own enough standing timber to make a railroad train of lumber 100,000 miles long."

The cost of a gallon of gasoline to the farmer is not 10 or 15 cents, which would be ample and sufficient, even at the present high cost of doing business, but 24 cents. Why? Because the Standard Oil Co. in its last annual statement showed that in addition to its wide control of pipe lines, terminal facilities, and similar monopolies, it also "has holdings of approximately 2,500,000 acres of undeveloped oil lands"—holdings which enable it to dictate its own terms to the users of gasoline.

If the farmer buys a tractor for his farm he must hand over to the dealer a young fortune. Why? Because the iron ore from which the tractor is made is monopolized almost exclusively by the United States Steel Corporation, so as to prevent others from using the ore that they can not use themselves, and thereby prevent competition in the manufacture and sale of steel.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN LAND AND PRODUCTS.

Here, Mr. Speaker, you have the secret of every big profiteer. Own or control the land from which the basic materials come and you can fix prices and strangle competition to your heart's content. For land, you must remember, can not be duplicated or reproduced like a factory, a mill, or any other product of industry. It is natural, not artificial. It was made by nature, not by man like a shirt or a typewriter. There may be any number of crops of wheat, machines, buildings, locomotives, warehouses, or factories, but there is only one crop of land. The products of labor may be moved about, burned up, blown to fragments, destroyed or replaced, increased or decreased, but not so with land. Land is stationary and its quantity is rigidly fixed.

When you can hold land or natural resources out of use, therefore, you can prevent production. You can limit the output and supply of goods. You can choke competition at its weakest point and drive up the price of commodities to a height that will rob the consumer, but which will bring you millions. As Prof. John R. Commons, of Wisconsin University, has pointed out (The Distribution of Wealth, p. 253):

> If the size of fortunes is taken into account, it will be found that perhaps 95 per cent of the total values represented by these millionaire fortunes is due to those investments classed as land values and natural monopolies and to competitive industries aided by such monopolies.

By breaking up the grand-scale monopolization of natural resources, therefore, and destroying to a very large degree the speculative holding of raw materials the farmer, along with all other consumers, will be saved by this bill in reduced cost of living and lower prices of machinery and supplies several hundred dollars a year.

IT WILL ENLARGE THE MARKET FOR FARM PRODUCTS.

In the fourth place this bill will greatly enlarge the farmer's market and give him a better price for his products.

A good many of you gentlemen on both sides of the House have the idea that the only place where the farmer can now dispose of his surplus products is in foreign countries. This is a great mistake. The greatest market yet to be found for the farmer's product is right within our own borders—within our own cities. Here is a market which, if once opened up, can easily absorb even more than the farmers now produce. All that need be done is to increase the purchasing power of the millions of impoverished, underfed, underclothed, underwarmed, and underhoused men, women, and children in our industrial centers and the demand will follow.

Now, the thing that keeps the purchasing power of the masses in the cities so low (in spite of the high wages paid) is the same thing that keeps the farmer's purchasing power so small—the appalling tribute levied on them by city landowners, franchise owners, terminal owners, and the monopolists of all natural resources. After paying a large part of his wages to a landlord for the use of a lot to live on; another large part to the landlords over whose ground he does business or makes his purchases; another part to the owners of franchises, railroad rights of way, terminals, water fronts, and other special privileges and advantages; and another large part to the owners of coal deposits, oil lands, timberlands, iron-ore lands, water-power sites, and other natural opportunities the laborer or clerk receiving the high wage of $50 a week has mighty little left with which to purchase the products of the farm.

Just how much greater a market the land value tax bill will create in the cities for the farmer's products can not, of course, be foretold, but we may rest assured that if we cut out the graft and tribute levied by monopoly and special privilege on the multitudes of underfed, underclothed, and submerged men, women, and children in our industrial centers a greater market for farm products will be opened up than has been done by any other measure ever enacted in the Halls of Congress.

THE LAND-VALUE TAX IS PRACTICAL.

The opponents of this measure will say, of course, that it has never been tried. Such a statement is based either on woeful ignorance of the facts or on deliberate misrepresentation. The land-value tax, as Emil O. Jorgensen shows in his book, The Next Step Toward Real Democracy, has been for many years, and is now, in practical operation in numerous parts of the earth, and wherever it is in operation it is giving the greatest satisfaction. The irrigation districts of California now draw practically all of their revenue from the privilege of landownership, while the large cities of Pittsburgh and Scranton, Pa., are now, and have been since 1913, gradually shifting the tax on improvements to the value of land.

In Queensland, Australia, the land-value tax has been in full operation since 1902; in New South Wales, except that part of Sydney called the city, since 1908; in the city of Sydney, since 1916; in South Australia, for 10 years in 13 municipalities; in the Transvaal, in most localities, since 1916; and in the western Provinces of Canada since they were founded. In Manitoba city improvements are taxed only two-thirds of their value, and there, as in the western Provinces, local taxes on farm buildings and improvements are almost unknown. Overwhelming evidence proves the success of the taxation of land values where it has been adopted, and it is that success which has recently persuaded the Province of Ontario, the Cape Province, the State of Victoria, and the Orange Free State to extend to their municipalities the same powers to tax land values as are possessed in other colonies.

In New Zealand 167 local authorities tax land values, namely, 64 boroughs, 34 counties, and 67 other smaller town districts and areas. I could point out numerous other localities, both in agricultural and urban districts, where the land-value tax is in practical and successful operation, but the above is sufficient to disprove the false charges of the opponents to this last and most important of all bills.

CONCLUSION.

I have now showed you the great merit of the Keller revenue program from the standpoint of the farmer. I have proved to you how the first bill, H. R. 6767, which repeals all taxes on production and consumption, will save the farmer each year in lower prices from at least $150 to $250 per family of five; how the amended income tax bills, H. R. 6769, will not merely cut working farmers' Federal income tax in two but will go far toward getting the wheels of commerce, trade, and industry once more in motion; how the increased inheritance tax bill, H. R. 6768, will eat much further than is now being done into the vast estates and inheritances of those who count their wealth by the tens and hundreds of millions; and how the land value tax bill, H. R. 6773, which is so drawn as to exempt over 99 per cent of the farmers, will decrease tenancy, break the monopoly of valuable land and natural resources, prevent profiteering in the basic essentials of life, lower prices of manufactured goods, and greatly enlarge the market for all farm products—in short I have conclusively proven to you how these four bills of Mr. KELLER will do more to relieve the farmer and restore a condition of real and lasting prosperity to the agricultural class than any other similar number of bills ever before introduced into Congress. I ask you, therefore, in behalf of the farmer to give these bills the attention and consideration that they justly deserve.

HON. T. FRANK APPLEBY,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

On the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. APPLEBY. Mr. Speaker, the debate on this bill, to which I have listened most carefully since the hour it began, has only confirmed what I have believed for many years, that the tariff should be taken out of politics and placed in the hands of a nonpartisan tariff commission. Personally, I am a protectionist and believe in a tariff that will at all times insure the operation and prosperity of American industry. No one will deny, I am quite sure, that much of the real prosperity of this country has been due to a protective tariff system. Industries have flourished, wage earners have prospered, and to-day we stand forth the greatest Nation in all the world. The safeguarding of American capital and the preservation of American standards of living is our foremost consideration, and this can largely be accomplished through a protective tariff. But I have not the time nor disposition to discuss at this hour the academic question of the relative merits of a protective tariff or a tariff for revenue only. I have asked for just a few minutes in which to explain my position on the item now under discussion—asphalt—and must confine my brief remarks to this subject.

The placing of a duty on asphalt would be a mistake. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I submit to you that one of the greatest domestic problems confronting this country is that of transportation. The capacity of our railroads are taxed to the limit, and realizing their inadequate facilities, are not even attempting to meet the demands of traffic. The countryside is praying for cars to get its produce to market; hamlets and cities are insistent in their demands for transportation to the metropolitan centers and the seaboard, and all over the land the cry is being raised, "Give us transportation." Transportation by rail must be supplemented. The only practical supplement of rail transportation is transportation by highway. Highway transportation is impractical unless we have good roads. Never in our history did we need good roads so badly. It is practically impossible to build good roads without the use of asphalt in some form or other. My own State, the great State of New Jersey, was one of the pioneer States in the building of good roads, and I have been personally interested in this matter since the inception of its road-building program. New Jersey has some of the finest highways in the world, particularly in the eastern and northern sections, and as chairman of the Ocean Boulevard Commission for several years, I have done my part in blazing the way for better roads in my State. During this period I have seen the cost of road construction mount step by step, until to-day it is double the cost per mile than when we first began our building. Mr. Chairman, I want to go on record not only by this statement but also by my vote that I do not favor penalizing all of the American people who are dependent upon and use our roads by placing a duty on asphalt.

About a year ago Congress appropriated $200,000,000 for good roads. We will soon be called upon, in all probability, to vote for an added appropriation of $200,000,000. In 1920 the various States passed bond issues for good roads amounting to $900,000,000, making in sight a building program for roads and highways in the United States of surely $1,300,000,000, and this, supplemented by city and county construction, can reasonably be assumed will reach $2,000,000,000. The decrease in purchasing power of this enormous sum through increased cost of materials should this tax on asphalt prevail may well give us pause. At the least calculation it will cost the people of the United States, through the decreased purchasing power of the money appropriated, ten times the amount of the revenue to be derived from the tariff on this product. I appeal to you; is this good business? Is it patriotic? Is it even good common sense?

I shall vote to place asphalt on the free list.

OF

HON. OTIS WINGO,

OF ARKANSAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, June 24, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (S. 1837) to amend section 2 of the act of Congress approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal farm loan act.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I always listen with a great deal of interest to my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE], and being always willing to try to accommodate him, I shall rise to his suggestion and refer to what has occurred in the history of this bill. He said something about what happened in the committee. That is very simple. It is not what happened in the committee. Everything that happened in the committee can be told under the rule. A motion was made to report the Senate bill. That was adopted by a unanimous Democratic vote and by the votes of the friends of the farmers who were Republicans. Some of the Members from the East happened to be away. We caught them napping. So the bill was ordered to be reported out. Then two weeks afterwards, after numerous secret Republican conferences, there was another committee meeting, and the committee, acting under orders of the Republican leaders, reconsidered, over the protest of the Democratic Members, the vote by which the bill was ordered to be reported. Then after they themselves had voted down an amendment which they had agreed upon, but which on examination the Democratic Members demonstrated was a fake, they agreed the next day on this proposition which has just been read as a committee substitute. It is not what happened in the committee that "would make mighty interesting reading." It is what happened in the little room right out here adjoining the lobby, a room filled with mahogany furniture, and the magnificent leader of your party; and the cussing and the profanity and the exasperation and the cracking of the whip, those are the things that would make "mighty interesting reading"; but out of sympathy for the gentlemen I only refer to these things incidentally, in such terms as they will understand, but which will leave the House in ignorance of the humiliating treatment that was accorded to them by their leader. But that is neither here nor there. This is not a question of politics. I have offered an amendment proposing to change $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. That means that the maximum amount that could be deposited during a three months' period would be $50,000,000. That grows less mathematically, as they have accretions to the capital stock. Each $50,000,000 of new loans made to farmers adds $2,500,000 to the capital stock.

Now, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE] made the same old stock argument against the Federal land bank. Why, I felt sad when I saw gentlemen on the Republican side with smiles on their faces, cheer the statement he made that even with what I propose you will not be able to take care of all the distressed farmers. I am not proposing to do that, though I wish I could by this bill. I am proposing to try to give these banks sufficient turnover working capital so that the farmers of the Nation, under this cooperative system, putting up their own capital, can more adequately take care of themselves. That is all we seek to do. I agree that the farm-loan system is not a system to loan money directly out of the Treasury to the farmers. I think it was the gentleman from New York [Mr. MACGREGOR] who followed my remarks on the floor this morning. After I had been trying to explain in as simple language as I could, like it was in a kindergarten class, in words that would be intelligible even to a child, that we were not giving especial favors to the farmers but were seeking only partial equality of treatment, he got up and said, "I am against this because I am against all special favors." I would like to ask the gentleman, how did he vote on the Esch-Cummins railroad bill? [Applause.] He voted to give to the railroads at least $2,000,000,000 in one block. Then he voted to loan the railroads $300,000,000 more. He had a good excuse, from his viewpoint, because the country depended on the transportation system. That is justification for you gentlemen, and I will not quarrel with you, although I voted against the act, because in my candid judgment it is the most socialistic piece of legislation ever foisted upon a free government and was frankly class legislation, giving a special favor to one class of corporations at the expense of all the taxpayers. That is the reason why I was against the Esch-Cummins Act. But what does this bill propose to do? We propose to make them operate alone, when we propose not to give special favors, but to accord a limited Government deposit privilege, under restrictions, to the farm land banks, the same privilege that every national bank in the land has enjoyed to an unlimited extent for over 50 years. Has the gentleman ever raised his voice against that? Has he ever tried to repeal the law under which one Secretary of the Treasury a few years ago deposited $91,000,000 in one bank to save a gang of stock gamblers? No; he did not object to that. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

The Coal Bills.

HON. JAMES A. REED,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,

Tuesday, June 28, 1921.

The Senate had under consideration Senate bill 1806, entitled "A bill to further amend the interstate commerce act, as amended, to provide for seasonal rates for the transportation of coal," and Senate bill 1807, entitled, "A bill to aid in stabilizing the coal industry."

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I propose to discuss the reason for high coal prices; to point out what I deem to be the effective remedies and to analyze the pending bill.

This bill was introduced on May 16, 1921. On the same day Senator FRELINGHUYSEN introduced another bill entitled, "A bill to aid in stabilizing the coal industry." The two bills are part of one scheme or plan; they are intended each to supplement the other. The author of the bill is pressing this bill, hoping to make it the first-born of a pair of twins, which together will control and regulate the entire coal industry.

The pending act is calculated to compel the people of the United States to buy their coal during the summer months, whether they want to or not, and in the event of failure to purchase during the summer months, to penalize them by advanced freight rates during the winter season. The power and duty to lower the freight rates during the summer months and to raise them during the rest of the year is reposed by the pending bill in the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The second of the twins, to wit, Senate bill 1807, is clearly intended to develop a system under which the Government will control the production, transportation, and sale of coal, including everything from the mines to the retailer. It involves the fixation of prices, the establishment of zones within which coal can be shipped and beyond which it may not be transported. It covers the question of the wages of the miners, their living and working conditions; in short, it clearly contemplates a complete ultimate control by the Government. It is true that all of these powers are not directly conferred by the bill, but a study of that instrument demonstrates that they are all in contemplation.

To the consummation of that end the Secretary of Commerce and the Director General of Mines are authorized to collect information and to make recommendations to Congress regarding all of the matters aforesaid. Clearly, unless it is intended that the recommendations be followed by further legislation, the recommendations will be useless. It should not be overlooked that the present bill authorizes the Secretary and director, through any agents whom they may appoint, to enter any place of business of a producer or dealer in coal, to demand statements as to his prices and costs, including an examination of his books and papers, and makes a refusal to permit the invasion or to furnish the demanded information punishable by fine and imprisonment.

There is no question so misunderstood as the coal problem. For years the people have been misled by false statements regarding conditions. Conclusions based upon such statements are necessarily inaccurate.

For a long time the country has been cursed with a multitude of animated pro bono publicos, who have been going up and down the earth putting forth false information and proposing quack remedies for conditions about which they are themselves grossly ignorant. The misinformation thus given out is naturally credited by the general public and the remedies proposed are usually accepted at their face value without examination. This is particularly true of the entire coal question. I shall endeavor by a plain exposition of the facts to at once expose the falsity of this propaganda and demonstrate the unreasonableness of the remedies proposed.

MISSTATEMENTS REGARDING THE EXTENT OF COAL DEPOSITS AND REGARDING PRICES AND PRODUCTION.

(1) It is asserted that our coal deposits are about to be exhausted, and that consequently the Government must interfere or the United States will soon find itself without coal.

The complete refutation of the fallacy is found in the evidence recently taken before the Senate Committee on Manufactures. At that hearing governmental experts, great coal operators, coal dealers, and labor leaders all testified. The undisputed testimony shows that there is already discovered in the continental United States bituminous coal deposits which reach the stupendous aggregate of between three and four trillion tons. At the present rate of consumption it will therefore take approximately 6,000 years to exhaust the known supply.

The deposits are scattered over 31 States and Alaska. Great mining operations are carried on in 24 States. Undoubtedly other deposits will be from time to time discovered.

Bituminous coal is the one thing that for all practical purposes may be said to be inexhaustible.

Six thousand years from now the present known supply, at the existing rate of consumption, may be gone, but by that time humanity will probably have advanced to a point far beyond the crude processes of producing heat by burning coal. We need trouble ourselves little about a problem which lies 6,000 years in the future.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. OVERMAN. Some years ago President Roosevelt appointed what was known as a conservation commission and did me the honor to put me on the commission. I remember that the experts then stated that the supply of coal would be exhausted in about 40 years.

Mr. REED. I think they were talking about anthracite coal. I am now speaking of bituminous coal, and am supported by the undisputed evidence given before the Senate Committee on Manufactures. It follows that the entire propaganda predicting the early exhaustion of coal and the freezing to death of mankind is without the slightest foundation of fact and utterly ridiculous.

(2) It is asserted that the great coal producers are, and have been for years, combined together to charge extortionate prices for coal when produced at the mouth of the mine. Accordingly it is argued that the Government must take possession or control over the mines in order to protect the people from the machinations of these evil conspirators.

Both the statement of fact and the conclusion based thereon are refuted by the testimony taken by the committee. At the end of the exhaustive hearings not a scrap of evidence had been given tending to show a combination between the great mine operators. Upon the contrary, it was proven that there are in the United States over 11,000 large coal mines; that these mines are controlled by over 7,000 operators. It was also shown that coal in many localities juts from the sides of the hills and can be worked by farmers or by miners employing the pick and shovel. The coal from this latter class of mines comes into the market as soon as there is a coal shortage and the price is materially advanced. Deposits of the character I am now discussing are scattered throughout the vast coal areas which, as has been shown, exist in 31 of the States of the Union. The evidence before the committee demonstrated that during the coal shortage of 1920 there came into existence within one year's time along the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in two States, over 1,000 new mines.

According to the testimony, the mines of the country were increased from 5,776 in the year 1913 to over 11,000 mines in the year 1920.

The conclusions seem irresistible:

(a) That the supply of coal is practically inexhaustible; that it is stored in the ground and will remain there free from destruction until it is removed by man and transported to the market.

(b) What has been said of coal is true of no other product. The oil fields are apparently being rapidly exhausted; there is seemingly a limit to the amount of ores readily accessible to the miner's pick; but whatever the facts may be with reference to mineral deposits it is certainly true that of none of the things produced by man can it be declared that a time of shortage or famine may not come. To illustrate, no matter how much wheat is sown, the crop may be a failure; corn and all cereals are subject to seasonal disasters; live stock may be swept away by plague; none of these things can be stored or kept for a great length of time.

(c) Bituminous coal, according to the evidence, has not been monopolized. And, as I have said, because of its wide distribution and widely scattered ownership, it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to ever bring it within monopolistic control.

We have, then, a condition which only demands that the coal shall be taken from the ground and delivered to the people. If that is done at a fair and reasonable price, the problem is solved.

(3) It is alleged that coal prices have advanced enormously; that this must be the result either of a combination among the great coal operators to raise prices or of a practice by these operators, without combination, of charging excessive prices; in a word, of profiteering upon the public.

The first part of the proposition stated is already answered. It remains to determine whether the advance in the price of coal can be charged to the rapacity of the great mine owners.

As to the above charge, it is sufficient for the present to say that the evidence shows that during the war, while under governmental control, and later when under private control, some of the large coal mines were operated at profits somewhat higher than the profits during normal times. The evidence, however, does not demonstrate that the profits were anything like as great as those gained in many other industries. While these increased profits had an effect upon the price of coal, nevertheless it was shown that the increase of profits was only one of the small elements contributing to the enormous advance in the price of coal.

(4) Let us calmly and dispassionately endeavor to analyze the reasons which lie back of the fact that the coal consumers have in recent years been obliged to pay high prices for coal. Perhaps we shall be aided in this task by the process of elimination.

The difficulty, as I have shown, does not lie in the shortage of supply in the earth. That supply is inexhaustible.

It is not to be found in combinations between the mine owners. That, I think, I have already demonstrated.

It is not to be found in the fact that there are not enough mines already open, for the evidence shows that if the mines which are already open were worked throughout the year at from 60 to 70 per cent of their capacity they would produce all the coal we use in the United States, all that is demanded for foreign shipment, and that a vast surplus would be accumulated.

It can not be charged to a shortage of labor. The evidence shows that there are enough coal miners in the United States so that if they were regularly employed and worked on an average of not more than 20 days a month they could produce more coal than would supply the demand.

It can not be charged to strikes. The evidence on this phase of the case rather astonished me. Of course, every coal strike has interfered to some extent with the production of coal, but, according to the evidence, the deposits are so great and so widely distributed that no strike has limited the supply of bituminous coal sufficiently to create a real shortage. This is true, because the mines not embraced in the strike area, if properly run, will more than supply the entire market.

It should be understood that what I have said applies to bituminous coal. Anthracite coal presents an entirely different problem.

Notwithstanding the foregoing eliminations, it still remains true that there have been coal shortages, inevitably accompanied by high prices.

WHAT ARE THE CAUSES OF COAL SHORTAGES AND ACCOMPANYING HIGH PRICES?

The answer to the question demands a brief review of coal history. It is the undisputed evidence of the Government's own experts that there never was a shortage of bituminous coal in the United States until the European war broke out; that up to that time coal was delivered at the mouths of the mines at very low prices. Indeed, these prices were so low that the Chief of the Geological Survey, a Government witness, testified that prior to the war he had been an advocate of Government control not for the purpose of lowering prices but for the purpose of raising and stabilizing prices.

WHAT CAUSED THE SHORTAGE AFTER THE WAR BEGAN?

The answer is found in the testimony of substantially all of the witnesses. First there came an increased demand for coal, due to the great activity in manufacturing, industry, and transportation. But all of the credible witnesses declared that the capacity of the mines, including labor, was sufficient to have more than met the increased demand. We must therefore seek elsewhere for the cause of the coal shortage.

The cause is found in the fact that "there was not available a sufficient supply of cars to receive and haul the coal from the mines to the points of consumption."

The outbreak of the European war affected our entire economic situation. Immense orders were placed for all kinds of American products. This threw upon the railroads an unprecedented burden. There was an insistent demand for cars and engines to take care of the magnified volume of traffic. The main lines and sidetracks of the railroads were insufficient. Congestion resulted, which tied up tens of thousands of cars. In consequence, the railroads were unable to supply the mines with the necessary cars into which coal could be loaded as mined. Likewise the railroads were unable to transport promptly and efficiently the cars already loaded.

Mines can not be run efficiently unless they are constantly supplied with empty cars. If the cars are not at the tipple in the morning, the mine does not operate that day. It resulted, speaking broadly and generally, that from a period beginning shortly after the war broke out in Europe and continuously until a few months ago there was a constant shortage of cars at the mines and continued congestion upon the railroads. Accordingly the mines were frequently closed down; labor was thrown out of employment; the production and delivery of coal restricted and a genuine coal famine was created.

But the undisputed evidence shows that at no time, even after our entrance into the war, would there have been a coal shortage had it been possible for the railroads to have furnished the coal mines cars to be loaded and in turn to have transported the coal promptly to its destination.

The chief cause, therefore, of the coal shortage is found in the single fact that the coal could not be mined because there were not sufficient cars, and that the cars already loaded could not be speedily transported to the various parts of the country.

It should be said in all fairness that the car shortage and transportation difficulties were accentuated at various times by certain interferences, to some of which I now direct attention:

(a) Certain officials of the Government informed the public that the price of coal would be reduced and substantially advised the withholding of orders and purchases. It being true that a fixed amount of coal would be needed to meet the demands of the year, it followed that a reduction of orders at one period out of the year would mean increased orders and increased burdens on transportation at some other period. Accordingly the mines and the railroads were called upon to perform within a period of a few months the work which should have been spread over the entire year. The result, of course, was disastrous.

The circumstances just detailed afford one of the many illustrations demonstrating the inability of Government agencies to conduct the business of the people of the United States.

(b) At one time a very acute shortage of coal was accentuated by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission commanding the railroads to withdraw a large number of coal cars from the coal business and employ them in transporting other products. This furnishes a second illustration of governmental incompetence in business.

(c) The Government took control, to a very large extent, of vessels engaged in transporting coal. Freight rates were advanced to an almost prohibitive point, with the result that for a time that part of the country obtained its coal supply partly by rail and partly by water. An undue amount of coal was sent by rail in order to secure the more advantageous rates offered by the railroads, then also under Government supervision. In consequence the railroads were totally unable to take care of the increased burden cast upon them and an appalling condition resulted in the part of the country referred to. This is a third illustration of the inability of the Government to conduct the business of the country.

(d) A switchmen's strike at one period tied up a very large number of cars, made it difficult to keep freights moving, and for a time contributed largely to the coal shortage.

It will be observed that all of the foregoing interfering causes of the coal shortage, save that mentioned last, merely contributed to and were a part of the one great interfering cause, to wit, shortage of cars and transportation.

Shortage of cars and transportation facilities being then the cause of the coal famine, we must find the remedy in the removal of that cause.

The problem is not without its difficulties, but it is capable of solution. We should simply see to it that the railroads are required to furnish upon demand all cars required to keep the mines in operation, and to transport the coal promptly to its destination. The Government has the power within the limits of the Constitution to require this service from the railroads. It may be that the railways will find the immediate increase in equipment difficult. However that may be, it is not comparable to the suffering and loss caused by a coal famine. The cause of the difficulty having been ascertained, we should direct our efforts toward a removal of the cause, even though some hardships may be entailed upon the railways, or even though the Government should be required to temporarily advance the required moneys.

But, Mr. President, that is not the method proposed by the pending bills. Instead of dealing with the fact that the coal shortage is due to a failure in transportation, including the furnishing of cars at the mines, we are embarking on a general scheme of governmental control of the mines and the coal business. We are taking that dangerous step toward socialism, although the cause of our present suffering is clearly before us, and although the remedies proposed do not remove the cause.

The trouble, I repeat, is a shortage of cars and transportation. The cure is in supplying cars and transportation. Instead of pursuing the plain path of common sense and removing the cause of our distress, we propose to embark upon socialistic seas by entering upon a scheme for governmental control of private business. We do this in the face of the fact that much of the disaster which has befallen our country has resulted from the intermeddling of the Government in business which can be better conducted by the people themselves.

Mr. President, these are simply the cold, hard facts of the situation. They may not suit the opinions of many people, but they can not be talked out of existence. Wisdom demands that they shall not be disregarded.

(5) It is stated that the price of coal has more than doubled. From this fact the inference is hastily drawn that there must be a combination among the coal producers and coal distributors. Alternatively it is asserted that if there be no combination to fix prices that the prices have been so high as to indicate extortionate profits and oppressive practices by the entire coal business from the large producer to the small retailer.

Much light is thrown on the question of coal prices by the evidence adduced before the committee. To a large extent the causes for the increase of prices have been made plain.

Beginning at the point of production, I shall endeavor to trace the cause for the rise in price of coal.

EFFECT ON PRICES OF INCREASED WAGES AND COSTS.

(a) The evidence committee showed that, prior to the war, coal was produced at the mouth of the mines at very low prices, frequently at a cost of $1 per ton; but that the cost of production at the mines during the fall of 1920 was approximately $3 per ton.

It is important to inquire the reason for this immense increase in the cost of production. The evidence shows that as soon as the Government took charge of the coal business it almost immediately increased the wages of the miners. Subsequently other increases were made, either under direct governmental orders or at the instance or approval of the Government.

It is admitted that the wage increases of the miners alone amounted to $1.12 per ton. It was contended, however, that this estimate omitted many items fairly to be considered as a part of the wage advance and that the true figure was approximately $1.70 per ton. At the same time the item of wages, salaries, materials, and machinery also enormously advanced. The evidence abundantly shows that coal, which was formerly produced at the mouth of the mine at a cost of $1 per ton, in the fall of 1920 actually cost from $2.50 to $3 per ton.

I am not criticizing the raise in the miners' wages, but it is one of the facts which must be reckoned with in considering the advance in the price of coal. The net result was an increase in the actual cost of production from $1 a ton to from $2.50 to $3 a ton.,

EFFECT OF PRICES ON FREIGHT RATES.

Freight rates must also be considered. According to the evidence prior to the war the average freight charge from the mine to the point of consumption was approximately $1.50 per ton. The rates have been advanced so that they average approximately $3 per ton for the same haul. It should be noted that these advances were made while the railroads were in the hands of the Government, or that they have since been made with the direct approval of governmental agencies.

From these figures it will appear that a ton of coal which, in 1914, could be produced at the mine for $1 and hauled to its destination for $1.50, making a total cost of $2.50, now costs as follows: Cost at the mines, $3; freight, $3. Total, $6.

The evidence discloses that prior to the war coal could be delivered by retailers at a cartage charge of from 50 to 75 cents a ton; that in the fall of 1920 the cost of cartage had advanced to from $1 to $1.50 a ton. Adding the cost of cartage, it will be seen that the coal which could formerly be delivered at an actual cost of $3 to $3.50 a ton now costs from $7 to $7.50 a ton.

But the foregoing figures do not take into account the increased costs of the retailer for the maintenance of his business. What these are, the evidence does not fully disclose, because the field was too wide for investigation within the time allotted. It is, however, a matter of common knowledge that all costs advanced enormously.

It is therefore apparent that a great advance in the price of coal was absolutely forced by the increased cost of production and handling. Whatever these increases were, they necessarily went into the price. The responsibilities for the high items of increases discussed must be placed, in large measure, upon the Federal Government, because it has sanctioned and at times commanded these increases in producing costs. What has been stated is not intended as a criticism of the Federal Government. It is cited merely as a fact which can not be disregarded.

SPECULATION AND PROFITS.

At this point we enter two entirely different fields, namely, speculations and profits. Considering these in their order, the evidence before the Manufacturing Committee and other hearings showed that shortly after the European war began there was placed with our industries enormous orders. The railroads and steamship lines were overburdened with business. Every kind of activity was increased. This at once produced a tremendous demand for coal. About this period the newspapers began to carry alarming statements predicting a coal famine. The natural result followed. Great consumers of coal became alarmed and sought to increase their normal purchase. They began bidding against each other in the market, frequently offering exorbitant prices. Labor began to demand an increase of wages. An actual shortage of spot coal resulted. The panic spread and extended. Beyond question some speculators entered the market and without doubt excessive prices were frequently exacted. The condition to which I referred was at one time accentuated by the sudden appearance in the market of buyers from England, who, alarmed at the impending strike in the mines of Wales, rushed to this country and began bidding for coal, in some instances offering prices that were almost fabulous.

As a result of all the facts I have detailed, the people in many parts of the United States were compelled to pay excessive prices.

Let us ascertain now as far as practicable what classes of individuals profited at the expense of the public, to the end that remedies, if necessary, may be suggested.

THE LARGE COAL PRODUCERS.

The record discloses that a very large percentage of the coal produced is sold under contract, and that while there was some defalcation in carrying out these contracts, for the most part they were filled in good faith, as rapidly as conditions would permit and frequently at a loss. Many of the large mines annually contract from 75 to 90 per cent of their entire output. I think it is safe to say that in the attempt to prevent serious loss some of the large mine owners sold their spot coal at an advance, which would in part reimburse them for losses on contract coal. Whatever the fact may be with reference to that, the evidence very conclusively shows that the profits of the large mines of the country during the war and subsequent were in nearly every instance very small when compared with the profits being made in the general industrial and business world.

THE SMALL COAL OPERATORS.

It appears that when the coal shortage occurred and prices advanced, large numbers of men and small companies entered the field of production. Their production costs were, however, much greater than the production costs of the great mines. This coal was thrown on the market at the time prices were mounting toward the peak. Some of these small operators who first came into the field at that time, or who largely increased their output, made for a short time large profits and sold coal at high prices. But it must be remembered that a part of the price is accounted for by the high cost of production in mines of that character. I think I may say without qualification that these so-called "snowbird" mines, while exacting high prices, performed a great service to the country by coming into the market and assisting in supplying the demand during the threatening period of the coal famine and producing an earlier reduction in prices than would otherwise have occurred. Speaking broadly and allowing for special exceptions, it may be said the evidence fails to fix any heavy responsibility in the way of profiteering upon the producers.

THE WHOLESALE DEALERS.

The committee was unable within the limits of the time allotted to trace the question of profits and profiteering which may have occurred in the wholesale and retail trade. The evidence, however, strongly tended to show that many of the wholesalers had transacted their business on what under the circumstances would be regarded as fair margins. There was, however, evidence to show, or at least suggest, that this was not always so.

THE RETAIL DEALERS.

As to the retailers, I think it can be fairly deduced from the evidence that at many places in the United States the retailer charged profits on coal in excess of anything which can be regarded as fair. Indeed, it is difficult to understand how the prices which were charged could be maintained in certain cities of the United States unless there was a combination, express or implied, among the local dealers. This question, however, was not sufficiently investigated so that a comprehensive statement can be made. It must be apparent that combinations of the character referred to, if they exist, are violative of the laws of substantially every State of the Union, that such combinations can be speedily broken up by the local authorities, and that the duty devolves upon them to act with expedition and effect.

If the local authorities can not act with reference to conditions immediately concerning their respective communities, then it is certain that Federal interference will be ineffective. Indeed, most of the transgressions are doubtless by men beyond the jurisdiction of the Federal Government.

REMEDY FOR SPECULATIVE MARKETS.

What remedies should be applied to the general speculative market to which I have adverted? The answer is found in what has recently occurred. As I have said, as soon as prices mounted to an exorbitant figure a vast number of new mines were opened and abandoned works were reentered and placed in production. The railroads having settled their switchmen's strike and otherwise adjusted their business under returning private control, began to furnish cars in sufficient quantities. Coal immediately began to reach the market in immense quantities. Prices were broken, and likewise many of the speculators were broken and went into bankruptcy. Even before the committee hearings had been concluded coal threatened to become a drug upon the market. The coal was being offered at the mouth of the mines at a very small profit beyond the cost of production. It can to-day be bought in all the great coal-producing areas of the United States at normal figures. But it must be remembered that these normal figures are from two and a half to three times the price of coal at the mines prior to the war. We must not lose sight of the fact that this increased price is due largely to the item of increased wages and cost of materials. The coal can now be delivered to the various parts of the United States as rapidly as it is needed. But here again we must not forget that freight rates have doubled, and in some instances more than doubled. Until these controlling facts are changed the country is confronted with the problem of high-priced coal. That problem, I repeat, can only be effectively and permanently solved by a reduction in the cost of production and a reduction in freight rates.

It is interesting to consider the danger of future coal famines. Beyond all question, the people should be encouraged to lay in their supply of coal in the summer months, because this will enable the mines to work throughout the year, and it will relieve the railroads of a tremendous burden during the winter months.

But, in addition, the railroads should be compelled to supply additional cars. Indeed, I believe to some extent they have entered upon that work.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him, the evidence before the Interstate Commerce Committee just the other day indicated that there were 360,000 empty cars now, so that the condition does not exist at the present time.

Mr. REED. There may be 360,000 empty cars now, but there may be a demand next winter for all of those cars and for additional cars. It is the business of the railroads, within the limits of reason, to be prepared to haul the peak load. The argument that the people must ship their goods when it is most convenient for the railroads to transport them can not be sustained. The railroads should have a sufficient amount of cars and equipment so that they can reasonably meet the demands of the country. They may be willing to do this without Government command, but I am in favor of the Government giving the command in order to make certain.

Mr. STANLEY. The Senator will probably touch on it in the course of his remarks, but I should like to suggest at this point another element in the increase of the price of coal, which to my mind was more significant than any of the others. It was the domestic demand. The ordinary demand for coal was multiplied from 200 to 500 per cent by the hysteria of consumers at that time.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, as I have indicated, the faults against which we are inveighing appear to be past. Competition has done its work. Permit competition to exist and business will thrive. But competition can not exist and business can not thrive unless the Government takes its hand from the throat of business and from the throat of the people. We have arrived at a time, sir, when we ought to permit the American people to once more attend to their own private affairs.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I understand the Senator's argument to be that the scarcity of coal is due to the shortage of cars.

Mr. REED. That is the great cause.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. The Senator overlooks the fact that it is due to many other things—the shortage of locomotives, the shortage of terminals, the shortage of track facilities, and unless you can even the load on the railroads by increasing the output in the summer time, you can not overcome the present scarcity by simply supplying cars.

Mr. REED. Oh, well, Mr. President, that is exactly what I have been arguing. Where I speak of cars I, of course, include the engines to haul them and the tracks over which they can be hauled. I say that the railroad company did not put its cars at the mouth of the mine. It makes no difference what the reason was, whether it was because it lacked a locomotive or whether it lacked sidetracks, the fact is that the cars were not there.

Now I come to answer what I think the Senator means to suggest by his question. If there is a shortage of locomotives, that shortage must be made up, for the people of this country are not to be put in the position of not having adequate transportation facilities. The loss due to the shortage of coal in one city for one week would buy all the railroad cars needed. The loss due to the shortage of coal in a single State for one week would buy all the needed locomotives. If we have not enough sidetracks, locomotives, and cars, are the people, therefore, to continue to suffer hardship and endure incalculable losses? Should we not employ common sense and provide the needed equipment?

SHOULD THE PEOPLE BE FORCED TO TRANSPORT THEIR NECESSITIES AT INCONVENIENT TIMES AND AT FINANCIAL LOSS, OR SHOULD WE PROVIDE THE MEANS OF TRANSPORTATION?

Would you make a man go to town three days before he wanted to go rather than provide a vehicle to take him there when he needed to go? Possibly the railroads could run with half of their present passenger equipment if they could compel the people to travel in equal numbers each day. But that would hardly do. It is inevitable that cars shall at times be only partially loaded. It is the business of the railroads to provide the necessary cars to haul the people and the products of the country. This they must do when the necessity arises, not at the railroads' convenience.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt the Senator, but I hope he will yield to me, so that I may answer his argument in part. I understand the Senator's contention to be that if in the winter season there are not sufficient cars to supply the coal, his plan is that rather than following the economic plan of loading those cars in the summer time, when they are idle, it is the duty of the railroads to buy more cars to move the coal in the winter, notwithstanding the fact that those cars lie idle for five months during the year.

Mr. REED. Yes, sir.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Now I ask the Senator where the railroads are going to get the money to do it. It is a splendid theory, but it does not work out in practice.

Mr. REED. Very well. The Senator is changing his position. He is now arguing that the bill will aid the railroads.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Oh, the Senator knows that that is not my purpose.

Mr. REED. I do not mean to reflect on my friend. I am simply calling attention to what I regard as a change in his position.

I do not mean to criticize in any way the Senator from New Jersey or to intimate that he is in the service of the railroad company. Nevertheless his position has been shifted. The general support of the bill was based upon the contention that it would benefit the consumer of coal.

The present contention is that it benefits the railroads. The argument that we should enact legislation to force the people to buy their coal in equal amounts throughout the year in order to benefit the railroads is utterly untenable. It is the business of the railroads to be prepared at all times to haul passengers and freight when tendered. This, of course, is subject to the rule of reason. A plan which would force the people to divide the passenger and freight traffic equally throughout the 365 days of the year would be utterly intolerable. Nearly all products are seasonal and must be moved at the season when there is a demand. The loss upon the investment of the few extra cars and engines would be counterbalanced a thousand times over by the loss resulting from a failure to supply these agencies of commerce when necessary to meet the demands of business.

Let us take the case of coal. It is true that the railroads could, with their present equipment, move all the coal needed, providing the shipment were equally distributed throughout the year. But are there not some economic reasons why this should not be required? Would not the loss occasioned by the shipment of coal out of season be greater than the loss occasioned by a larger investment in cars and equipment?

Under the scheme proposed a man employing a factory would be obliged during the summer months to pile up his coal for the year. A very large percentage of bituminous coal can not be stored in quantities without danger of spontaneous combustion. Moreover, the coal begins to depreciate as soon as exposed to the air. It is frequently better business for the consumer to order his coal when needed, even at a slight advance of price.

It also frequently occurs that the household consumer can not store his coal, either because of an inability to pay for it in advance of the time he needs it for consumption or because he may find it necessary to move his place of residence. All the facts are taken into consideration by the average citizen. If we would only appreciate the fact that the average American citizen can attend to his business better than we can attend to it for him, we would the better serve our country.

An attempt to compel the citizen to buy his coal out of season when he does not want it is foolish. It will undoubtedly cost more than a few additional railroad cars and engines.

That is the answer I make to some interrogatories of the Senator. There is no doubt but that the Government can impose upon the railroads the duty to furnish the cars, and, if they fail to furnish them, that they can be mulcted in damages.

You ask me how the railroads are going to get the money to buy the cars. The answer to that is that they will get the money when the business of the country revives, when the railroads get on a sound basis. But in the meantime the country must not suffer. And it can not do without coal for want of cars. The money must be provided. It can be if the Government will stop its destructive interference with business. I have no attack to make upon railroads. In my judgment they have done many outrageous things in the past. They have been quite thoroughly punished for that course of conduct. But because they have done things bad in the past I do not want to wreak any vengeance upon them to-day. I want to see them work out of their difficulties. But it is an utterly untenable position to undertake to regulate the business of the country for the benefit of the railroads instead of insisting that the railroads shall always be ready to furnish the necessary cars and equipment to haul the goods of the people of the United States.

It seems to me that if we will only permit economic laws to operate a little while all of these questions will solve themselves. The wise proprietor of a railroad, if his cars are going empty in the summer, will be likely to reduce the rates to promote traffic. The wise man who can buy coal and take that advantage will do so, and we will not need the arbitrary action of any governmental board in order to bring it about.

As I have sat in this Chamber in the last few weeks and witnessed the procession of bills that have proposed to regulate the business of 110,000,000 people from Washington I have been appalled. There seems to be complete forgetfulness of the fact that there are certain great economic laws which, if they are allowed to operate, will bring us back to a normal condition, and that every obstruction to the operation of those laws will continue the distressful conditions which grew out of the war. War is a disturber of the economic structure. It is an arbitrary interference, and because of that arbitrary interference with economic conditions all values are disrupted and all calculations are set aside. The only way to get back to the normal is to allow commerce to flow in its normal and even course; trade and barter to settle the question of values; each citizen to exercise his natural God-given right to deal and traffic for himself; do that and the genius of our people will restore prosperity.

But the schemes we indulge in here are based upon the thought that we can pick out four or five men of commonplace ability, frequently below mediocrity, bring them to the Capitol, give them a title, and immediately they will be endowed with superhuman wisdom and power which they will always exercise in perfect justice.

But with almost infallible certainty they do the wrong thing. They do the wrong thing for reasons to which I briefly advert. The great economic structure of America was of gradual development. Its growth was as natural as that from infancy to manhood. It began in the trade and barter with the Indians at a time when we paid our debts in long green tobacco and in wampum. It expanded with the expansion of the country. Great States have arisen, great marts, great railroads, great markets. There is, however, not an industry in the United States that thrives unless it fills some economic want. If it did not fill that economic want it would die. The little corner grocery must close its doors unless it meets some want of its customers.

There is, of course, always a theorist who can tell just how to improve conditions. He can show that the corner grocery store supports a family; that it has a small trade; that its profits are higher than they are down town. He therefore demands its abolition in the name of economy and reform. It is true that the store does support the family; it is true that it does charge higher prices than down town; but why is it there? It is there because it accommodates a neighborhood.

The great economic system of the United States is made up of millions of units, each one of which performs some useful function. The little grocer knows what to buy because he knows what his customers need. The wholesaler knows what to buy because he knows what his commercial customers want. The manufacturer knows what to make because he knows what the demands of the wholesaler will be upon him. A system run in that way regulates itself. The law of competition comes into play. Whenever any individual charges too much some one enters the market and takes his trade away from him, or he is obliged to reduce his price. That is the general system that obtains in the United States.

But along comes a theorist who has a plan which he thinks will improve upon the methods of business. He soon joins hands with some reformer. Together they bring in a bill which proposes to create a board consisting of four or five men, establish it in Washington, and authorize it arbitrarily to change some of the factors of the great economic machine I have described. When that single change is made, it affects the entire system of production and consumption. It is a monkey wrench thrown into the wonderful machine that has been created by a century and a half of time. It interrupts the operation of the machine. It invariably brings trouble and sometimes disaster. Let me illustrate this a little. We took over the railroads. We put them in charge of one man who set up a railroad administration. Almost the next day there appeared in the front end of every passenger car a placard bearing in substance these words: "These railroads are being run in the interest of the public and of the employees whose partnership in the enterprise is cheerfully and ungrudgingly recognized."

That doctrine would have done credit to Karl Marx in his palmiest days. It offers the best justification for what is known as the Plumb plan. If this doctrine is correct, then every employee, the moment he gets his job, has the right to claim that he is a part owner of the business.

Having promulgated that astounding doctrine, the Railroad Administration proceeded to arbitrarily raise the wages of the men. Perhaps a raise was necessary. But this was an arbitrary raise, made to apply in all parts of the United States, and absolutely disregarded the costs of living and the conditions of living of the employees.

The board gave the same wages to a man living in South Carolina, where he could board for five to six dollars a week, that it gave a similar employee in New York City, who was obliged to pay three times the amount.

Regulated in this arbitrary way, by men who knew nothing about the business, in a little while gross inequalities between the men were produced and a vast burden was placed upon the railroads which they could not bear. I am not here advocating low wages for railroad men. I believe they ought to be well paid. But when any man sits down in the city of Washington and waves his hand over the United States and says that every man who happens to work for a railroad in a certain line of employment must have the same pay, he is disregarding an economic law.

I speak of it now kindly because I recognize the fact that in the exigencies of war we were compelled to act speedily. I use it merely by way of illustration. I hope neither to harrow nor to offend any man's sensibilities. Illustrations may be multiplied ad infinitum. A change in the price of steel affected every contract in the land. A change in the price of coal, up or down, affected the price of every ingot of steel that was made. The entire system was thrown out of joint by these arbitrary changes.

Have we not arrived at a time when we can put the business of the people of the United States back into the hands of the men who created it? When I speak of business I do not refer to "big business," the "big trusts," or even the men engaged in merchandising. I am speaking about every man who produces with hand or brain, every man who maintains a household, every man who is engaged, as all of us ought to be, in producing something.

The pending bill, as I have said, is but the forerunner of another bill worse than this a thousandfold, a proposition of regulation. Let me tell my friends something about this question of regulation. Let me tell it to them in language so plain it may seem brutal. Continue this system of regulation a few months longer and you will have established the fundamental principle of socialism in this country. It has been proposed here to control coal because it is a necessity of life, a great primal necessity. I grant it is a great primal necessity. But if we are going to embark upon the policy of regulating everything that is a necessity because it is a necessity, where will we stop?

Coal is no more a primal necessity than clothing. Our ancestors wore clothes of some kind for thousands of years before they knew anything about the burning of coal. Coal is no more a primal necessity than steel or iron, because we must have the steel or iron to produce the coal, just as we must have the coal to produce the steel or iron. Destroy the steel industry, destroy the knowledge of how to produce iron and we would go back to barbarism. There would be no plow to turn the soil. There would be no reaper to harvest the crop. There would be no railroads to carry their mighty burdens across the continent. There would be no great steamships plowing the ocean. There would be no massive buildings lifting their roofs almost to the very skies. It would be barbarism.

If we should regulate coal, clearly we should regulate steel and iron; and if steel and iron, why not copper? Why not take over and own the copper mines, because copper is also a great necessity?

After the minerals that God Almighty made, then why not take under the beneficent protection of the Government the things which men produce? Why not sheep that men raise and that pasture on a thousand hills? Why not go into the sheep business, because the meat and the fleece of sheep are great necessities?

Why not take over the cotton business, because cotton is a great necessity? Why not insist that the Government shall control that, for we could not get along to-day under modern conditions without the wonderful crop of cotton that is raised in the Southern States. Shoes are a necessity. We could by the same process of reasoning take them over. If we enter upon this scheme, if we permit the camel to put its socialistic nose into the tent, its gross body will follow, and it ought to follow. We have no more right to seize one private industry than we have to seize all private industries.

We are embarking on a career of socialistic madness. This bill is to be followed by one authorizing a bureau of the Federal Government to take charge of the propagation and raising of babies. More remarkable is the fact that the commission is to be composed almost exclusively of old maids. But I will discuss that bill at a later date. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Mr. President, in conclusion I only desire to say that I have, I think, clearly pointed out the causes for the high price of coal, which, if considered, will suggest their own remedies. They are not to be found within the provisions of this socialistic bill or its socialistic twin brother. Neither are they to be found in other socialistic remedies. The proposition is a plain one of providing cars and equipment to transport coal. The mines will produce it and the people will buy it at such times and seasons as their wants manifest. These were the conditions under which the country lived and prospered prior to 1914. The was is over and the interference of the Government, which may in part have been justified during that great struggle, should also come to an end.

Tariff and Taxation.

OF

HON. JAMES A. FREAR,

OF WISCONSIN.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, few tariff bills are satisfactory in every respect, and the Fordney bill we have just passed is no exception to the rule. Like every tariff bill, it has items that, in my judgment, can not be defended; but, on the other hand, a failure to enact a tariff bill at this time will fail to meet pre-election promises and leave in force the Underwood law, with its low tariff rates and extended free lists. Tariff legislation, according to promise, has been enacted and protective duties have been placed on every schedule, including agriculture, in an effort to measure the difference in cost of production here and abroad.

American labor, now receiving ten times the cost of Japanese or Chinese labor, or several times that of European countries, will now be able to compete with adequate protective duties. Failure to enact such duties would result in a flood of importations and close many American factories, because American consumers, like all other consumers, are looking for cheap prices when articles are relatively of the same value.

No man can say exactly how the Fordney bill compares with the Payne bill or the Underwood bill in its many schedules and thousands of items, but it is certain that Underwood rates have been materially increased and that Payne rates have been increased in different cases. On the average, we are advised, Payne rates have been lowered. American valuation is a new measure of protection, believed to average about one-third higher than foreign valuations, so that a rate of 20 per cent American valuation is equivalent to 30 per cent foreign valuation under the Payne law. If prices are double those abroad, the American valuation would raise Payne rates 50 per cent where the same duty is written into the law. That comparison is an element of uncertainty that can only be determined when individual items are considered.

No rule is exact, nor perhaps nearly exact, because articles are uniformly of higher value now than under the Payne law and prices are higher in 1921 than they were in 1909. For this reason it is hard to give an estimate of comparisons excepting in specific instances, but the bill carries ample protective duties in the great majority of cases, and in some instances specified in my additional views the duties are higher than are justified when the article protected is controlled by a monopoly, such as the Cement Trust, Steel Trust, Aluminum Trust, or other well-known monopolies.

TARIFF LEGISLATION OUGHT TO HELP BUSINESS.

We need not look for an immediate stimulus to business prophesied by high-tariff exponents, but the law when enacted should stabilize business and give manufacturers a certainty of protection that would not be warranted under existing law. Anything that benefits manufacturers, agriculture, and other lines of business will reflect better business conditions on the country unless duties are prohibitive so as to keep out foreign trade.

The world owes us over $10,000,000,000, and we have most of the money, so that the world expects to pay us largely in trade, and only by permitting imports can such debts be paid in trade. Under the Underwood bill foreign trade is allowed to displace many unprotected lines of domestic trade. An effort has been made under the Fordney bill to keep clear of either extreme, and experience will soon demonstrate how far the committee has succeeded. Many needful amendments can be made at the other end of the Capitol, and it is important that duties now on potash used for fertilizer, cement, lime, and similar articles should be reduced or taken off altogether. Under the bill agriculture has been well protected after eight years under the Underwood law free list. I believe hides should have received a protective duty, and other amendments were urged, but, generally speaking, farmers' products were carefully considered by a subcommittee of which I was a member.

An indefensible proposal reported by the committee of an embargo on dyestuffs warranted any protectionist or antiprotectionist in voting against the bill, because it was a bold bid by a dye monopoly that to-day rules prices and production in this country. The proposal was stricken out by the House after full consideration by a vote of 209 to 193, nearly a record vote in total votes cast, and nearly equally divided between the parties, and with that proposition out of the bill it is greatly improved. Striking out the duty on asphaltum and lumber also improves the bill, although it is subject to much improvement by the Senate, and is acceptable in some schedules only by comparison with the existing low-rate Underwood law.

THE NEW REVENUE BILL.

The House has completed its first task in giving promised relief to industry by the enactment of tariff revision. We are about to undertake revenue revision, and in a few words let me express the situation confronting Congress as seen by a member of the committee charged with the task of framing a great revenue bill.

The Treasury Department represents to us that the United States is owing on all its obligations, including Liberty and Victory bonds, certificates of indebtedness, and in all over $24,000,000,000, or about twenty-four times our national indebtedness five years ago. Foreign Governments are owing us over $10,000,000,000, counting accrued interest. Not one dollar of that principal or of interest has been paid since these loans were made during the war excepting small payments of interest deducted from loans we made the Allies. The Secretary of the Treasury asks for wide powers of settlement on these foreign loans. I will not discuss even incidentally such proposed powers excepting to say that Congress will do well to hesitate in granting authority to any official that may encroach upon legislative prerogatives, particularly in view of recent disclosures of correspondence with Great Britain by the last administration wherein questions of refunding the loan, interest payment, and even cancellation of the debt was seriously discussed without knowledge of Congress. Congress is better able to determine the temper of the people than any administrative officer, and as the people have contributed the money represented by the $24,000,000,000 in obligations, and as the people must pay the taxes we levy through the proposed bill, it is folly to try and shift responsibility for legislation respecting loans or relating to taxes over to the shoulders of any official. That responsibility is ours.

NO TAX LAW SHOULD BE REPEALED BEFORE A SUBSTITUTE IS OFFERED.

We are advised that from $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 must be raised annually from taxation, direct or indirect. No tax law now in existence should be repealed and no tax removed unless a square understanding regarding any proposed substitute is first offered to the committee. We can not escape an interest payment of about $1,000,000,000 annually; we must provide large expenditures for disabled soldiers pledged by present legislation; we can not escape appropriations for all activities of Government, including the Army and Navy, which two branches alone reached over $800,000,000 this year, while countless other liabilities must be met annually. We can not repeal any tax law, whether it be for excess profits, reduction in income tax rate, or other existing taxes, until we have positive evidence that we are providing less burdensome taxes.

Speaking as an individual member of a great committee charged with this tremendous responsibility, I call attention to the fact that the Ways and Means Committee gave many weeks' hearings to over 1,000 witnesses on a tariff bill that will bring in approximately $500,000,000 in revenues annually. Our committee also gave a week to the proponents of a sales tax early this year, and the Finance Committee of the Senate has given several weeks' hearings to proponents of that same sales tax, with occasional objectors. We are now confronted with an announcement that only four days' hearings will be given to all tax proposals before drafting a tax bill carrying $4,000,000,000 in annual revenues.

WHO WILL DRAFT THE HOUSE BILL, AND HOW?

Either we have an exaggerated estimate of our own ability or of the ability of Treasury Department advisers or else we are content to draft a hybrid bill that will be torn to pieces in the Senate, while the House and the Ways and Means Committee will continue to be the dog wagged by the legislative tail at the other end of the Capitol. Constitutional power to draft this bill was properly lodged with the popular branch of Congress by our forefathers, because they wisely saw it was closest to the people and that the House more nearly reflects the viewpoint of the taxpayer. How, then, can we justify to the country four days' hearings for this tremendously important law? By what authority did Washington press reports carry a statement purporting to reflect the views of the President and Treasury Department that our committee would hold no hearings, but would report out instanter another "Longworth bill" which a member of the Ways and Means Committee introduced as a revenue producer? Without reflection upon the abilities or ability of any member of the committee or of Congress, it would seem an unwarranted responsibility to place on the shoulders of any one member of the committee.

As a humble member of that same committee I venture to call attention to a few mistakes evidenced by recent history that should make the Ways and Means Committee hesitate to escape deliberate consideration of revenue legislation at this time or to accept the dictum of any man who would prevent such hearings.

At the beginning of the session the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] insisted that tax legislation should precede tariff revision. The committee overwhelmingly decided differently. Not one of the thousand and odd business men who appeared before the committee at tariff hearings questioned its judgment in giving preference to the tariff, and not one asked for tax revision first. That move came largely from large banking interests, from the other end of the Capitol, from certain officials, and from the press that reflects such sentiment. Again, after the dye embargo provision was assured place in the tariff and placed in charge of the gentleman from Ohio, the same distinguished member of the committee offered a joint resolution declaring for interim tariff legislation and an immediate enforcement of the Fordney bill upon the day of its introduction that would place all its provisions in effect at once, notwithstanding the bill had not been agreed upon in committee. The unwise resolution was rejected by a Republican conference. Again, at a second conference the same distinguished gentleman proposed a resolution that certain measures be given a separate vote by the House, but, significantly, the dye embargo, then written in the bill, was missing from the list.

A second conference repudiated this second dictatorial resolution. In an effort to place a dye embargo in the tariff bill on its final passage, every effort was made to drag reenforcements to its aid from the administration and Gen. Pershing down to a cloud of dye manufacturers thronging the lobby, who sought to put through the embargo. Again the effort was defeated, and the same attempts to direct the committee will again be questioned in efforts to urge undue haste in the preparation of this bill.

Why, then, with that record during one short session, should the Ways and Means Committee accept the Longworth tax bill or any other bill without careful consideration? What opportunity for consideration and advice can be had in four days' hearings when drawing a $4,000,000,000 tax bill? What is behind the tax bill? We now know what was behind the dye embargo and have a right to reject undue haste.

WHAT WILL THE NEW TAX LAW CONTAIN?

Let us briefly consider the problem before Congress with which the Ways and Means Committee is immediately concerned. First, a tariff bill was demanded, and that task is temporarily completed. Second, a tax bill must be framed this session. Will that bill contain a consumption tax? Practically all hearings in House and Senate have been devoted to a consumption tax called "a sales tax." Will either the House or Senate try to place such a tax in the next revenue bill? Only a blind man will deny that strenuous efforts by the press and leading men to that end have been untiring for over six months. I can not believe a sales tax will be passed by Congress, and yet it is a threat from large financial interests.

Who can give any promise of the final bill that will be passed after the repeated quotations in favor of such tax by leading men of the House and Senate committees?

Will the Ways and Means Committee recommend a repeal of the excess-profits tax which brought into the Treasury with the income tax for the fiscal year 1921, $3,212,713,000, or two-thirds of all revenue receipts for last year to June 30, 1921? Conceding that receipts will be much lower in 1921, we are now legislating for several years, and possibly for a decade or more; surely until normalcy returns to business. What reason can be advanced for the repeal now of a great revenue producer? The excess profits law grants exemptions to every corporation including 8 per cent profits before the law attaches. Is not that a just tax if we propose to follow the economic principle of taxing according to ability to pay?

Charging that this tax interferes materially with business deceives no one. Loss temporarily of foreign markets, overproduction at home, enormous transportation charges, high cost of production, and other disturbing business conditions will not be affected by a repeal of the excess-profits tax law nor will the country accept without question the demand of interested parties for its repeal. What hearings have been had on the repeal of the excess-profits tax? What interest in the tax have those who have urged its repeal?

Will the Ways and Means Committee recommend a reduction of higher surtaxes on incomes because of investments in tax-free securities? Those demanding such reduction, like those demanding repeal of the excess-profits tax law, are men and interests affected by and who pay the tax. Without discussing its merits the country will look with suspicion on any large proposed reduction until Congress passes a law seeking to reach tax-free securities by one of the several bills introduced for that purpose.

WHY NOT REACH THE CAUSE OF TAX DODGING IF IT EXISTS?

A question that comes to the average person is, Why has Congress introduced a number of bills and resolutions proposing to prevent the issue of bonds exempt from Federal taxation? Constitutional amendments and various methods have been proposed, but no measure has passed either House to that end, although many interests demand a reduction of surtaxes on incomes of over $50,000 annually. A maximum of 20, 30, 40, and 50 per cent has been proposed, but why not begin with a proposal of preventing the issuance of tax-exempt securities if that is the basic reason for such reduction.

Will the Ways and Means Committee recommend a tax on undistributed profits of corporations, as recommended by ex-Secretary of the Treasury Houston? If not, why not? Such tax is placed upon partnerships little and big, but not on undistributed profits of corporations. When profits of corporations are distributed the individual income tax at once applies, but when profits are retained by the corporation, whether they be 20 or 100 per cent annually on the capital invested, those profits can not be reached by the Government unless the corporation chooses to distribute.

Stock dividends and undistributed profits form an easy escape from corporate taxation that no wise corporation will neglect to embrace, yet for years we have not realized any tax from either. Will the committee recommend that such tax be levied and collected?

Several of these proposed tax laws are not popular with the Treasury Department or with business men who will pay the tax. I am not passing judgment on any repeal or change in taxation. I do say any change must be carefully considered. With four or five billion dollars revenue to be raised annually no return to prewar conditions can be had however much we seek to deceive ourselves by promising impossible relief.

Where, then, is the tax to come from unless from those best able to pay? Will it be taken from 4,000,000 ex-soldiers, a great many of whom have lost their prewar jobs? Will it be taken from the farmers whose products are down to prices near those of the prewar period, while higher costs of production have prevented payments of interest on the farm mortgage and in some cases of farm taxes on land that can not escape the eagle eye of the assessor? Few farmers can dodge taxes, because everything is in sight; but every farmer, mechanic, and small business man can be made to pay 3 cents tax on letter postage, according to a recommendation by the Treasury Department, thereby enabling the excess-profits tax to be repealed.

A SOLDIERS' COMPENSATION LAW.

Announcement by the Secretary of the Treasury that the country has large debts and therefore can not grant soldiers' compensation aid has also been repeated by President Harding. Far be it from me to disagree with these distinguished men, but conditions are no different now from those existing last session when a soldiers' compensation bill passed the House overwhelmingly. Every Senator on the Finance Committee knew the condition of the Federal Treasury as well as Secretary Mellon when that committee unanimously recommended a soldiers' compensation bill several weeks ago. What, then, is the reason the soldiers' bill has been set aside after a promise in the platform to give due recognition to such claims? Who demands that the soldiers' compensation bill be set aside? Does it come from any of the 3,000,000 soldiers who served at $1 per day, practically all of which munificent amount went for insurance and allotments? How many $1 a day men have asked that the bill be set aside? How many $1 a year men or those who profited during the war, who stayed home while the soldiers saved us from an enormous German indemnity—how many of these dollar a year men favor a soldiers' compensation bill? How many of these men are in favor of dividing their excess profits with the Government by proper tax laws in order to aid the ex-soldiers through a compensation law?

It is estimated that $300,000,000 would meet all expenses for the first year under the fourfold soldiers' plan and that $500,000,000 ought to be received annually from foreign loans after payments have been agreed to with which to cover that amount. In that case the Government will not go bankrupt even if the soldiers' bonus bill is passed at this session. In no case will the Government go bankrupt.

What answer has been made to a request for a $300,000,000 appropriation for the soldiers, which would rapidly be reduced during the succeeding years of payment as provided in the soldiers' fourfold plan?

What answer was made by the Treasury when the railroads, after charging more than double prewar transportation rates 32 months after the war, are now asking $500,000,000 from the Public Treasury in addition to a half billion dollars credit from the Government to help sell their bonds? Will the railroads get it? Will the soldiers get half that amount for a fourfold plan of compensation?

We have just appropriated nearly $450,000,000 for naval expenses 32 months after the armistice was signed. Is this in preparation for another war; and if so, will we proceed to draft the men who have just returned and send them back at $1 a day, or what will be the plan? We have just appropriated nearly $400,000,000 for the Army 32 months after hostilities ceased between Germany and the United States—for an Army part of which is still quartered in Germany. We can do this, yet bankruptcy is threatened, according to high authority, from a soldiers' compensation bill.

A demand for $300,000,000 comes from the Shipping Board to galvanize that war tragedy into some kind of pretended functioning, and this expenditure, like the $500,000,000 for railways and $850,000,000 for war, and lesser sums for other activities, have one and all received the approval of the administrative officers or of Congress, while the soldiers' compensation bill, passed by the last House and recommended by the Senate committee this session, is dropped in the discard without explanation or promise of resurrection. I can not subscribe to that decision.

RESPONSIBILITY CAN NOT BE SHIFTED.

The Ways and Means Committee, representing the House, has the duty and power under the Constitution of preparing revenue measures, including tariff bills. It is not supposed to be the fifth wheel to any administrative bureau, however high, and has responsibilities distinct and independent of any official.

In like manner the House through that committee, with full knowledge of the Nation's finances, has the power to draft and pass a bill carrying compensation to soldiers, a million of whom, it is estimated, to-day are without permanent jobs. Let the Senate refuse to agree if it so desires, or let the Executive veto any bill passed if not approved by him, but the spectacle of the Secretary of the Treasury telling the Ways and Means Committee what tax laws to pass and what to repeal and what action to take on soldiers' compensation or other legislation is one that would make the fathers of the Constitution turn over and marvel at the transfer of power by Congress to these officials.

I am a good soldier when acting under orders and under the military code, but in the drafting of a revenue bill the House has certain duties to perform and rights to preserve that will not be protected by accepting directions from any other branch of Congress or from any other branch of the Government.

FOUR DAYS' HEARINGS FOR A FOUR BILLION DOLLAR BILL.

Four days given to public hearings on taxation carries its own message to the country, and two weeks' preparation of a four billion dollar bill to please any man or any set of men is not a compliance with the spirit of the Constitution that directs the House to initiate revenue bills.

A great revenue measure is before the Ways and Means Committee—greater by far in its economic consequences than any measure ever reported by this committee. Any decision that fails to give deliberate and intelligent consideration to that bill on the part of the committee reflects not alone on the committee but upon the legislative body which it represents.

The country will resent any hasty action, and it will study well any bill that fails to receive proper consideration. As a humble member of the committee, proud of its high standing and prerogatives, I desire that nothing may occur to cause a loss of public confidence in its collective judgment or recommendations or in the deliberations of Congress which we represent.

Members of Congress do not desire to be presumptuous, but on the contrary prefer to be "regular" and to support leaders of their party organization in matters of legislation, and they recognize that all matters of legislation are reached through compromise of opinions and judgment, but matters of vital moment to the people of the country should not be reached without receiving the judgment and aid of those best qualified to speak. I have the judgment of able Treasury tax experts on different tax problems mentioned and do not believe they should be lightly set aside. I shall offer them as given to me and trust the committee will carefully consider their merits before reaching conclusions, because by that process alone will a correct decision be reached.

The Fordney Tariff Bill.

OF

HON. I. CLINTON KLINE,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, July 20, 1921.

Mr. KLINE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, in the good old book of Isaiah we find these words: "Come now, and let us reason together." And that is what we should do concerning this question of a protective tariff. We should forget parties and politics, and earnestly inquire, "What shall we do for the best interests of all our people?" True, they tell us that we should legislate for the best interests of all the world. Very well, but it is likewise true that "charity begins at home." And it was said nearly 2,000 years ago that "if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." It becomes us, I think, to provide first for our own American people, to see that they are prosperous, and after that we can and should do as much as possible for the rest of the world.

There are still a few people who say that a protective tariff is unconstitutional. Without discussing the question we would merely state that Washington did not think so, Hamilton did not think so, Adams did not think so, nor Jefferson, Calhoun, Monroe, Clay, or Jackson. They all believed in a protective tariff. Washington urged it, as did also Jefferson and all the others named.

I am among those who firmly believe in a protective tariff; that is, a duty on imported goods sufficiently high to protect us against the cheaply made goods of foreign countries. The tariff should be equal to the difference between the cost of production here and abroad.

If we have no tariff, then naturally the goods will be made where labor is cheapest, and that, as we all know, is in foreign lands. But if the goods are made abroad and shipped in here then our factories are idle, our laborers are out of work, and their wives and children hungry. And so soon as factories and forges and mines are idle, then our farmers are affected; merchants are affected; and indeed, all the people are affected. Every farmer knows that when the factories are idle, the mines are idle, and the railroads hauling little, then he has a poor market for his products. For without work there can be no wages, and without wages there is no money with which to buy the product of farm and factory. I recall such a period when my father sold potatoes for 25 cents a bushel—scarcely the cost of production even at that time, and the laboring man could hardly buy any at that price.

Some one said many years ago:

> I do not know much about political economy, but I do know that when we purchase a ton of steel rails from Great Britain for $100, we get the rails and Great Britain gets the money, and when we produce the rails from our own mines and in our own mills we have both the money and the rails.

And it seems perfectly clear that that is true.

But we have all learned that "experience is the best teacher." That is true in the life of a nation as well as in the life of an individual. Let us inquire, therefore, what has been the actual experience of America with reference to this question of protective tariff.

It may be well to note that the first law passed by an American Congress was a tariff law protecting American industries and labor. The preamble reads as follows:

> Whereas it is necessary for the support of the Government, for the discharge of the debts of the United States, and the encouragement and protection of manufacturers that duties be laid on goods, wares, and merchandise imported.

From that time on the pendulum between free trade or tariff for revenue only and a protective tariff swung back and forth, and it is interesting to note the results.

Shortly after the close of the War of 1812, Congress lowered the duties, and, in fact, removed them from nearly every commodity. The result was just what we might anticipate—financial disorder came upon the country; there were thousands of idle people, and, in fact, a panic in the land.

In 1824 a protective tariff bill was passed, and soon business and prosperity were restored to the country, which continued until 1833, when a bill was passed providing for a gradual reduction of the tariff. Within a short time the Treasury began to show signs of distress, business was stagnated, properties were sold on foreclosure proceedings, and there was trouble enough everywhere.

In 1846 the Walker tariff bill was passed, being for revenue only. For a time there was prosperity, but the ultimate result was just the same. There was a panic in the land.

In 1861 the Morrill Act was passed, which, with many amendments, continued in force until the McKinley Act of 1890. During the period following the Civil War business was good. The farmers were prosperous, the laborers were prosperous, the manufacturers were prosperous, and all the people were living in comfort. This condition continued for many years, but the people began to complain that the tariff was a tax and elected Mr. Cleveland to the Presidency on a tariff-for-revenue-only platform. No tariff bill, however, was passed during his first administration, for the reason that both Houses were not in sympathy with his views. Then came four years of prosperity, under Benjamin Harrison, and again Cleveland became President, with both Houses of Congress sharing his views in reference to the tariff question. It was complained that there was too much money in the Treasury. The Wilson bill, being a law of tariff for revenue only, was passed; and there are thousands of people living to-day who will remember the results. The goods were naturally made where labor was cheapest and brought into market from other lands. That meant idle mills and factories and forges, and comparatively little to do in the mines and on the railroads, and business everywhere at ebb. Millions of men were idle; there were 60,000 failures. Coxey's army marched to Washington. There were soup-houses all over this country to keep people from starving. That was true in my own town of Sunbury, and throughout this broad land of ours. And the money went out of the National Treasury so rapidly that the Government was compelled to borrow a very large amount in order to meet the running expenses, instead of having an excess, as before. President Cleveland stated the condition as follows in his message to Congress in 1893:

> With plenteous crops, with abundant promise of remunerative production and manufacture, with unusual invitation to safe investment, and with satisfactory assurance to business enterprise, suddenly financial fear and distrust have sprung up on every side. Numerous money-eyed institutions have suspended. * * * Surviving corporations and individuals are content to keep in hand the money they are usually anxious to loan. * * * And loss and failure have involved every branch of business.

The people grew tired of conditions, and at the following election elected William McKinley for President by a large majority. Another tariff bill was passed, and soon factories were busy and the farmers could sell their products, and the whole country was prosperous. We thus continued until 1913, when the Underwood law was passed providing for a tariff for revenue only. Many will recall the unfortunate results. Bread lines were started and 4,000,000 men became idle. During the first 10 months under that bill the results were as follows:

> Sugar factories closed down or produced a reduced output. Steel mills drew their fires. Woolen mills retrenched. Many cotton mills were forced out of business. Factories that managed to keep open reduced their output. Dividends were passed. Industrial stocks depreciated at the rate of $1,000,000 per day for 10 months. Three hundred and fifty thousand freight cars were idle. Railroad gross earnings dropped $10,000,000 in 10 months. Sixty per cent of all railroad mileage went into receivership. Three million wage earners were jobless. The losses to American business interests were estimated at over $22,000,000 per day. Bread lines were the longest ever known.

So much has happened since then that we have almost forgotten that panic, but the truth is as stated. We all know what happened the following year. The World War started in 1914, and the countries of Europe, sending millions of their men from field and forge and factory to the war, began to call upon America for everything we could produce. Of course, the country prospered and continued to do so, not only during the war but for a considerable period after the war, for the reason that the world's supply was so largely exhausted that there was need of much and the factories everywhere were naturally busy for a while. But we are still under the Underwood law and we are reaping the natural results right now. The conditions which exist are of course not entirely due to the Underwood law, but in a large degree it is so. Great quantities of goods have been coming in from many lands under the lower duties, and that means idle factories and idle workmen here. There are now about 5,000,000 of idle men in this country, and we will so continue unless we have some protection against the cheap labor of foreign lands. And it may be interesting to note right here how the wages of other countries compare with those of America. The following will indicate:

The miners, ironworkers, farm laborers, and so forth, fare no better. The above shows wages per day in American money. It is perfectly plain, we think, that we can not maintain American standards of living unless we have protection against the cheap foreign labor. For instance, how can an American carpenter, who receives an average of $8 or $10 per day for an 8-hour day, compete with a foreign carpenter who receives 55 cents for a day of 10 or 12 hours? It simply can not be done. It means that our American workmen must be protected or they must be brought down to the level of European workmen, and that is unthinkable. We want American standards for Americans. But, fortunately, in protecting the American laborer we protect the farmer, the manufacturer, and all the men, women, and children in the land. Some years ago when a silk mill was being erected in Sunbury, Pa., where I reside, Mr. Schneewind, the president of the company, who came from Germany, said to one of our citizens in Sunbury: "You Americans are smart people. You put on a tariff. If it were not for that tariff, we would make the goods in Germany; but you make us come to America and build our factories and make our goods here." And, believe me, friends, that was a godsend to our town. A dye plant was later established in Sunbury for the same reason. Similar establishments have been located in other parts of our district and inured to the benefit of all the people in the various vicinities, the farmers included.

True, the tariff will not be a panacea. America will not become prosperous in a day, but will gradually improve, we believe, and become restored to normal prosperity.

It behooves us to protect ourselves all the more because since the World War all the great nations—England, France, Germany, and the rest—have adopted the principle of protection to their industries and have closed their doors against importation of goods of all kinds that can be produced in their own countries. The Germans have become a very busy people, and they are now sending out their goods to other countries in great quantities. They realize that they must be industrious in order to meet their great obligations, and the workmen are asking for a longer day, so as to produce as much as possible and sell their goods in the markets of the world. It was lately reported by governmental agents that "Germany, in order to meet the stupendous indemnity obligations placed upon her by the Allies, is prepared to flood the markets of the world with goods." And we do not blame her, but must protect ourselves.

The total foodstuffs imported for 1920 reached the enormous sum of $1,816,000,000; and the total importations for that year amounted to $5,238,000,000.

It is interesting to note that the National Grange at its last convention passed a resolution demanding that "In whatever readjustment of tariff schedules is made, agricultural products shall be given the same degree of protection as other commodities." In the Fordney bill, now under consideration, the farmers, I am pleased to note, have been justly considered along with all other producers. Indeed, it was in their special interest that the emergency tariff bill was passed some time ago. It was needed, for the products of both farm and factory have been sold for less than the actual cost of producing them in some sections of the country.

Besides, we need the protective tariff to aid in providing revenue for our Government. Our national debt is now approximately $24,000,000,000. Of course, if we deduct the $10,000,000,000 which the allied nations owe us the amount would be about $14,000,000,000. Before the World War began our national debt was less than one billion dollars. It is now nearly twenty-five times as much as then. Seventy per cent of all the revenue that we must have is required because of the World War. To meet the interest on our debt and to care for our maimed, wounded, and afflicted soldiers and their families very great sums are required. Enormous appropriations are also required to maintain the departments that investigate the claims and make the awards.

I may say, too, that we need not only a great amount of revenue but the greatest possible economy. The man who will stand for extravagance, or even carelessness, in appropriating the Government's money, these days when Uncle Sam has such an awful load on his shoulders, is little less than a criminal.

We must not add to the burdens of taxation which the people now have to bear, but, so far as possible, we should provide for the revenue in such a way that the burden will be least felt, and also in a way that while producing revenue will aid in giving employment to the millions of idle persons in our country, with the hope that we shall not only become a very prosperous but a very happy people.

Again I say, "Come now, and let us reason together." Let us forget our politics and vote for America and Americans. And then with all our people busy, and our storehouses full, may we send aid to those who need it throughout the wide world.

The Tariff Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. ISAAC BACHARACH,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. BACHARACH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to supplement the remarks which I have already made upon this bill, particularly with reference to those schedules which were considered by the subcommittee of which I was a member, as well as to make some further observations upon the bill in general.

WOOL.

In arriving at the rates in the wool schedule the subcommittee adopted a new system as a basis of fixing the rates which the woolgrowers have advocated and desired for many years. The tariff on wool in this bill is based on the "scoured" content and not on wool in the "grease" as has been the case in previous tariff bills.

The compensatory rates carried in this bill are practically the same as the rates suggested by the Tariff Commission experts as being reasonable and proper, and by reason of the low price of wool at the present time I believe that these rates are sufficient to amply protect the industry.

LUMBER.

Lumber was placed on the free list, but discretionary powers are conferred upon the President to suspend the free list whenever he shall be satisfied that any country imposes duties or other exactions, and so forth, upon like or similar products of the United States, the duties upon which he may deem to be higher and reciprocally unequal and unreasonable.

While there was much evidence offered in support of a duty on lumber, personally I feel that at this time we should put lumber on the free list. Housing conditions in all parts of the country do not seem to be improving as rapidly as they should, and one of the essential reasons given for the lack of building is the high cost of materials. I think in many cases the placing of a tariff duty has a purely psychological effect upon certain classes of merchandise, and while possibly a small tariff on lumber would not be felt by the ultimate consumer, yet some unscrupulous merchant might use the imposition of such a duty as a reason for materially advancing the price on this important commodity. I believe, therefore, that the lumber schedule has been very properly treated in this bill by placing it upon the free list and giving the President the power to impose duties if an emergency should demand it.

EARTHENWARE AND GLASSWARE.

These are two of the principal industries in the State of New Jersey, and in my own district are located a number of the most important glass factories in the United States. I am therefore personally familiar with this industry and know how hard this work is upon the mechanics and their helpers, and in working out these schedules these workmen had my sincere sympathy. In this industry labor is the essential part and the chief cost in any given article, and therefore the workmen come in direct competition with the cheap labor of Europe and the Orient. In spite of the fact that imports to the United States during the year 1921 have fallen off on practically every other class of merchandise, importations of glass and glassware has increased from $800,000 in 1918 to approximately $10,000,000 for the fiscal year just ended—June 30. The rates carried in this bill, when taken in conjunction with the American valuation plan, I believe are quite sufficient to enable the American manufacturers and the American workmen to compete with foreign-made goods.

In addition to that, we eliminated the "duty free clause," which has been carried in tariff bills from time immemorial. Under this clause our colleges and institutions of art and learning were permitted to import their laboratory apparatus such as glassware and earthenware, optical glass and scientific instruments, and so forth, free of duty, and since about one-half of the quantity of these various articles used in the United States are used by our colleges and institutions of learning, this clause entirely deprived our manufacturers of a market for one-half of their output. Therefore were they not only forced to compete with the low wages of Europe and the Orient for one-half of the market for such commodities and take what they could get, but it was not possible for them to enter into competition for the supplies used by our colleges, and so forth, since they were permitted to import their supplies duty free, and thus one-half of the market was entirely lost to them.

Not only will the elimination of this duty-free clause give our manufacturers an opportunity to compete for this great volume of business, but it will give the youth of the country, who attend our colleges and higher institutions of learning, an opportunity to use American-made goods and to appreciate the value of them. It is a shameful fact that the professors in our institutions have always derided American-made goods and have instilled into the minds of their students that there were no instruments or apparatus that could compare with the foreign-made goods. Prior to the war these articles were made here in only very limited quantities, if at all, by reason of the fact that we could not compete with the foreign prices; but during the war it was necessary for our national welfare that these things should be made here in large quantities, and since that time they have been improved and developed and to-day they are the equal and in many cases superior to any foreign make.

I append here a letter from the president of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union, which gives some very pertinent and valuable information on the glass industry:

SANDUSKY, OHIO, July 15, 1921.

Hon. JOSEPH W. FORDNEY,
Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. FORDNEY: I am in receipt of your communication of the 11th, which is in continuation of the correspondence that has passed between us on the subject of protection to American workmen and American industries, and as I read your definition of the American valuation plan as proposed by your committee, and which is now before the House of Congress for disposition, I can not help but say to you that in the judgment of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union it does not give the protection that is absolutely necessary to the flint glass industry, and we say this for the following reasons:

1. This Government does not owe every man a living, but the representatives of this Government have a moral obligation making it mandatory on them to exercise every honorable effort to the end that all our citizens will be accorded an opportunity to obtain employment, so that they may honestly and faithfully provide a decent living for themselves and those depending upon them, but if the proposed tariff bill is enacted into law in its present form, then that part of the citizenship of the United States that depends upon the flint glass industry for a livelihood will be thrown into idleness, and flint glassware will be supplied to our markets by the manufacturers and workers of Czechoslovakia, Germany, and Belgium.

2. After our country became involved in the World War, the opportunity to secure chemical and similar glassware, which had been previously imported from Europe, was destroyed, and it was then that the representatives of our Nation called upon the officers and representatives of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union and the manufacturers engaged in the flint glass industry to so arrange their affairs that this class of goods, which was absolutely essential for the furtherance of our interests in scientific research, the making of ammunition and the one thousand and one other scientific experiments that were necessary, which ultimately meant the winning of the war, to come to the assistance of the Government in its dire distress, to the end that these goods could be produced in America. We were then assured that if these additional sacrifices were made that at the termination of the war the money and the energy expended would be guarded and protected, but if the present tariff bill is enacted in its present form, that promise will not be made good and we will find ourselves in a worse position than we were previous to the war when practically all this class of ware was produced in Europe and imported to America.

3. We did not only agree to support the Government in this respect, but we likewise sent 17 per cent of the flower of the manhood of our organization to foreign shores to further the interest of these United States in that terrible conflict. Those men spilled their blood on the battle fields of Europe, where it was dried by the sun and washed by the rain, and their bones bleached by the elements of time, and now are their fellow craftsmen going to be required to reduce their wages, increase their hours of labor, and still be denied the right of an opportunity to produce the glassware that is to be used in America, and this product which should be produced by American workmen imported from abroad?

4. There is no man in or out of Congress who can successfully contend that the average yearly income of the members of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union has reached a figure that justifies a decrease in their average earnings, for be it understood that their average earnings have not exceeded $1,751 per annum, and it has never reached this amount in the 43 years of our existence save once, and we can not consider this amount a living wage when the statistics presented by our Cabinet officials provide that the average family composed of father, mother, and three children should have an annual income in excess of $2,000.

5. Perhaps some of our Democratic brethren will contend that there has been an exorbitant profit made in this industry, and if they do, then the representatives of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union in convention assembled in Sandusky, Ohio, to-day declare that it is the obligated duty of the Democrats, as well as the Republicans, to insist upon a thorough investigation being made as to the profits that have been acquired by the employers in this industry, and if the crime of profiteering has been practiced on the American people, then make these facts known to all the people, and in that way give to the workers the opportunity of showing where they have been deprived of a fair return for their labor, which return is not sufficient to support an American family, and accord them the things that the members of our present Cabinet contend they are entitled to. However, it is the opinion of the workmen in this industry that exorbitant profits have not been made, yet in order to allay distrust we beseech you to propose an investigation into this phase of the subject.

6. The men employed in the flint-glass industry are skilled workmen; in fact, they are artists. It requires years to acquire this art, and we challenge successful contradiction to the statement that those artists have not received a living wage; they have not retarded production, but, on the contrary, we are prepared to prove that between the years 1916 and 1920 in place of decreasing production we increased our production better than 12 per cent, and this statement will stand the most thorough investigation that any committee representing the House of Congress may see fit to make. And if this be true, then what justification can the House of Congress present for the enactment of a law that will fail to give to us that protection that was promised and which is absolutely necessary in order that the members of our organization will have an opportunity to follow their calling?

7. The subject of imported glassware to America has resulted in a hardship being practiced upon the American workmen, and it is high time that the fallacy of the policy pursued should be exposed. The glassware that has been used to ornament our Capitol in Washington and to decorate and used for service in the White House and used on our ships that ply the oceans was, until very recently, imported from abroad, when we have the very best skilled workmen that can be found the world over in the United States of America, and this is not the first time that this phase of the subject has been brought to the attention of the committee over which you have the honor to preside. This subject has been of such importance in the years gone by that on three different occasions we found it necessary to make an investigation of conditions abroad, and a recent investigation was made by the writer of this communication, and I now declare that the present proposed legislation will not give protection to our industry against the product of the manufacturers and workers engaged in the glass industry of Germany, Czechoslovakia, and perhaps Belgium, for be it remembered that the value of the money of these Governments is so low that under your plan the people of Czechoslovakia and Germany can place their glassware on our shores for a price approximating only 50 per cent of the wholesale price of similar articles produced in America, thereby depriving both manufacturers and workers engaged in this industry of an opportunity to compete with them.

8. While in England, Belgium, Germany, and Czechoslovakia during the months of November, December, and January last, I was advised by manufacturers and importers that even though we increased our tariff rate 100 per cent, foreigners could place their product in these United States at a lower cost than we could manufacture similar ware, and if this be permitted to the degree contemplated it will demonstrate that our Representatives in Congress either do not wish or else lack the ability to meet this grave problem.

This subject is of such tremendous importance that I have hurriedly drafted this communication, which shall be presented to the delegates of our convention, which is now in session, for their indorsement, and I shall urge that it be given to the public press as an open letter, and I stand ready to defend every statement contained in this document at any time or place, providing the date will not interfere with my duties and present engagements.

Let those who assail the workers of these United States question our motives in secret; let those who declare that men appealing for an opportunity to labor are bolshevists when they are discussing our hopes and our aims when we are not represented, and while I am not authorized to speak for labor as a whole, I am authorized and do speak for the members of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union, and stand ready to defend every principle enumerated in this document and in the name of workingmen who fought to defend the principles of this Government, I call on you for that protection that will enable our workers to secure an opportunity to work and receive in return a living wage.

Respectfully, yours,

WILLIAM P. CLARKE,
President American Flint Glass Workers' Union.

SILK.

The preparation of the silk schedule has given me more personal concern than any of the other schedules upon which I was engaged. For some unaccountable reason the news went around that I had charge of the silk schedule; as a matter of fact, I was the second man on this subcommittee, the same as I was on all other subcommittees, for in every case Mr. FORDNEY, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, was chairman of the subcommittees on which I served.

The State of New Jersey is the second in the Union in the manufacture of silk. The industry has had an enormous development in this country and at the present time is more prosperous than any of the textile industries, which was a very important factor for us to consider in arriving at the duties to be imposed. Had we followed explicitly the information as given to us by some silk manufacturers no doubt the tariff on this class of merchandise would have been so high that it would have absolutely prohibited the importation of any silk, even those grades and kinds which are manufactured in this country in very small quantities, and therefore importations are not competitive with our own manufactures.

The committee realized that we could not give adequate specific rates on this class of merchandise, so this schedule was handled in practically the same manner in which the lumber and wool schedules were treated; that is, we agreed upon an ad valorem "catch-all" rate in addition to the specific rates, so that if the specific rate did not work or if for any reason the price of the merchandise should go to a very high figure, then the "catch-all" rate would act as a balance wheel to counteract any substantial foreign importations.

Silk to-day is not the luxury that it was a few years ago and for that reason we had to use extreme care and judgment in trying to arrive at reasonable and fair rates which would protect the manufacturer and enable the thousands of people engaged in this industry to earn a living wage. I believe that something should be done in the way of enacting legislation to prevent manufacturers from "loading" or "dynamiting" silk; by that I mean by treating the woven silk with a chemical preparation which not only increases its weight but takes the real life out of the material and curtails its wearing qualities very materially. Evidence came before our committee that a great many of the American silks were in this way weighted. Silks treated in this manner should be so marked so that purchasers will know what they are getting; they should not be forced to buy silks containing any foreign ingredients which must hurt their wearing qualities. In these days when we are trying to protect the consumer from fraudulent purchases, this is the one class of merchandise that can be fixed up so that it will give less satisfaction and less wear than if composed of pure silk. The Japanese Government makes a thorough inspection of all silks that are exported from Japan and every piece of silk shipped into this country is pure silk; the grade is examined and stamped on the silk so that the purchaser will know in advance just what he is getting. There is now in Congress a "truth in fabrics" bill to prevent just such a thing as this and I will be glad to lend my support to any measure which will at least warn the purchaser as to just what he is buying. The statement by one manufacturer in defense of this practice that women do not want to wear silk gowns more than one year, I do not think will hold very much water, because even if the owner of a gown should get tired of the color, if it is pure silk the material can be dyed and used for some other purpose. With ordinary care unadulterated silk will last for a number of years.

CONCLUSION.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the Fordney bill is the best tariff bill that could be produced under present world conditions. In arriving at the rates carried in the bill and its administrative provisions the committee was prompted solely by the desire to reach conclusions which would be of equal benefit to the American manufacturer, the American workman, and the American consumer. On those things which enter into active competition with American-made goods—especially in those industries which came into being in the United States by reason of our engagement in the World War—we have provided rates which we believe to be sufficient to enable manufacturers to meet foreign competition and continue in business. On those things which are less competitive the rates are in many instances lower than in the Payne-Aldrich tariff act, while on those things which are not competitive with American-made goods we have either placed on them a very low rate or have placed them on the free list entirely.

I have always shared the view that labor and capital must go hand in hand if we are to have prosperity; and therefore in framing a tariff bill we must look out for the interests of the workman as well as the manufacturer, and in every case the committee has been primarily interested in seeing that rates high enough were given to protect every industry so that the workmen engaged in such industry should continue to live up to the American standard and not according to the living standard of the low-paid workmen of Europe and the Orient. If an employer of labor can get men to take a keen interest in their work by reason of having a satisfactory pay envelope to take home on pay day, the employer is benefited to the extent that the well-paid workmen will take more interest in his behalf than if he is compelled to employ men at low wages and thereby force them to compete with the low standard of living in foreign countries. To do this the manufacturer must have sufficient protection on competitive goods.

In preparing this bill it has been necessary for the committee to give much study to industrial conditions abroad. The United States is about the only country that has any real money to spend, and therefore all foreign countries are looking to us for markets to dispose of their surplus commodities. Germany can only hope to pay the heavy indemnity that has been imposed upon her by selling her manufactures, and she is reaching out for foreign markets all over the world. To give some idea of the keenness of the competition in foreign countries, it is interesting to note that Germany is now shipping toys to Japan, and according to one of the most recent reports of the Department of Commerce, if German goods continue to go into Japan at the present prices, Japan will have to go out of the toy business. Germany is making strenuous efforts to regain her supremacy in manufacturing lines, and all reports from there indicate that factories are working 16 hours a day, and in certain parts of Germany the factories are never closed.

To show what Japan is doing in industrial lines, I quote from the Daily Consular Report of the Department of Commerce of July 19, 1921, as follows:

JAPANESE INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT AND LABOR CONDITIONS.

[Prepared in the Far Eastern Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.]

The industrial development of Japan has been extremely rapid during the last few years, especially during the period from 1914 to 1920, when as a result of its favorable situation it greatly strengthened its position in world commerce and expanded its industries. To-day Japanese manufactured goods are entering into competition with those of the western industrial nations in practically all of the markets of the world.

An examination of the factors contributing to Japan's industrial expansion shows that the principal causes have been: (1) Its favorable geographic position with regard to the eastern markets; (2) the adoption of western ideas; (3) its homogeneous population and stable Government; (4) the natural skill and industry of its people, coupled with their imitative ability and genius for cooperation; (5) its abundant supply of labor; and (6) its extremely low wage scale. Japan's advantages as compared with western nations have been those in respect to labor, since most of the other advantages enumerated are possessed to an equal degree by the others.

WOMEN IN INDUSTRY.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of Japanese industry is the extent to which women and children are utilized. This has been largely due to the lack of restrictions on the employment of this class of labor, and to the fact that industrial development has been along lines in which such labor could be profitably utilized. The predominance of the silk-spinning and cotton-textile industries may be cited as examples.

In 1918 it was estimated that over 80 per cent of the exports of Japan were the result of women's work, and that women factory operatives numbered more than 560,000, or about 60 per cent of the total number employed. Accepting this figure as approximately correct, it is clear that this is a most important factor in the Japanese labor situation.

INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION FROM 1914 TO 1920.

The great expansion in the size and number of Japanese industries during the period 1915 to 1919 has had a considerable influence on the labor situation and has contributed to the industrial unrest which characterized the period.

Complete statistics showing the extent of this expansion are not available, but it is stated that during the period 1914 to 1917 there were started 14,172 new factories, giving employment to 272,606 persons, and in addition 5,498 factories increased their equipment with the resulting employment of 169,682 new workmen. Inasmuch as the greater part of the expansion took place after 1917, it is clear that the increase must have been very large. It must be borne in mind, however, that as a result of the financial crisis of 1920 a large number of these factories were compelled to close down.

Notwithstanding these facts, Japan is still a nation in which household industries predominate. This is evidenced by the fact that out of a total of 540,028 families or factories engaged in the weaving industry in 1918, 275,003 employed less than 10 operatives and only 5,463 employed more than this number; 246,803 were pieceworkers, the balance, or 12,579, being contractors (heads of families).

* * * * * * *

To summarize the developments of the period under discussion, we may say that Japan is to-day passing through a transition stage in its industrial development. Prior to 1914 household industries were the rule, but the favorable war conditions greatly stimulated the establishment of the factory system. It is difficult to state the exact relation between the two systems, but it is evident that to-day Japan possesses a fairly diversified industrial equipment which was built up primarily for export trade, and if it hopes to retain these industries it must utilize to the fullest extent its relative advantage with regard to labor.

I believe the prompt enactment of the Fordney bill into law will do much to bring about a return of business prosperity in the United States. We have tried to make a plain, businesslike revision of the present tariff law and to correct its inequalities. We have endeavored to give to the country a protective tariff and not a prohibitive tariff, and that is what our country most needs at this time.

HON. CHARLES D. CARTER,

OF OKLAHOMA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, July 29, 1921.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, under permission given to extend my remarks, I respectfully submit the following article concerning the services rendered by Indian soldiers during the recent World War, clipped from the July 8 issue of the Stigler Beacon, Stigler, Okla.

The article is as follows:

INDIAN PROVED GOOD SOLDIER—COMMANDING OFFICERS TESTIFY TO BRAVERY OF THOSE WHO FOUGHT GERMANS.

ADAIR, OKLA., July 5.

An interesting document of the marked ability of the Indian as a soldier and his bravery and accomplishments in the World War has been compiled by C. J. Harris, who lives on route 2, out of Adair. For the most part it is composed of the testimony of American Army officers before the Committee on Military Affairs in the House of Representatives, testimony, so far as the general public is concerned, being a matter that has been given but little if any publicity, although of widespread interest.

This testimony is one chapter after another of heroic exploits of the Indian under the most trying circumstances, and tribute after tribute from commanding officers whose remarks furnish ample evidence that they never once feared the enemy so long as their Indian fighters could manipulate a gun.

Government statistics show that more than 17,000 American Indians, Oklahoma furnishing the greatest percentage, went overseas with the American Expeditionary Forces. Many sleep beneath the sod at Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, Argonne, and other notable battle fields.

BROKE UP BOCHE SYSTEM.

Shortly after the Indians arrived in France the Allies discovered that the Indian possessed just the very thing that was needed in breaking up the superior German listening-in system by which the Boche found out the entire movements of the French and English troops.

It was then that Col. Morrissey and Capt. Horner conceived the idea of using the Indian in his own dialect. Therefore they placed six Indians at the end of the telephone wire—three at headquarters and three on the firing lines—and the messages were transmitted in the Choctaw dialect, which proved to be very efficient. There were, of course, difficulties in using the Choctaw tongue for many military technical terms, so that it became necessary to make up a table of substitutes. For instance, regiment was called "the tribe"; first battalion, "one grain corn"; company, "bow"; platoon, "throng"; machine gun, "little gun shoot fast"; artillery, "big gun"; ammunition, "arrows"; grenades were called "stones"; rations, "food"; attack, "fight"; patrol, "many scouts"; casualties, "scalps"; gas, "bad air."

INDIANS HIS FIRST CHOICE.

The following are a few of the statements of officers as to the value of an Indian soldier submitted to the committee:

Capt. John K. Simpson, Three hundred and fifty-eighth Infantry, Ninetieth Division, from Oklahoma, when asked, "If it was necessary to go back to France and fight, would you take any Indians with you?"

Answer: "I would not take anybody else. They are not afraid of hurting themselves. They had a fine sense of direction, and thus they could anticipate the direction of the enemy. If we had had more Indians, we would have killed more Germans. They did not believe in taking prisoners."

Maj. Tom Reiley—"Fighting Tom"—stated that "The Indians did the finest work of any men in the regiment; and, mark you, this is the 'fighting Irish' regiment. They were expert in rifle fighting, game, strong, brave. They were superior in scouting and patrol work. They were unexcelled in every phase of every fight. In the drives at Argonne, St. George, Landres, I started with 876 and came back with 400. The Indians in the front ranks were thoroughly swept away. Where an Indian went down another Indian stepped in his place. They were always at the front.

FOUGHT BEST WHEN ALONE.

"If a battle was on and you wanted to find the Indians, you would always find them at the front. Many were killed or wounded, for they always sought the dangerous places. I hold all these Indians in the most enthusiastic regard, all of them splendid fellows, keen fighters, crack shot with the rifle, filled with the spirit of splendid daring and intrepid valor, and I noticed that when they were sent out as a distinct Indian force they did their best work. We were brigaded under the great French general, Gour, and in the Champagne drive he noted and commented on the superb work of the Indians."

Sergt. Thomas E. Fitzsimmons, commanding the Stokes mortar platoon, One hundred and sixty-fifth Infantry, Forty-second Division, said:

"The Indians are good soldiers back of the lines and at the front, always clean and neat and willing workers. At the St. Mihiel drive they were very much disappointed because they did not have personal contact with the Boche. We next went into the Argonne offensive, the first real fight that they were in. They stood like stone walls under machine gun and artillery fire, always obeyed without any questioning. I found them good in finding the trail in the woods at night. I always took one with me and he always kept the trail.

BROKE UP ATTACK.

"The Indians were resourceful, always seeking good places for cover. All were expert rifle shots. As to personal habits, I found them always gentlemen, accepting hardships and sacrifices without flinching. Moreover, they were proud that they had volunteered to serve America.

"During the Argonne offensive the One hundred and sixty-fifth had driven back the Germans and they were re-forming for a counter attack in massed formation with fixed bayonets. Col. Donovan, commanding the regiment, ordered the Stokes Mortar Platoon into action. The Boche were only 200 yards away in an open field in broad daylight. With the mortar every man has to stand up. The Boche returned to the trenches and the artillery opened up. Then the infantry in massed formation with bayonets came on for a counter attack. Col. Donovan ordered Indians to place Stokes mortar guns in position, and fixing the range from the first shell—you will know that there are eight of these shells in the air before the first one lands—it was said by those who witnessed it that all you could see was machine guns, helmets, arms, and legs flying in the air. The Boche were completely routed. This was the last line of resistance the Germans had. Col. Donovan said the Stokes Mortar Platoon saved the regiment."

LOYAL IN EVERY RESPECT.

Col. Morrissey testified: "I was in a position to closely observe the Indians during all the fighting and found them fearless and loyal in every respect. Their ability as fighters is beyond question of doubt. In addition to their fighting ability, they were very valuable as scouts and runners which was probably due to their ability to find directions under any circumstances, both in day and night time. They never complained about lack of food or any other of the hardships that were necessarily evident in battle.

"While I commanded Company E there were Indians in every other company in the regiment. The same commendation applied to every Indian in the regiment as to his initiation in battle. I have this to say, they absolutely set out to lick Germany alone. Many of my Indians were decorated. An Indian stood up and received the Belgian decoration, the croix de guerre, when I was decorated with the French croix de guerre. My company of Indians in the assault battalion at Meuse-Argonne, Champagne, received the heartiest commendation of our divisional commander, Col. Alfred W. Bloor. All officers have the very highest regard for the fighting qualities of the Indians. The battalion was almost completely wiped out and the Indian company suffered equal casualties with the remainder of the battalion."

Col. F. A. Snyder said: "If I had only been in command of a few regiments of Indians, we would have driven the Boche out of the Argonne forest very much sooner and with less loss of life."

Maj. Frank Knox: "In the Ninetieth Division there were many Indians from Oklahoma. They made a good record for bravery and resoluteness under fire. If I could have had the proposed regiment of Indian Cavalry in the drive in the Meuse, the orderly retreat of the Germans would easily have been forced into a rout."

Capt. Horner says: "The Indians were always the equal of the white man, sometimes his superior. Half of my company were Indians. There was not a straggler among them. Officers say that at supply stations and dressing stations there may alway be found a group of stragglers, but all said that they never saw an Indian among the stragglers. When wounded they would bear it with unflinching nerve and never express a moan."

Tariff.

OF

HON. WILLIAM S. VARE,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Speaker, the paramount need of a high protective tariff at this time to protect the American workingman and the American industry against the influx of foreign products manufactured by cheap foreign labor is obvious.

It is with regret that I hear Members of this House, as few as the number may be, advocating the continuation of a tariff for revenue only. The low tariff or Democratic tariff has never been a success in the United States, and I might add that the world in general is fast coming to know that protection for home industries is essential for internal prosperity.

I have had occasion to look into the matter of tariff imposed by foreign nations since the Great War. Economic conditions have made radical revisions of the tariff necessary. Other nations have not waited until now to revise their schedules. The emergency tariff, which we passed at the beginning of this special session has done much to relieve conditions, particularly in the farm sections. But a complete tariff bill on the statute books, with the passage of tax revision legislation as soon as possible will give the American manufacturer and business man the confidence which is needed to revive prosperity in the business world.

The Ways and Means Committee has made a thorough study of the problem, and as a whole the bill which we have before us is one which I believe will accomplish the end desired in the United States. It has for its object the three cardinal principles of protection, and that is the protection of infant industries, the protection of home markets against competition of cheaper foreign labor, and the development of home industries to establish a military preparation in time of war.

While, as I have said, other countries are fast adopting the high-tariff system the Republican Party has been the champion of the theory of protection ever since the Civil War. Even England is considering a high tariff act known as "the safeguarding of domestic industries act," now being debated in the House of Commons. In South America industries developed during the war are being protected by their Governments. In Argentina a 20 per cent horizontal increase in tariff has been adopted. In Chile even larger increases were ordered.

English colonies since the war have further increased their import duties. Australia has adopted a revised tariff and is now considering further measures to protect her own industries, to encourage the further development of industry, and to grant preference to Great Britain to aid that country in marketing its wares. British India has increased its tariff. In Canada the passage of our tariff bill is awaited before any further action is taken. The country has been promised, however, that its industries will be protected.

Like the United States, Japan has resorted to emergency measures, one passed July 27, 1920, and the other June 1, 1921. A permanent tariff measure will be passed later.

On December 1, 1920, Spain placed in effect a high tariff bill ascribed officially to the desire of the Government to discourage the importation of nonessential goods, luxuries, and to protect Spanish industries. A further increase became effective May 21, 1921.

Belgium, conditionally a free-trade country, under the law of June 10, 1920, authorized increased protective duties, and on March 31, 1921, the limit of increase on original duties was raised as high as 600 per cent.

During the war the United States developed on a broad basis infant industries which we are now called upon to protect. Prior to the war the Democratic tariff failed to provide the necessary revenue to run the Government and, notwithstanding that the competitive producing nations of Europe were engaged in conflict, the industries of the United States for some time after the war in Europe started were faced with unfair European competition. This was caused by the existance of the Democratic "tariff for revenue only act," more commonly known as the Underwood-Simmons Act.

This act, as has been the case with all Democratic tariff acts, was not successful even in the eyes of its sponsors.

President Wilson, in his message to Congress September 4, after the Underwood Act had been on the statute books, asked that "additional revenue be provided for the Government." He gave as his reason for the request that—

> During the month of August there was, as compared with the corresponding month of last year, a falling off of $10,629,538 in revenues collected from customs.

These figures do not represent a decrease of imports but a decrease in revenue, which meant that American labor was deprived of the advantage of just that much during the month of August, 1914, in its fight against the cheaper labor of foreign nations.

That the Underwood-Simmons Act was not a success was not new in Democratic tariff making. In his message to Congress in September, 1837, after the "sliding scale act" had failed to properly finance the Government, President Van Buren said:

> I deeply regret that events have occurred which require me to ask your consideration of such serious topics.

He then outlined the failure of that act.

President Buchanan in his message to Congress nine months after the passage of the "progressive free trade act" declared:

> We have possessed all the elements of material wealth in rich abundance, and yet, notwithstanding all these advantages, our country in its monetary interests is at the present moment in a deplorable condition.

The same was true of President Cleveland, who presented the most damning indictment of the ability of "tariff for revenue only" to support the Government, when four months following his inauguration he called Congress into special session, saying:

> The distrust and apprehension concerning the financial situation which pervade all business circles have already caused great loss and damage to our people and threaten to cripple our merchants, stop the wheels of manufacture, bring distress and privation to our farmers, and withhold from our workingman the wage of labor.

In all of these cases the Democratic Party promised the Nation lower living costs and prosperity. They found that the living costs did not fall, that the receipts of the Government did fall, and laborers, skilled and unskilled, in every trade were thrown out of employment.

The policy of the Democratic Party has been in vogue for eight years. During its first year of operation it was leading the industry of the Nation into chaos. The European war began and gradually removed from the American market the low-priced commodities which had been cared for by a protective tariff in the past. Europe is fast regaining its prewar production basis, and as soon as this production of European commodities reaches its prewar level the American markets will be flooded with manufactured goods.

We must be careful that we do not include in this bill non-competitive raw materials, such as oil and lumber. The inclusion of either of these commodities in this bill would restrict the expansion of United States industry and reduce the supply in the United States to the point where we soon would be dependent upon other nations for these basic necessities.

Too much can not be said, however, concerning the need of actual protection for our industries, and I feel that the Fordney bill will care for American industries and the employees, whose standard of living must be maintained.

OF

HON. OTIS WINGO,

OF ARKANSAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, June 24, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (S. 1837) to amend section 2 of the act of Congress approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal farm loan act.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, without explaining the technical differences between the committee amendment and the substitute I have offered I will state that in substance I follow the House committee amendment except that I propose two material changes: First, I provide for a deposit of $25,000,000 more than is provided by the committee amendment. This is proposed by increasing the $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. In other words, I provide that the Secretary may deposit in the land banks an amount equal to the difference between their capital stock and $75,000,000, whereas the committee amendment authorizes deposits to an amount equal to the difference between the capital stock and $50,000,000. The second difference is with reference to the withdrawal of the deposits by the Secretary, and my amendment proposes two changes in the committee amendment. Where the committee amendment provides that the Secretary "shall" withdraw these deposits within 15 days after the conclusion of any bond sale, my amendment provides that the Secretary "may." The other change with reference to withdrawal that my amendment makes is that instead of requiring the Secretary to withdraw the deposits within 15 days after the conclusion of each general bond sale, my substitute provides that he "may" withdraw the deposits at any time after the expiration of that 15-day period. In other words, I increase the amount of deposits that may be made by the Secretary by $25,000,000 and make the withdrawal discretionary with him and offering a wider latitude of time. In other words, I simply give the Secretary of the Treasury more discretion and a wider latitude.

While I do not think the amount I have provided in my substitute is sufficient to meet even the accumulated needs of the land banks, I have offered the small increase in the amount in the hope that you might be induced to give at least this additional relief, as each additional amount means that much greater relief to the farmer.

I regret very much that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TINCHER] should attempt to inject politics. If it is politics to try in a practical way to make a more adequate provision for these land banks so as to give greater relief to the farmers of Kansas, then I am guilty of playing politics. He says that I play politics 24 hours of the day. Well, I suggest to him that he might be of greater service to his country and to the farmers of Kansas if he would follow my example and play the same kind of politics I play, because most of you gentlemen know the fact, of which the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TINCHER] seems to be ignorant, that I, as much as any other man, by my humble efforts, am responsible for the establishment of the farm loan system and that I was making a sincere, honest effort, with some measure of success, to provide more adequate credit facilities for the American farmer long before the uncertain exigencies of Kansas politics unwittingly forced the pulchritudinous ponderosity of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TINCHER] above the horizon of political obscurity. [Laughter and applause.] My amiable friend, the irrepressible and evermeticulous Republican whip, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON], says I am a political cuttlefish. Well, I think I will indulge in the retort obvious that I had rather be a political cuttlefish than a parliamentary doodle bug. [Applause and laughter.]

But, gentlemen, let us get back to my substitute. You gentlemen are in the embarrassing attitude not only of refusing to grant adequate relief for these farm-land banks but if you vote against my amendment you will be in the further embarrassing attitude of saying that you are not willing to trust the Secretary of the Treasury with the discretion of handling an additional $25,000,000. No intelligent man who knows the present condition of these land banks, the accumulation of loan applications made by needy farmers, and the pressing necessity for a larger working capital for these banks, will contend that either the committee amendment or even my substitute will be adequate, but my substitute will furnish the necessary working capital to do the business to the limit which the board and the Secretary of the Treasury have placed upon the operations of these banks. I know that it is contended and the board really believes that $200,000,000 a year, the limit of business which they have arbitrarily fixed for these 12 banks, is the maximum amount of farm-loan bonds that the market will absorb in any one year, but I contend that they are in error. I contend and I think that any practical business man who knows conditions in this country and the appreciation of these bonds that the investors of the country will have of them will agree with me that if we will but make these banks independent by giving them sufficient operating turnover capital they will be able to feed to the investing public in larger volume each year these bonds.

When I realize that the present leaders of the Republican Party were opposed to the farm loan system, have upon every occasion since then publicly denounced it, and have taken advantage of every opportunity to cripple it and keep it from functioning properly, I can not but fear that the present efforts on their part to restrict its operations to such a narrow limit is nothing more nor less than an effort upon their part to do indirectly that which they do not have the courage to do directly. In other words, they seek to starve to death this great system instead of repealing the law and abolishing the banks. I know the unthinking contend that additional capital above that provided by the committee amendment is unnecessary, and that the Secretary and the board say it is unnecessary, but I challenge the accuracy of both statements. But if the contention be true, then why fear to give to the Secretary of the Treasury the additional discretion? If the Farm Loan Board can get along without the additional $25,000,000, as you contend they can, do you think they will call for it? If they do call for it and they do not need it, do you think the present Secretary of the Treasury will give it to them? Why be so afraid to give discretion to the Secretary of the Treasury? You have done it to an unlimited extent in a great many other things.

It is passing strange to me that some of you gentlemen have been willing to and have in the past voted hundreds of millions of dollars in the way of loans to the railroads of the country, yet you are not willing to support my proposition. You contend that transportation is necessary to the country, but will the gentlemen deny that agriculture, producing the basic commodities to be handled by the railroads, is not just as essential as transportation facilities? The real reason with some gentlemen is that they contend that the Treasury is in a bad shape and that if you allow too much deposits, even temporarily, to these land banks the Secretary will have difficulty in getting an additional billion-dollar loan that the railroads are seeking and which it is understood that this administration will soon propose to Congress. Do not deceive yourselves about the farmer and do not think you will be able to deceive him by your action to-day. He does not ask for any special privilege, he does not ask that you extend to his class the right of governmental deposits in his banks that you have accorded without limit and to the extent of millions to commercial banks. All that he asks is that you temporarily give him at a higher rate than you give to the commercial banks sufficient deposit to give him a working capital that will enable his banks in a short time to provide their own working capital so that they can be independent and stand alone. He is not asking you for paternalistic aid, but he is asking that you make it possible for this self-help loan system, that you have given him, to function so that he can help himself and work out his own relief. He knows that you have never given him equality of treatment in the way of credit facilities, and if you continue to discriminate against him some day some of them will revive the old war cry of Mary Ellen Lease: "Raise less wheat and more hell." [Laughter and applause.]

HON. OTIS WINGO,

OF ARKANSAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, June 24, 1921.

The House, in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, had under consideration Senate bill 1837, to amend the Federal farm loan act.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, in view of some things that have been said, and the action of the committee, the temptation is great to submit a few observations of a political character, but I shall not yield to that temptation, because I intend to use my time for a more profitable purpose. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. STRONG] has suggested that there was a suspicion of politics. The only suggestion of politics in this matter, I will say in passing—and then I will leave the political question—is that nearly three weeks ago the committee by a solid Democratic vote and with the aid of a few Republican friends of the farmers on the committee reported the Senate bill. But for some reason the report was held up, and subsequently we discovered that out of repeated secret Republican conferences there was framed and the Republican members of the committee in secret session agreed to a legislative freak which was presented to the whole committee as a substitute, which upon analysis even its Republican sponsors repudiated. I shall take advantage of my right to extend my remarks by embalming that legislative freak in the RECORD, because I think it ought to be preserved in the archives of this House as the most remarkable, and also clumsy, effort to defeat a measure by indirection and subterfuge ever proposed to a legislative body, and which was sponsored by the Republican conference that dictated or wrote it.

The proposed substitute referred to is as follows:

COMMITTEE AMENDMENT TO S. 1837.

Strike out all of S. 1837 after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That section 32 of the Federal farm loan act, approved July 17, 1916, as amended, is hereby amended by adding after the first paragraph a new paragraph to read as follows:

"'Until such time as the aggregate paid-in capital stock of the 12 Federal land banks shall be in excess of $50,000,000, the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, make deposits in addition to those authorized by the preceding paragraph, to be secured, redeemed, and paid in the same manner as provided in such paragraph. The aggregate of such additional deposits outstanding at any time shall not exceed the difference between the aggregate of the capital stock of the Federal land banks and the par value of whatever issue of farm loan bonds may be contemplated by the Federal land banks in the three months succeeding such deposits, and in no event shall exceed the difference between the aggregate of the capital stock of the 12 Federal land banks, on the last day of the preceding month, and the sum of $50,000,000: Provided further, That before recommending any such additional deposits as herein authorized, the Farm Loan Board shall submit, in writing, to the Secretary of the Treasury, an estimate of the amount of farm loan bonds to be offered for sale by the Federal land banks within the next succeeding three months. The Secretary shall examine such estimate, and if he approve the same indorse his approval thereon in writing, and such estimate when approved by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be deemed to be, for the purpose of limiting the amount of deposits herein authorized, the issue of farm loan bonds contemplated by the Federal land banks within that period; and such deposit shall bear a rate of interest not exceeding by more than one-half of 1 per cent per annum the rate borne by the last bond issue of the bank receiving such deposit.'"

Mr. STEVENSON. Was that proposition not fathered by the leader of the House?

Mr. WINGO. I never refer to him as fathering anything. I refer to him as "mothering" it. No one dares to admit he is sire of the bastard. [Laughter.]

Mr. STEAGALL. But it came from a conference in which he participated.

Mr. WINGO. Whether he participated in it or controlled it I am not advised. I shall make no further reference to it out of consideration for some of my good Republican friends, who would like to forget it as quickly as possible.

Now, let us get down to the proposition. What is it? There seem to be a great many Members of the House who have forgotten the provisions of the farm loan act with reference to capital stock. I wish to detail, if I may without interruption, just what the provisions of the statute are for capital stock and capital funds of the farm loan banks, what their present condition is, and why it is necessary to enact legislation of this kind, and also the difference between the Senate amendment and the amendment proposed by the committee. I want to do that free from politics, because I want to address myself to the intelligence and not political prejudices of Members on both sides of the aisle. You will remember, gentlemen, that the farm loan act of 1916 provided 12 Federal land banks, cooperative institutions. I shall not discuss the joint-stock land banks. They are outside of this discussion, but there were 12 cooperative land banks, and the statute provided for a capital stock of three-quarters of a million dollars for each. Those of you who were here then remember the prediction I made that it was folly for us to hope that those banks would properly function with such small capital stock, because the capital stock represented the only turnover capital they had, because they can not issue bonds until they accumulate a sufficient amount of farm mortgages, because before they can issue bonds they must deposit in trust to secure those bonds either those first mortgages or United States bonds, or both.

Now, what happened, gentlemen? They went along and did the best they could until the war came on. When the war came on it had the same effect upon these institutions as on everything else. At the conclusion of the war and just as we were about to float the Liberty bonds, the Victory loan, the farm loan banks were preparing to float an issue of farm loan bonds to take care of their requirements. Now, I want to talk to those of you who have been talking about these banks having to depend on the Treasury. I challenge any man to contradict the statement I am about to make. I am prepared to prove it. At that time those bonds were the choicest bonds in the bond market of the United States. Those bonds that had been issued were selling at a premium of from one-half to 1 per cent in the market. They were regarded by investors in this country as being superior for a good many purposes, and for a class of persons who were seeking investment income, even to Government bonds, and the board was prepared to float in a market that was prepared to accept and absorb all that they needed. But what happened? The Secretary of the Treasury came to the Farm Loan Board and said you must not go into the market and compete with the Treasury in floating its bonds. That proposition was put up to the Banking and Currency Committee and Congress decided that we would say to the farm loan banks you keep off the market so that the Government can float its issues in this emergency and we will provide $100,000,000—you remember the $100,000,000 provision—out of the United States Treasury to take your bonds and absorb them so that there will be only one offering of this character of investment to the country, and that will be by the United States Treasury. So that the charges that the bonds that are now held in the United States Treasury were put there because the banks were in distress and had to go to the Treasury are made either in ignorance of or in utter disregard of the truth. One hundred and thirty million dollars of bonds were taken, and on May 18, 1920, Congress passed a law which provided that the Secretary of the Treasury was further authorized to buy the bonds of the bank to the extent necessary to take care of the farm mortgages that had been approved prior to March 1, 1920.

Under that law forty-nine million and a few hundred thousand dollars of additional bonds were bought. These two amounts taken together make up the $183,000,000 of farm-loan bonds now in the United States Treasury. Now, the private mortgage banks of the country had raised by action in court the question of the constitutionality of the farm loan act; it was dragged through the courts and the Supreme Court of the United States after one argument ordered another, and then adjourned over and left the banks suspended in the air, and it was necessary to go to their relief, and we did it by the act of May 18, 1920. The only regrettable thing about it is that Congress did not provide for taking care of the banks until the decision of the Supreme Court was handed down—in other words, to take care of accumulated mortgages until March 1, 1921, instead of to March 1, 1920.

Now let us see what are the capital requirements. Have they enough capital and enough turnover funds to function independently? It is not a question of the bond market. If you make the land banks independent now so that their necessities will not put them at the mercy of the bond market and selling syndicates, if you give them ample working capital, they can sell every bond they want to sell. I know what I am talking about; I know one man who could not get $2,000 of the last issue unless he would pay a premium; he could not get them at the rate at which they were put out. But, you say, if that is so, why must we do this? You gentlemen who have been bankers and financing great corporations know that they must have enough turnover to keep them running from one issue to the next, because they put them out in $50,000,000 issues and in the interim they must have enough money to absorb the current mortgages. You must remember that not only is the capital stock of $750,000, but there is an accretion to the capital stock because every borrower has to subscribe to an amount equal to 5 per cent of his loan of the local stock of the local association, and the local association has to subscribe to 5 per cent of the land bank through which the loan is made. By the accretion the combined capital stock of all 12 land banks is now approximately $25,000,000, and $25,000,000 is not a sufficient turnover to run them until October, which all men agree will be as early as is practicable to put the bonds on the market, because this period of the year is never a proper time to float great bond issues. All men will agree to that.

You must also remember this restriction under the law, which I have not heard mentioned here, that these banks can not use all the capital stock as working capital, but they have to keep 25 per cent tied up in liquid assets. There is another provision of law that I have heard no one mention which requires them to keep 5 per cent of that capital stock invested in United States Government bonds. When you take the 25 per cent and the 5 per cent, and then when you take the fact that they have to accumulate these mortgages in order to issue farm-loan bonds, it is apparent to any level-headed business man that they have not sufficient turnover capital to independently function. The proposition here is to furnish these land banks a sufficient turnover and capital until the accretions from the subscriptions of 5 per cent bring the capital stock up to a sufficient amount to give them a sufficient, ample turnover working capital. Now, have you done it by the committee proposal?

The Senate proposition in the bill was for $50,000,000 deposit out of the Treasury. That bill comes here, and for that bill the House Banking and Currency Committee offers a substitute that, stripped of all verbiage, puts a limit on the amount which can be deposited between now and the next loan issue at $25,000,000. Is there any doubt about that? The gentleman from Pennsylvania will agree to that. The capital stock is now $25,000,000, but with the $40,000,000 of loans covered by the last bond issue, the 5 per cent accretion will make $2,000,000 more, and so we will say in round figures $27,000,000. The difference between the Senate proposition and the House amendment is the difference between $27,000,000 and $50,000,000, plus another proposition.

Here is a further difference that I am coming to. The Senate bill repeals section 32 by substituting for it a new section, whereas the House committee amendment provides for an additional paragraph to section 32. Section 32 as it now stands provides for a general deposit, without limit of time, of $6,000,000, so that you can see the difference between the two. After all, there is not such a very large amount. Take the utmost that could be contended by the gentleman from Pennsylvania and those who favor the House committee amendment. It is the difference between $27,000,000 and $50,000,000. I believe that would be an accurate statement of the position of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINGO. Yes.

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman spoke of the law compelling them to keep 5 per cent of their assets in Government bonds. It is a fact, is it not, that those bonds can be used as collateral the same as mortgages.

Mr. WINGO. Oh, yes; I have explained that, but they can not be used to make loans, and the business of these banks is to make loans on first mortgages to farmers. Whenever you compel them to keep in their vaults 25 per cent of their capital stock, and also provide that at least 5 per cent of that stock shall be in Government bonds, that lessens to that extent the available funds for buying first mortgages. Is the Senate provision or is the House provision going to do what you want to do? Gentlemen may as well brush aside the question of principle. There is no difference in principle but a simple difference of amount of working capital required to make them independent. If you are going to vote for the House bill, you can vote for the Senate bill, so far as principle is concerned. It is a question of whether or not the House amendment is sufficient, is it not? Both provide for deposits of public funds in these farm-land banks. I said when these land banks were established—and I have not found a single business man who does not agree with me—that it is folly to hope to have the banks function with a working capital of less than $10,000,000 each. That would make $12,000,000. The bill which I introduced is identical with the House bill originally considered by Mr. NELSON, and the only difference between my bill and the Senate bill is the difference between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000. I think the House ought to face this. If you are going to help these banks function, do it to the extent necessary, but if you are not going to do it do not make a pretense of doing it by providing a sum too small. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I challenge any man to show how they can independently function without ample working capital. What are the facts? I am not criticizing the board, and in passing I want to say to you that I wish every agency of the Government were in the hands of as far-seeing, as patriotic, as practical and level-headed men as Judge Lobdell and Asbury Lever. They are capable, they are competent, they are not trying to dictate the policy of this House. No man can stand up and say that either one of them has said that the House amendment will furnish them with the minimum requirement of working capital necessary to meet demands.

They are taking the very proper attitude that it is a question for Congress to decide. They say, "You give us only $25,000,000 and we will do the best we can." The facts are that the Senate bill was introduced at their instance, that the House bill for $50,000,000 was introduced at their instance, and that the Secretary of the Treasury and the Farm Loan Board came before our committee three weeks ago and asked for the Senate bill which carried $50,000,000. At that time why did the Secretary of the Treasury and the Farm Loan Board say that it was necessary to have $50,000,000 if $25,000,000 would be sufficient? Have conditions changed? Oh, no, gentlemen, but you and I understand—and I am with you on the question of trying to hold down everything you take out of the Treasury, but I submit as a practical proposition what I said a moment ago, that if you are going to do this thing, you should do what is necessary, and if you do not, then you will be back here in December with these Federal land banks telling you the condition that they are in, and you will then have to take another bite at the cherry, or else make up your mind that you are going to abandon these banks.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINGO. I have not much time.

Mr. McFADDEN. I just want to call the gentleman's attention to the statement of Farm Land Commissioner Lobdel, in which he said they had no intention under the other authority they were asking for, of $50,000,000, of ever calling in excess of $31,000,000.

Mr. WINGO. I differ with the gentleman there.

Mr. STEVENSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINGO. I shall cover that.

Mr. STEVENSON. The statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is in error He said that they had assured the Secretary of the Treasury they would not call over $36,000,000. That was the statement.

Mr. WINGO. Thirty-six million dollars. Gentlemen may get the hearings, but the most singular thing you will not find in the hearings—because it is what Mr. Lobdel and Mr. Lever said to us under duress at the last meeting which was not reported. Finally they were embarrassed, and I insisted that we stop the questions, for I said it was not fair to press these gentlemen, when it was not their position to dictate to you what policy you should pursue. Finally Mr. Lobdel said, "Yes; this is a life saver, if you give it to us, and we will take it."

It is arbitrarily said that all of the business that these banks can do in one year is $200,000,000. It is ridiculous to hold them down to that minimum, but how on earth are they going to carry even $200,000,000? Divide the $20,000,000 by 12, and you get the amount of business that each may do. Say you do not have to have anything in the 25 per cent reserve, say that they could use all of the $25,000,000 that is given them, and the $6,000,000 which they have under section 32, and between now and October, in the next three months, you will find yourselves absolutely mathematically short. Frankly, I like the wording of the House provision, as amended in two particulars, better than I do anything else, and if you will amend the House provision and make it $75,000,000, then I think you will place the minimum amount that is necessary in their hands. But you say you do not want to do that, you want to hold the Secretary of the Treasury down. Under the committee amendment you do not give the Secretary of the Treasury a bit of discretion. You say that he shall call these loans within 15 days. Can not we trust the Secretary of the Treasury? Under the Senate amendment he is given absolute discretion. Do you think the Secretary of the Treasury, who frankly admits that he does not believe in the principle of the farm-land bank system, will permit them to have more money than they need? He does say frankly, as a business man, that he approves the pending legislation, because the Congress had settled this policy, and having settled and established this institution, that you should give it sufficient capital to function. He approves this legislation. Had you not better err on the side of wise precaution? Had you not better give the Secretary of the Treasury sufficient discretion so that he can meet the necessary requirement to do what you say you are trying to do? Why not give him more? Oh, well, but you say, you do not want to finance the farmers out of the United States Treasury. Very well, the surest and quickest way to get the Treasury free is to give these banks ample working capital, so that they can stand alone and retire the Treasury capital by the accretion of capital made by the borrowers, which is 5 per cent of each loan. Without ample working capital they will continue to lean on the Treasury.

Mr. STEAGALL. Is there any difference in principle between $50,000,000 and $25,000,000?

Mr. WINGO. Absolutely not. The very object of this system is to make the farmers of this country self-sustaining in land credits and maintain for themselves a marketing agency for their long-term land credits, which under normal conditions they can not have. You may ask, Why can not they have them? Because the great loaning companies of this country, the insurance companies and others, if they should go into the farm loan markets they would be foolish to go and invest their money in two, three, and four thousand dollar loans when they can invest in blocks of five, ten, and twenty-five thousand dollar loans on large plantations and large ranches and large farms. So they have no market. They have no credit market except at an unreasonable rate, a ruinous rate that local lenders would furnish them. So we established this system.

Mr. DUNBAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINGO. I have not much time, but I yield for a question.

Mr. DUNBAR. The Federal reserve bank has reduced the rate to 6 per cent. The Federal farm loan bonds bear 5 per cent interest. Does not the gentleman believe with a reduction by the Federal reserve banks in the rate of discount they can sell the bonds——

Mr. WINGO. Oh, it is not a question of selling; it is a question of giving them necessary working capital between the periods of sale. You say that you do not want to give this assistance out of the Treasury. You are not doing it. You are giving a deposit; it is not an appropriation. Why, gentlemen, you are requiring these land banks to pay 5½ per cent interest on these deposits. Throughout this land commercial banks have been given governmental deposits, not called for within 15 days, but in the main practically become permanent deposits if the needs of the Treasury do not become heavy, and the most they have ever paid was 2½ per cent.

Does any gentleman claim they paid more? Oh, but go and look at the deposit of Government funds in private commercial banks; go and look for them in foreign depositories. The same gentlemen who say it is a paternalistic proposition, with what glee did they support the bill that we recently brought from the Banking and Currency Committee authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to deposit public funds in foreign lands to meet the public needs. And to-day officers of the United States have on deposit in foreign banks, in foreign lands, $40,000,000 more than the House Banking and Currency Committee is willing to deposit in the 12 entire Federal reserve banks throughout this land.

Not only have gentlemen who are opposed to the farm-loan system, and who now protest against the deposit of Government funds with these banks, voted in the past for bills that would authorize larger Government deposits in private foreign banks, but these same self-styled opponents of what they call "class legislation" have voted hundreds of millions directly out of the Treasury of the United States either as a gift or a loan to the railroads of the country. When they now throw up their hands in pretended horror at the suggestion that the Federal land banks shall have a limited deposit privilege, I wonder on what grounds they justify their vote for Federal aid and Federal support of the railroads. In the railroad matter they not only voted to carry out the contract under which the Government took over the railroads but they went further and voted to loan the railroads millions, and in addition thereto voted for a socialistic nationalization of railroads by which the Government would bear all the burdens of Government ownership and get none of its privileges. Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand a statement of the railroad securities held in the Treasury of the United States Government, which I will insert into the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

Mr. WINGO. An examination of this statement, Mr. Speaker, shows that the Pennsylvania Railroad has a "physical connection" with the United States Treasury to the extent of approximately $75,000,000, three times more than the amount which the men who here to-day pose as "real friends of the farmer" are willing to give by way of additional deposit to the entire Federal land bank system. Then, Mr. Speaker, there is the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad that still smells to high heaven that has a "physical connection" with the Treasury of the United States to an extent equal to the relief that some gentlemen would grudgingly give to the entire farm land bank system. The connection of these railroads with the Treasury was made possible by a railroad bill which these same gentlemen supported. I can not comprehend their mental processes when they predicated outright aid to the railroads on the basis of "statesmanship and public welfare" and now denounce the extension of deposit privilege to a limited extent to the farm loan system as being "paternalistic" and "class legislation."

We do not ask you to give this farm land bank system anything, but we do ask that as a business proposition you, through the deposit privilege, give it temporarily sufficient funds so that it will have enough operating capital to be independent and meet the pressing need represented by the accumulation of mortgage loans which have already been approved but which can not be completed under present conditions. You are not going to solve this problem by this makeshift, deceptive hypocrisy that you are offering the farmer to-day, but he will come back here later when he finds that you have mocked his appeal demanding more substantial justice. He does not come to-day, nor will he come in the future, as will the railroads of the country which the press dispatches disclose will soon demand at least a half billion dollars more relief from the Federal Government. The farmers are not asking for a special privilege; their demands do not even approximate what you have already done for the railroads or even what you propose to do for the railroads in the future. All the American farmer asks is that you give him a square deal, equality of treatment, exact justice, and put this farm land bank system on its feet so that it can function as it was intended to function and enable the farmers by their own cooperative efforts to work out some measure of relief. [Applause.]

OF

HON. ERNEST R. ACKERMAN,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, what are we here for? Is that not a question we should seriously ask ourselves as we perspire under the midsummer sun in the House of Representatives? It seems to me the answer is to try and get the good old ship the U. S. A. to stop "tacking" and again get on a straight course for the haven of prosperity and happiness from which she was diverted by the hurricane of war and its aftermath.

If we concede that fundamental proposition is based on fact, let us attempt to realize the position that the ship is in to-day. In the first place, how many passengers have we on board now as compared with a year ago?

Perhaps there are some people in the United States who do not know that there are 1,673,000 more persons living within our borders than was the case a year ago. The reports of the Secretary of the Treasury show this. This is due to the net daily increase of 4,666 in our population, according to the same authority. Despite the fact that we have 108,087,000 persons in continental United States and have had no famine, no pestilence, no scourge of any kind and that prices on nearly everything have fallen, fallen, some of them to a frightful degree, and while all the skilled financiers and bankers and theorists and philosophers declare that the "corner has been turned," yet the best that the industrial and commercial papers can say is that the situation is "spotty." What is the meaning of it all? We have a third of a billion dollars more of gold in the country than we had six months ago and the reserve in the Federal Reserve banks has risen to 62½ per cent as against 42 per cent a year ago and the discount rates at New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and San Francisco are now 5½ per cent.

The Census Bureau has issued a bulletin telling that the value of farms and farm products have grown to the prodigious sum of $77,000,000,000, an increase of over 100 per cent since 1912, and a total equal to the entire wealth of the Nation—agriculture, manufacturing, banking, real estate, and everything from a pin to a locomotive—in 1890, only 31 years ago. Just stop and think of that. I hope every person here grasps that statement. How can I state it more forcibly?

The steel industry, operating at perhaps 20 to 25 per cent of its capacity, and continually reducing prices, is getting orders on a reduced scale. The greater the reduction the less the order takers are successful in their bookings and the more the price declines. Every price reduction paradoxically seems to deplete the sadly dwindling stock of optimism!

The railroads have had a great amount of money allocated to their claims, and a half billion dollars more is promised very shortly. Yet the number of idle cars is decreasing only at the rate of between 4,000 and 5,000 a week. Bituminous coal is on an average about one-fifth of what it cost this time last year at the mines. Still the markets are dull and sluggish. No one has filled their bins.

The katydids have already been heard in Washington, which means that the first frost is only six weeks away, unless all the signs of the past are of no account or value.

We in America have a potentiality of wealth equal to that of the British Empire, France, Germany, Italy, and Japan combined, and yet it seems from the talk we hear on this floor that nothing moves to the satisfaction of anybody. Everyone complains, and the habit of feeling pessimistic is becoming chronic, rather than a temporary "blue funk." The prices of Liberty bonds are lower than ever, the yield greater, the security tremendously increased since they were issued, yet the daily papers report them nearly at the lowest ever known.

My friends, the whole trouble is that the plant known as "confidence" has not grown as it should. It has suffered severely from the cyclone it has weathered. Our trouble is psychological, not fundamental. We need just as many items all along the line per family as we did a year ago, and much more, and we have the money and the credit to obtain what we desire if we only had the courage and nerve to go about it in the right manner.

Smoke screens are all right when we wish to protect ourselves from the enemy, but they are all wrong when we send them up to blot and distort the vision of what we possess.

In times of the greatest prosperity 1 per cent of the population is out of work from one cause or another. To-day perhaps 4 per cent of our wage earners are not working. They are living on what they have put away in a teapot, a stocking, or a stove, perhaps, if not in the savings bank, and their savings are rapidly diminishing. But they are good sports, and each day sees them realizing the duty they owe to themselves and society in general. They are accepting lower rates of pay and going back to work. Nine thousand carpenters agreed to new terms in Philadelphia on Saturday last. They are joining the ranks of those who are doing their best to help along with an optimistic program.

Let us remember there is a difference of only 12 per cent between a state of stable high prosperity and that of a depressed, anemic, pessimistic, melancholy inactivity. Therefore we should rouse ourselves to the importance of the situation; to the glorious age of opportunity in which we are living; to appreciate the fact that we may soon see in a completed plan of disarmament an opportunity for the benefit and upbuilding of civilization and mankind; the lifting of a yoke which has chafed the necks of billions since the dawning of history and which when a fulfillment is reached will be the greatest boon to mankind since the day that the "Star" appeared over Bethlehem.

We read in the papers of companies passing or postponing payment of dividends earned during the first six months of 1921 on the theory that a more convenient season is coming. The amount of dividends paid by these companies hitherto approximated $23,000,000. Many of these are cumulative.

Do you know, my friends, according to Prof. David Friday, that the savings per day for 1920 of the great United States of America was $31,500,000. We, as a Nation, have passed up just one day's savings in the deferment of all these dividends!

Some say if more capital were in evidence activity would be greater. Only this week the cable reports there is the equivalent of nine billions of dollars in British banks awaiting investment. Surely some of it should come our way in payment of the interest due on the four billions we loaned Great Britain, so that we could pay the many just claims of the soldiers. But the financiers say we have too much gold here already—more than 40 per cent of the $7,700,000,000, which is the gold stock of this terrestrial sphere. Then, again, 9,445,327 persons in the United States have $5,186,000,000 in the savings banks of this country. Prof. Friday says our savings, listen to what I say, for the last six years, or since 1915, have been $90,000,000,000, or more than the entire wealth of the country as recorded by the census of 1900. How does the man who is pessimistic reconcile these proven facts?

The last report of the Secretary of the Treasury says 952,224 more persons paid income taxes on $2,272,256,148 additional of income than in the previous year.

For the first six months of 1921, 2,000,000 more tons of anthracite have been shipped than in the same time in 1920.

Each month this year, according to the Irving National Bank, there has been an increased consumption of silk, cotton, and wool. A motor company turned out 105,000 cars in June, the largest in the history of the company. Silk in storage on July 1 reached the lowest point since the Silk Association of America started compiling the statistics. The total was 15,521 bales, against 20,541 on June 1. Apparent consumption during June was the highest ever reported, 30,877 bales.

If there is all this money on hand awaiting investment, why do the people not rush to pick up the bargains that are lying around? A great banking corporation in New York says the 10 highest grade railroad bonds are selling at the lowest prices in 40 years. Just think of it!

Of course, it is a question of lack of confidence in the future. If every Member within the sound of my voice should convince one constituent of his or hers that very great opportunities lie just ahead of us and ask that constituent to tell two others the same thing and have each of those two tell two others, and so on, by arithmetical progression, even if these were "dog days," we would create such a momentum of confidence that we would be prepared by being in a thoroughly inspired optimistic frame of mind to grapple, with more chance of success, with any international problem with which we might be confronted.

It is our duty to create an atmosphere of confidence even in these "dog days," for we possess the firm foundation that makes for permanency. The bottom has been reached. The cost of food is slowly rising, showing that deflation in foodstuffs is more than liquidated and the increasing demand with a lessened output is making itself felt according to the laws of economics which no statute can defy.

Increased efficiency and additional production in every line are warranted. The pent-up forces can not longer be maintained in statu quo, but will when suddenly released have a torrential force that will inevitably force prices unreasonably upward. It behooves us as Representatives to be leaders, not followers, and to give an impetus to industry by proclaiming loudly from the housetops the possibilities existing so generously within our borders.

We accomplished the impossible during the World War. We can perform miracles in peace if we are not faint-hearted. If we do not gird up our loins now we shall be forced to do so later when the bills have to be paid.

The tariff bill will help some, but the taxes on profits, no matter what they are, can not be collected if there are no profits. What we must do is to show the people the necessity for making additional proper profits on increased production marketed at attractive prices. Places can not be found for service men if there are none where their activities can be utilized. We must have additional income to pay for those who are disabled. This number is being increased at the rate of 700 per day. Let us have increased taxes on corporations, 150,000 of which now existing return no revenue to the Treasury. Let us create the opportunity for them to earn profits by extolling the merits of the situation we possess just ahead of us, but which for the moment a fog bank of indecision seems to obscure.

Let us have 3-cent postage, a 2-cent stamp on bank checks up to a thousand dollars, and a 5-cent stamp on checks above that figure. Let us conjure from the strong boxes of those who have accumulations the $25,000,000,000 of tax-exempt securities and show them it is more attractive to invest their capital in taxable enterprise than to augment those that are not. Those who invest in non-taxable securities shift a burden that should be shouldered by them because, in their native land, they have enjoyed wonderful opportunities.

Confidence is the keystone of the arch of our social structure. Let us talk it and practice it on all occasions, and believing that our heritage is unsurpassed have the vision to embrace the opportunity and vigorously make the most of it.

The Tariff Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JOSEPH H. HIMES,

OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, July 18, 1921.

Mr. HIMES. Mr. Speaker, the bill before us is intended to answer one of the most important questions facing us at this most critical stage of our history. The whole world, torn asunder by war, now torn by social readjustments and industrial disturbances, is looking toward America as a steadying influence and as a criterion for others. We have not entirely escaped the afterconsequences of the World War and our future will be based largely on the plans and programs formulated in this and following sessions of the Sixty-seventh Congress.

To-day we are considering tariff and probably never before has the tariff question meant so much for our industrial safety and commercial prosperity. Does it not behoove us then to forget sectional conditions and selfish interests and consider this momentous question from the all-American viewpoint? And should we not consider it in the light of the precedents and experiences since the time when Henry Clay made his first passionate appeal for the protection of our infant industries? A clear understanding of the fundamentals involved is necessary for a proper consideration of the various specific schedules.

When tariff was first considered in this country our forefathers realized our inefficiencies, our inexperience in transportation, and our lack of marketing devices; and in order that this new land might not be entirely dependent upon other countries for the necessities of life deemed it advisable to levy an import duty such as would permit modest capital, ingenuity, and ambition to surmount difficulties and lay the foundation for a manufacturing nation.

Despite bitter opposition and prophecies for evil, the mills that now skirt every village and hamlet from north to south and east to west, even in the agricultural districts of the great West and the cattle ranges of the Lone Star State, pay glowing tribute to their far-sighted vision and their earnestness of purpose. In more recent years the nature of the demands for tariff have changed. During and since the time of the beloved McKinley, whose district I now have the honor of representing, the primary purpose of an import tax has been protection, but not so much the protection of infant industries. It has been more the protection of the workingman and the conditions under which he labors. Tariff has meant proper food, proper homes, wholesome amusements, and the education of his children. Capital might have been fairly secure without such duties, but it would have been a calamity, indeed, to have thrown the workingman of America into competition with the workmen of European countries where class distinctions decree and industry demands that anyone so unfortunate as to be born in a laborer's home shall know nothing but toil from daylight until dark and look forward only to poverty-stricken old age. Tariff, my colleagues, is still and for generations to come probably will be required for this purpose, but incidentally tariff is needed now to assist in discharging our war indebtedness. Our people are taxed almost to the point where they would call out as did the oppressed of Egypt, and such taxation must continue excepting in so far as it may be relieved by duties upon foreign manufactures and economies in administration if we would uphold our national integrity through prompt discharge of our obligations.

The bill as drawn by the Ways and Means Committee, if I read it aright, is designed for all three of the purposes mentioned. It would protect our industries and workingmen and provide revenue. I do not question the sincerity of the gentlemen participating in the drafting of this measure, but all are liable to be mistaken, and it behooves me to ask if certain elements have not been permitted to creep in that are not in accord with, if not entirely antagonistic to, the three principles just stated.

Protection from the Republican viewpoint, protection from the American viewpoint, is not the protection of invested wealth but the protection of working capital. It is not the protection of capital as against the homes and the families of our workers. It is not the protection of individual interests of to-day in contradistinction with the general welfare and safety down through ensuing generations. And regarding revenues, let us remember the fable of the golden goose and beware lest misguided efforts at protection result in prohibition and the consequent creation of monopolies with their attendent evil, profiteering at the expense of the great consuming public.

Proper protection of working capital is based upon a study of cost and overhead in the manufacture of commodities both at home and abroad. Proper protection of the American workman means a tariff sufficient to encourage production and make unnecessary the lowering of wages to the European level or the elimination of those improvements for the protection of health and for safety. Proper protection of generations to come means the conservation rather than the exploitation of our natural resources and is incompatible with a tariff of any kind whatsoever upon those minerals that are so essential in peace but so much more essential in times of war. It is more patriotic to discourage rather than to encourage the exhaustion of those supplies stored up for us in the bowels of the earth.

We must rely largely upon the investigations and studies of the members of the Ways and Means Committee for assurance that the many and varied schedules do not contain prohibitive provisions. If mistakes in this connection are made they should be remedied quickly through appropriate supplemental legislation.

The big job for us now as a committee of the whole is to fix our principles and to revise this bill where necessary and possible to conform to those principles. We should then enact into law as soon as possible this amended bill, doing that much toward reassuring and stabilizing industry and commerce; and then pass on to the consideration and disposal of the tax problem, the transportation situation, and the other great questions for the consideration of which we were called into extraordinary session, looking toward the time when such terms as reconstruction and rehabilitation are needed only by the historian, and when peace, prosperity, and mutual good will shall reign in the land.

The Fordney Tariff Bill.

OF

HON. RICHARD WAYNE PARKER,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 28, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, our agriculture and industries need new tariff legislation and need it now. The closing of our mills and the slump in agriculture are sufficient proof of this. The Underwood rates do not sufficiently protect the industries and production of the country, as was discovered in 1914. During the Great War and till recently, the World War demand for everything that we make, at any price, gave employment to everyone and put the tariff in the background. No protection was needed during the war, but peace has come, and with it have come the problems of peace. Other problems of a new and strange kind have also come. The world has been carrying on war by the issue of paper money, and that paper money has now fallen in value so that it is worth but a fraction of its nominal and original value in coin. A large part of the world is starving and is ready to work on starvation wages. Our exports of cotton and wheat are at prices correspondingly reduced. Our exports of other things, and especially of manufactured goods, have practically ceased.

All prices are falling. Nations that repudiate their currency will have to buy real money to take its place, and for that purpose they are ready to sell commodities at cheap prices never known before. Nations which hope to restore the value of their paper currency or even to stabilize its reduced values will have to buy coin for these purposes. They are also ready to sell goods at any price, in order to buy the gold which lies in our Treasury. Some of them need that gold still more in order to pay the reparations ordered by the treaty of Versailles.

The whole world hungers for the American market; and it is for America to protect that market if she wishes to keep her own people at work and to restore the prosperity which can only come from plentiful and good work, well performed, at a fair wage.

The Fordney tariff bill is an endeavor to take care of this problem. No one can claim that it is a perfect bill. It is an honest attempt to meet the situation, and it contains provisions of great merit.

Wherever possible the duties are specific; that is to say, a fixed sum is charged for a fixed weight or measure of the particular goods, a fixed sum for each ton or bushel or yard. In cotton cloths specific duties are based upon the number of threads to the square inch of the fabric. These specific duties are especially valuable because they are not affected by the differences in prices prevailing in the various countries from which the goods are brought. They are certain and not based on varying markets. But specific duties may be very large or very small, compared with the value of the article, as prices rise or fall in the United States, and an ad valorem system has therefore been adopted by the Fordney bill of duties based on the value of the goods in the United States.

This system is novel here. It is not novel in the rest of the world and has been adopted by many great civilized nations. In the present condition of the world it is absolutely impossible to establish any fair system of duties based on the value of goods in foreign countries. In Russia and Austria any sacrifice of goods will be made to get a few cents of money with which to buy food, and prices fall accordingly. In Germany almost the same sacrifice will be made to get the money to pay reparations and avoid a new invasion and war. In all these countries, as well as in Italy and France, goods will be sold at almost any price to get money to pay taxes. Goods which have come from Japan or from England may have the same value and character here, but that value in the goods from Japan may be largely in the freight paid, and it is certainly unfair that a customs duty should be calculated on the Japanese value, so that the Japanese goods would pay half of what British goods would pay. The Fordney tariff bill therefore provides justly that ad valorem duties shall be reckoned on the United States value, which may be obtained either from sales at wholesale in the market here or from the cost abroad plus freight, expenses, and fair profit, or from the cost of reproduction.

This system will relieve the tariff administration from difficulties of valuation which prevailed when American firms made goods abroad which were not salable in the foreign market and imported them upon a reduced valuation based upon the bare cost of manufacture. Department stores had factories for laces and edgings in Switzerland; crockery stores had factories for china in France, which made patterns that were unsalable there, and paid an ad valorem duty on their mere cost. There was no way of finding out the real value of these goods. There was no way of punishing the almost general custom of sending false invoices with the goods. America has now the largest market in the world for every class of goods, and it is proposed to have duties paid on the values which prevail in our own markets at the time the goods are brought here.

The Fordney bill places duties on the products of agriculture. We were taught by the war that no nation could safely depend on other people for its prime necessities. As to wheat, we see no reason why Canada should undersell our own farmers at our own mills. These farmers now have to export part of the wheat that they grow, and they are entitled to preference in the home market.

We have had great crops and large demands abroad, but if these conditions should at any time be reversed all farmers should be protected from loss in the price of their crop as well as in its quantity.

Duties on farm products were reintroduced by McKinley. They were intended to stabilize prices so that our people may dare to keep on farming when times are hard.

Cattle and meats come within this principle, and are protected by this bill. Hides of cattle should come within the same principle. The majority of the House in Committee of the Whole voted for a duty on hides. Unfortunately the clause as adopted was badly drawn, and included skins of all kinds—that is to say, furs, goatskins, and so forth—which are not produced in this country in any quantity and should be on the free list. What is more, the same House in committee refused to put any duty on leather or leather manufactures, harness, saddlery, boots and shoes, and under these circumstances the House very properly reversed its action and refused to put a duty on hides. Many of us are frankly of the opinion that hides, leather, and leather manufactures should be protected. Just before the last war American shoe manufacturers, with American machinery and American lasts, were being established as far east as Finland. No real American should be willing to allow the American market to be supplied with goods made by foreign labor, as our market is even now supplied with safety matches made by Swedish match companies, of which the greatest American match company is at least the sole agent and is supposed to be the chief owner. American labor should supply the American market.

Cotton may probably come within the same rule. Its production and price have so fallen off that it seems essential to protect our cotton farmers so that they will at least have the American market. This is especially true in long-staple cotton, of which the sea islands of South Carolina and Georgia once had the monopoly. Skillful scientists from Germany and England got some of the seed and domesticated the long-staple cotton plant in Egypt with such success that our mills are now being largely supplied from Egypt. Meanwhile in the Imperial Valley of California the Egyptian seed has been domesticated and is being grown with great success, and it is beyond question that the production of long-staple cotton should be encouraged and protected in the United States.

Our farmers do not so much need that protection as to short-staple cotton, because the American seed has not yet been taken abroad and used there, and American cotton seed is better than that from India and China; but any farsighted statesman should take pains to see that our cotton production shall not be endangered and that cotton farmers in America shall have the American market. It is true that cotton mills in New England and in my own State have remonstrated against any duty on cotton. Of course, a compensatory duty on cotton manufactures should be passed if necessary, but mill owners as Americans should realize that they are even more interested than others in having an independent American supply under all circumstances.

Oil and asphalt, as well as coal and wood, are now placed on the free list. They are American products, but, unlike farm products, their production necessarily diminishes our national supply and resources, and we are therefore not willing to encourage the exhaustion of our oil and asphalt, the destruction of our trees, and the overworking of our coal mines.

Manufactures, of course, are the chief subject of protection. Their production should have preference in the American market. The Fordney bill has a carefully considered schedule of rates, largely equivalent to those of the Payne bill but including many articles which were unknown at the time of the last tariff. The invention, discovery, or organization of these novel manufactures is proof of the importance of our keeping in touch with the mechanical progress which is the peculiar mark of modern civilization, and of doing everything that our hands find to do, with the assurance that the value of work lies in the work itself, in the education of the Nation in productive power, and in the development of the combined wisdom of brain and hand which we justly call handicraft.

Coal-tar dyes are probably the most striking instance of the long line of new mechanical products which, though utterly unknown to our ancestors, are now of universal use and necessity. Dye manufacture in any variety was only introduced into the United States by the necessities of the Great War. These coal-tar dyes are made by processes which are essential to every nation in time of war for the production of high explosives, and the maintenance of our dye manufactures is regarded as of essential military interest. Germany had more of these manufactures than any other nation and this fact had given her an advantage in the beginning of the Great War which was only overcome after anxious years of scientific and practical chemical work. Even now the situation in this industry is critical here. We have many dye works and the number is growing fast, but we can not yet make certain dyes which should be imported under a reasonable duty for the use of our spinners and weavers, while, on the other hand, our dye manufacturers do not feel safe as to those dyes which they can make, because there is such a large stock of dyes piled up in Germany that our own product could be swamped and destroyed by imports.

It is hard to name a rate of duty which would be certain to be protective under these circumstances, especially as the prices of these coal-tar products range from about 15 cents a pound to $10 a pound, and even more.

The Ways and Means Committee, under the leadership of the Member from Ohio, proposed to allow the Tariff Commission to determine which dyes could be made in this country at a reasonable price, and which dyes could not be so made; and to allow the import of those that we could not make at a reasonable duty of 30 to 35 per cent, while putting an absolute prohibition and embargo for three years on the importation of any dye which we can make.

This plan was adopted in the Committee of the Whole but was struck out of the bill in the House by a narrow vote. The bill has now gone to the Senate, and this matter will probably receive some careful solution, perhaps by embargo, or, if not, then by some such duty as 50 cents a pound and 50 per cent ad valorem, with the idea that such duties, imposed for a term of, say, three years, will be practically prohibitory for commercial purposes and leave the field open to the competition of our American manufacturers, while at the same time they would not prevent importation for special purposes or of samples and would not require the inspection and supervision of the Tariff Commission which was necessarily contained in the recent provision for an embargo.

It is not easy to deal with this question. It is complicated; but the importance of this manufacture is as great as its complications, and perhaps there is no place in the whole Union which has done as much in this branch of industry as my own city of Newark, N. J.

The idea of a prohibitory duty has been violently attacked by Democrats. They need only be referred to the father of Democracy, Thomas Jefferson. The War of 1812 had convinced that great American of the necessity of American independence and self-dependence in the production of all that might be required in war. Thus, in a letter to J. B. Say, the French economist, in March, 1815, Thomas Jefferson said:

> The prohibiting duties we lay on all articles of foreign manufacture which prudence requires us to establish at home, with the patriotic determination of every good citizen to use no foreign article which can be made within ourselves, without regard to difference of price, secures us against a relapse into foreign dependency.

A year later he repeats this thought in a letter to Benjamin Austin, January 9, 1816:

> Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort, and if those who quote me of a different opinion will keep pace with me in purchasing nothing foreign where an equivalent of domestic fabric can be obtained without regard to difference of price it will not be our fault if we do not soon have a supply at home equal to our demand and wrest that weapon of distress from the hand which has wielded it.

Andrew Jackson's message of December 7, 1830, insists that "the power to impose duties on imports" was identical with the right to adjust those duties with a view to the encouragement of domestic branches of industry, and that if the right to exercise it for the purpose of protection be not possessed by the General Government it must be extinct.

> Our political system would thus present the anomaly of a people stripped of the right to foster their own industry and to counteract the most selfish and destructive policy which might be adopted by foreign nations.
> This surely can not be the case; this indispensable power must be within the scope of the authority on the subject expressly delegated to Congress.

Sam Randall was a Democrat, but he was an ardent protectionist. It is only of late years that Democracy has taken the ground that it is unconstitutionl to defend the industries of our country. The Great War has now proved the necessity of this policy and that self-dependence is as essential in war as it is successful in peace. Manufacturers in the South are now breaking the party lines of free-trade Democracy, and we may confidently look forward to the time when a protective tariff will be supported by patriots of all parties. I am not arguing the question of protection. It is the educator of the Nation. Our national wealth is not in what we have laid by, but in what we can do.

But there has been so much said in the debate against the whole system of tariff that I print as an appendix some remarks on the theory of protection, which seem as true now as when they were uttered in the House:

[From CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Mar. 30, 1909.]

> Mr. PARKER. Mr. Chairman, we may well be glad that we have had this general debate, by which Members of the House have learned each other's needs and that all have their share in the American system, whereby every American gives a preference to what comes from the American farm, forest, mine, and mill. North and South, East and West should have learned that it is no question of sectional advantage, but of the general benefit that flows from dealing with each other. It is no mere question of prices, nor is it one only of wages, great as that question is. It is not merely a money question, of profits or home markets, nor only a social question of the building up of communities, nor only a political question of creating a state of national independence for peace and war, nor is it only a national question of uniting every employment and every locality by mutual interests and mutual dealing. It is also a far greater question; that is, of the encouragement and organization of the productive forces of the Nation—the education of hand and mind in that progress in the mechanic arts, that industrial development, that mastery of man over matter, that dominance of the powers of nature which is the distinctive mark of the march and progress of modern civilization and which seems in every decade to revolutionize the lives and work of those nations who are wise enough to take part in that march.

We are learning by this debate that industry is national, that the farm, the forest, the mine, and the mill can not be separated, but must be considered together; that we must not think only of ourselves, but of each other. We must encourage agriculture and the products of the soil. America would not be content to be dependent on other countries for her food, as England is now. We must encourage and regulate the forest and the mine, so as at once to use and also to preserve and develop their resources. This is no easy task, and the question of lumbering and the destruction of forests is great and difficult. We must go forward in the mechanic arts. China teaches us that to stand still is to go backward.

Protection is no mere question of prices, though the greatly reduced duties of the Payne bill assure us that protected industries have usually greatly lowered prices. A country town that gives land for a mill expects other benefits than low prices. The fathers of the Constitution were farmers, and they expected no cheaper prices, but dearer, when they passed the first protective tariff for the encouragement of manufactures.

If the tariff in some cases makes higher prices, the tariff is a tax, but every class can well afford to pay that tax. The farmer can well afford to pay to bring the mill into his own native land and near to himself so that he may sell his crop without loss of price in the profits of jobbers and exporters and in foreign freights. He can then market bulky crops like hay, and perishable crops like fruits, vegetables, and milk, and thus bring into use different soils, preserve fertility, and diversify agriculture. His own nation will buy of him all that they need every year, while other countries only buy when their own crops are short. In foreign trade we already have great rivals in wheat, and Egypt teaches us not to be too confident of our monopoly of cotton. The American farmer should find his hope and strength in the ever-expanding home market created by protected industry.

But the farmer gets still greater good from the building up of communities. Manufacture and business demand and create facilities in which he shares—roads, railroads, stores, towns, schools, libraries, churches, telegraphs, trolleys, newspapers—and in all these the farmer's growing family find education and employment according to their several bent and ability. Thereby the nation becomes strong in that productive power which is its real wealth. Each occupation helps the other. It is the American machine shop that puts the sewing machine in every farmer's house and the reaper in his fields.

Free traders say that the country would lay by more money if it would only do what is most profitable for the time, but the fall of the Spanish Empire proved that mere accumulated wealth may be weakness instead of strength. It is not weight that makes the man, but balanced and vigorous muscles. It is not bonds and stocks and the profits of trade that make the nation, but the power to produce in greatest quantity everything that is needed for peace or war. It matters little whether a particular industry at any time be profitable or not, for it is only by pursuing that employment that we learn to make it profitable. Every industry is an infant compared to that of the next decade. In the last 40 years at least five new methods for making steel have followed each other. Protected farming has introduced to our farms the fruits of the Tropics and the Orient. Electric power is new to this generation, and American devices and machinery are now chaining the waterfall to the trolleys and mill wheels of the distant town. The fathers of our country would have looked aghast at the steamship and the railroad of 50 years ago, and the citizen of that time would look with equal awe at the telephone, the phonograph, the auto, and the fiery hissing of the electric rail. We should protect our industries, whether they pay or not, in order to keep our people in every productive employment wherein they may learn to do better. Consider the fact that mechanical progress is what makes modern civilization. The ancients had law, literature, religion, empire, but modern civilization began when the compass opened the New World, when gunpowder broke down the robber castle and opened the highways to the nation, when the printing press made learning common to all, and when the gearing of the Saxon water mill began to make the forces of nature do the work of man.

What matter, then, if work pay, for power to produce is our "common wealth." Physicians tell us that one-seventh of the human body is wasted and replaced in every year. Figures seem to show that in the live and active nation the same is true of the property of a nation. It is the power to produce, the power to replace and to grow, which is our "common wealth," the res publica, and it is this productive power which the Republican Party, as the party of the Commonwealth, has known how to foster and maintain.

There is a moral to all this. The productive energy of the farmer, the woodman, the stock raiser, the miner, and the mill, as well as of the humblest workmen and hands in their employ, is equally deserving of protection. We must be careful, it is true, that we do not confuse production with waste of natural resources. But away with the idea that a man should not be encouraged because what he makes is the raw material for some other man or that an industry should not be protected because its products can be bought cheaper abroad. It is the work that is valuable for itself and not its product. It is the education and progress of our people in every branch of human productive energy which we must look to. If the tariff be sometimes a tax, it is a school tax for our training in every branch of handicraft and of productive employment.

Let us look only to the question stated by our last platform, whether the duty is sufficient to enable any work to be carried on with such reasonable profit and fair wage as shall induce Americans to go on with that work. The reward is in doing the work. That work itself is the wage and the wealth of the worker and of the Nation.

Let us come together and agree, so as to modify, but only in order to perfect, the great American system of protection, to which we owe prosperity and progress. Let us avoid all narrowness and see that good goes to all who do good work.

To do good to the least of these our brethren is to do good to ourselves. Each member that is at work helps the whole body politic. To exercise the arm sends life-giving streams into the whole body. Let us keep our people at useful work, so that "the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

My city is one of mills, with thousands of different industries and fifty or sixty thousand workmen. I am working for them with all the energy that I possess, but I would not ask protection for a single one if I did not believe that the energies which they display work for the good of the Nation.

Mr. Chairman, I believe in a protective tariff; not because it gives any man wealth, but because it teaches the whole Nation to recognize that national wealth lies in the organization and protection of all our work, so that it is done better from day to day; so that our people are learning by the only effectual schooling, which is that of doing things; and so as to create that independence in peace and in war that has made us the greatest Nation of the world; where the arteries of commerce reach on iron rails from sea to sea; where the nerve currents speed over the wires of the telegraph with the rapidity of lightning; where the pulsating hearts of our steam engines give giant power that we can control, manage, and distribute to each worker; and where American invention finds full play and scope. It is a system whose end is not to lay by wealth, but to create that which is of so much more importance than wealth—strength and productive power.

It is nearly a century ago that Frederick List, afterwards the father of German protection, laid down in this country the fundamental doctrine that a nation's well-being lies in its productive power. Without it all the wealth of England fills its poorhouses and streets with the unemployed. With it each man, by work, is better day by day, and it can only be had if we, like the great fathers of the doctrine of protection, recognize that every form of production throughout this broad land is equally worthy of being considered, encouraged, and preferred in all our dealings, binding us together as one Nation in heart, as we are one in interest. [Applause.]

Fordney Tariff Bill, or How We Can Grow Rich by Keeping Our Neighbors Poor.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

HON. EUGENE BLACK,

OF TEXAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 28, 1921.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, availing myself of the leave granted to Members to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the Fordney tariff bill, I want to discuss briefly some phases of the tariff question which I did not have opportunity to discuss during the recent consideration of the bill in the House.

One of the arguments which Republican advocates of the measure used with particular emphasis during the debate was that labor in foreign countries is much cheaper than in the United States, and therefore we must build up high protective tariff walls to keep out foreign imports and in this way protect American labor from having to compete with European standards of living. In the use of these arguments no allowance was made and no credit given for the fact that American labor is very vitally interested in disposing of its surplus production and that the very moment this surplus production begins to pile up in local warehouses and is unable to find a market business stagnates and idleness and unemployment stalk up and down the land with their long trail of attendant evils.

Gentlemen on the Republican side of the House are constantly pointing to figures of imports into the United States and saying, "Now look what your Underwood tariff law went and done. These goods ought to have been bought here in the United States and thereby have given employment to American labor."

A typical example of this shortsighted and erroneous viewpoint was given by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] in a speech which he delivered on the emergency tariff bill in the House of Representatives Thursday, April 14, 1921, in which he said:

> Let me say to you, my Democratic friends, without criticism and with all sincerity, every man on that side of the House who votes against this bill votes in the interest of the foreigner and to the detriment of your own people who sent you here. There is no question about that, gentlemen. Millions of men are out of employment to-day in the United States, and yet we are importing $300,000,000 worth of foreign goods every 30 days into our country, to the detriment of our own people and our own institutions.

Well, what of it, Mr. FORDNEY? Why not let us see the other side of the picture and see the amount of goods we export to these same customers from whom we received the imports? When you tell us of the $5,279,398,211 worth of goods imported into the United States in the calendar year 1920 why do not you tell us of the $8,228,759,748 worth of goods which we exported during the same year, and then you should explain how we are hurt by the $3,000,000,000 resulting balance of trade in our favor.

Take some time in debate and explain to us how we are going to continue to send out these exports unless we get in imports. Why not explain to the farmers of the United States how they are going to dispose of 5,000,000 surplus bales of cotton and 350,000,000 surplus bushels of wheat if we adopt the fatuous policy of damming up the channels of trade under the mistaken belief that to do so will put American labor to work. If the concentrated activity of commercial and mechanical production of the last 20 years had not changed the whole complexion of agriculture and industry in the United States, our past prosperity might be continued without foreign outlets for our production. But things have greatly changed and some gentlemen on the other side seem utterly unable to see it and want to still use flintlock-rifle and tallow-candle methods of commerce and trade. One gentleman holding that kind of view was moved to rise in his seat during the recent debate and ask one of our Democratic Members, who was discussing the intimate relation of our foreign trade to our national prosperity, this question:

If the gentleman had to make a choice as to which one he would be willing to give up first, the home market or the foreign market, which one would he select?

Wonderful question, that?

Might as well ask a man which he prefers, his heart or his lungs. If he continues to live, he must have both. If we have prosperity here in the United States, we must be careful and considerate of both our foreign and domestic trade, and any policy which is not built upon that kind of a foundation is built upon the sand and is bound to fail.

GROWTH OF OUR COMMERCE WITH THE ORIENT UNDER THE UNDERWOOD LAW.

In discussing the question of foreign imports gentlemen on the Republican side of the House have been particularly fond of pointing to the case of Japan and citing figures showing the growth of imports from that country into the United States. Then, after citing such figures, these gentlemen have indulged in dire predictions of what is going to happen to the United States if we do not shut out this flood of imports from the Orient. Very well; let us take the case of Japan, about which gentlemen have talked so much. I emphatically affirm that our commerce with that country, even though it does have cheap labor, is of very great benefit to the people of the United States. I also make bold to say that this commerce has grown and prospered a great deal more under the Underwood tariff law than any other tariff law ever enacted by Congress. A mere assertion of mine to that effect might be scouted by Members on the Republican side, but I think I can prove it and I will use as a basis of my proof an official publication of the United States Government. I quote from the Statistical Abstract of the United States, compiled by the Department of Commerce, of which Hon. Herbert Hoover is the Secretary. This publication shows that for the calendar year of 1920 the total value of our exports to Japan was $377,941,926, whereas we imported from that country goods and commodities to the amount of $414,579,241. "Yes" but says some Republican; "that shows a balance of trade against us amounting to $36,637,315." And then he thinks he has stirred up a mare's-nest which he can use in further assailing the Underwood tariff law.

Let us see about that. Suppose we turn back 10 years, to the time of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, for which Republicans have such a warm affection. For the fiscal year 1910 our exports to Japan were only $26,568,754 and we imported from her in the same year goods to the value of $73,766,202. Therefore the balance of trade against us in 1910 under the Payne-Aldrich bill was $47,197,448. So now, let us compare the two situations and what do we find? On a total commerce between Japan and the United States in 1920, aggregating nearly $800,000,000 in exports and imports, the balance of trade against us was only $36,637,315. Whereas in 1910, with a total trade between the United States and Japan aggregating only about $100,000,000 the balance of trade against us was $47,197,448.

To put it another way, the balance of trade against us in favor of Japan under the Underwood tariff law in 1920 was less than 10 per cent of the total amount of our exports to that country. Whereas in 1910, under the Payne-Aldrich bill, the balance of trade against us in favor of Japan was the amount of our entire exports to that country, and 80 per cent more besides. Now, which year shows up the best for the people of the United States? Let some blind follower of protection make an analysis of these plain facts and figures and then tell us how he can affirm that the erection of high tariff walls benefits either the people of the United States or of Japan. Let the cotton farmer of the South to whom an urgent appeal is being made to embrace this false doctrine of protection study these figures. He will find that included in the figures of exports to Japan for the fiscal year 1920, amounting to $377,941,926, are 667,585 bales of cotton valued at $133,416,224. Whereas in the figures of exports to Japan for the fiscal year 1910, under the Payne-Aldrich bill, is 127,522 bales of cotton valued at $9,625,941.

I wonder if the cotton farmer thinks it is better to go back to a protective tariff system like that which prevailed in 1910 under which he sold Japan 127,522 bales of cotton valued at $9,625,941, or is it better to pursue a more liberal trade policy like that which is insured under the Underwood law, and sell Japan 667,585 bales of cotton valued at $133,416,224.

Let some of these statesmen who have been so enthusiastically urging a tariff duty on cotton and other protective duties on agricultural products answer that question. The reason why the aggregate of our exports are so much greater under a liberal trade policy insured by such a law as the Underwood law than under a selfish and restricted trade policy like that imposed by such laws as the Payne-Aldrich bill and this Fordney bill is very simple and is not at all involved.

COOPERATION AND FRIENDLY UNDERSTANDING IS THE BASIS OF PERMANENT PROSPERITY.

Commercially, we and the other nations of the world are vital to each other's prosperity. The rule which operates among nations is not very different from that which prevails among individuals, and we have long since learned that the very test of the civilization of any people is their ability to cooperate.

The mine worker, for example, who thinks he owes none of his success as a worker to cooperation with capital and with other workers, does not stop to think that the iron ore which he brings to the top of the mine would be worth nothing if it were not carried on to the furnace and there melted into pig iron by other workers, and then the pig iron would be of no value except it be carried to the steel mills where other workers press it into plates and mold it into bars of steel, and then these plates and bars of steel would be worth nothing except they be transported to the factories and made into plows and threshing machines and axes and saws and hammers, and a thousand other implements of husbandry and commerce, and then none of these articles would have any value except for the fact that the farmer and the mechanic and the laborer buy them and use them in producing the real wealth of the world, and the surplus production of each of these workers would amount to nothing but a rotting heap were it not for the ability of each to exchange his products for the products of the other, and in so doing he uses as the medium of exchange the system of finance, the value and integrity of which is guaranteed and safeguarded by the Government. And for any one class or group, be it capital or labor, to pretend that it alone creates the wealth of the country is nothing short of folly, arrogance, and selfishness.

So it is with nations. The prosperity of one country depends upon its ability to exchange its surplus production for the surplus production of another. For instance, the very direction of the wind in far-away India affects the prosperity of the cotton-growing States in America. If the annual return of the monsoon breaks favorably, India's 300,000,000 people enjoy good crops. Out of the proceeds which they reap from their harvest they purchase approximately 30 per cent of the cotton manufactures of Great Britain, and Britain in turn purchases approximately 25 per cent of the cotton in our Southern States.

What good would it do the southern farmer to produce five or six million bales of cotton more than is needed in the United States if he can not sell it? What good would it do the western farmer to produce 350,000,000 more bushels of wheat than is needed in the United States if he can not sell it? It would do no good. Indeed, the surplus becomes a millstone around the farmer's neck if it can not be marketed, and drags him down to economic ruin. If a policy like that upon which the Fordney bill is founded is carried to its logical conclusion, we will have to readjust our whole process of production. It is built, gentlemen, upon a false economic premise and is wholly indefensible from any point of view.

The only mystery to me is that any administration in a time like this, when we have grown to be the world's greatest creditor Nation and when it is more important than ever before that there be a free exchange of goods and commodities between the nations of the world, would come forward with a proposition like this to put handcuffs on American business. The only explanation that I can give of it is that these gentlemen are laboring under the fatuous notion that we can grow rich by keeping our neighbors poor. A great idea, that, and the political party which puts it forward is indeed "a Daniel come to judgment."

CONCLUSION.

Mr. Speaker, nearly three years have passed since the ending of the World War—that tragic drama which convulsed the world and dug at the very roots of civilization. In this mighty convulsion thrones were overturned, empires fell and became as dust of the desert. The people of many lands were left with grave and perplexing problems to solve which have puzzled the minds of their greatest men. It will take years of toil and sacrifice to liquidate the tremendous burdens of the war. The United States of America, while not free from these difficulties and problems, comes out of the war as the great creditor nation of the world. More than 40 per cent of the gold of the world is now within our borders.

It does seem to me that with half of the world indebted to us to such an extent that at the present time they can not even pay the interest it would be a mighty poor time to start trade wars and tariff retaliations. Now, of all times, it is needful to firmly adhere to the Democratic doctrine that the tariff is a tax and should be levied equitably for the support of the Government, and at such rates as will be certain to not interfere with the perfect freedom of trade.

We need again to emphatically affirm the principle that the Government has no moral right to lay tribute upon the industry of one citizen for the benefit of another. In other words, we need to establish as the permanent tariff policy of the Nation that duties are not levied for the protection of industry, but only and solely for the support of the Government.

Tariff Revision.

OF

HON. R. WALTON MOORE,

OF VIRGINIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, July 26, 1921.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, supplementing the statements which I made while the tariff bill, which passed the House on July 21, was under discussion, I wish to say something of the evolution of the bill, with a view to emphasizing the objections that have been urged to the processes employed in enacting legislation of this character. I do not intend to discuss conflicting tariff theories, or to follow others in pointing out how inexpedient and dangerous it is to supersede the existing law by a complete general revision at a time when all conditions on both sides of the ocean are chaotic and the export of our surplus products depends upon imports for which they must be exchanged, since payment for them in cash or credits can not be expected, or to attempt any close analysis of the provisions of the bill. Nor would it be worth while to place against the confident predictions of the advocates of the measure that it will relieve the serious depression that now prevails my own apprehension that it may serve to increase the difficulties from which the country is now suffering.

My main purpose is to refer to the facts connected with the preparation and adoption of the bill, as to which I ventured to say during the course of the debate that the statesmanship of the country—> should try to get rid of the method that is pursued in revising the tariff and to find some better method; some method that will take it out of the sphere of party politics and put it into the sphere of business as far as possible; some method that will make the Ways and Means Committee less a battle ground of selfish and avaricious interests.

Admittedly there are few subjects of more importance with which Congress deals. No wholesale revision can be made without affecting directly or indirectly the entire population of our country and every occupation in which they are engaged. All of their internal concerns are affected, and likewise all of their commercial relations with other countries. Ordinary common sense dictates that the subject should be dealt with cautiously on the basis of the most exact and reliable information that can be obtained and with inflexible resolve to resist the demands and invasions of special privilege. Plainly the effort should be to preserve, or rather to restore, the full limits of the field of equal opportunity. But in this instance there has been almost hysterical haste instead of deliberation, conjecture instead of facts, and an astonishing degree of deference to interests which seek to enrich themselves by even more governmental favor than they have heretofore enjoyed. There has been, as it seems to me, a marked disregard of the interests of the great body of the people; "those," to use the language of Edmund Burke, "whom Providence has doomed to live on trust."

The bill was introduced in the House by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee on the 29th of June. It was formally reported to the House by that committee on the 6th of July. Its discussion began on the 8th of July, and it was passed on the 21st of July. It was, therefore, considered in the Committee of the Whole for only 12 days, and finally acted on by the House on the twelfth day. More will be said about the sort of consideration—the meager scrutiny and analysis—which was accorded it.

The bill is more voluminous than any that has been before Congress for a long time, with the single exception of the bill codifying the Federal Statutes. It consists of 346 printed pages. It places import duties upon a vast number of articles described in 14 schedules and enumerated by groups or individually in 1,458 paragraps. That the free list contains only 188 paragraphs indicates how universally duties are imposed on foreign importations. Furthermore, the bill carries novel and extraordinary provisions relative to the manner in which imports shall be valued and for lowering and raising rates by bargaining with or retaliating on other countries. Furthermore, it embodies in 109 pages the amendment and codification of our customs laws, which are the growth of more than a century of legislation.

Let us see what occurred while the bill was being framed before it was reported to the House. Of the 435 Members of the House, who are expected to have some more or less definite conception of the meaning and probable result of every important measure on which they vote, 25 Members constitute the Ways and Means Committee, in which is vested jurisdiction of the tariff and related matters. Seventeen of the twenty-five belong to the majority party and eight to the minority party.

The Ways and Means Committee began open hearings on the tariff on the 6th of January of the present year and concluded them on the 16th of February. In that brief time the committee received about 1,000 oral or written statements, which are printed in a record of over 4,000 pages. Witnesses could not be searchingly examined or cross-examined.

Examination of the printed record shows that what has happened heretofore happened again; that the great preponderance of testimony submitted to the committee was furnished by corporations and individuals anxious to increase duties and clamoring for the very highest duties that the committee might be persuaded to report, and it is not at all doubtful that they were asking rates the effect of which, in their opinion, would be to advance the prices of their own commodities. Alluding to the environment in which the committee worked while the hearings were in progress and the atmosphere created by the efforts of those who were naturally serving their own interests, Mr. FREAR, of Wisconsin, one of the Republican members of the committee, has this to say in the separate report which he made to the House:

> In all tariff hearings the producers are generally heard on different schedules and are often represented by experts, attorneys, and many witnesses, all of whom urge on the committee high protective rates for their particular schedules. Rarely are the great army of consumers represented by witnesses. * * *

Mr. FREAR's statement simply echoes the views of eminent members of both parties who have in times past deplored the evils which attach to our methods of tariff legislation. For example, Mr. Roosevelt, in a notable speech in 1912, said:

> The practice of undertaking a general revision of all the schedules at one time and of securing information as to conditions in the different industries and as to rates of duty desired, chiefly from those engaged in the industries, who themselves benefit directly from the rates they propose, has been demonstrated to be not only iniquitous but futile. It has afforded the opportunity for practically all of the abuses which have crept into our tariff making and our tariff administration. The day of the logrolling tariff must end.

And then he went on to tell of his faith in a well-constituted tariff commission endowed with ample authority. But the day of the logrolling tariff has not ended. It continues into our own time. There is thus far no very promising effort to usher in a better day.

The entire committee took part in the public hearings, and there were available for the use of the entire committee a large number of printed compilations furnished the committee, at its request, by the Tariff Commission. But what of the information that was supplied by the witnesses and the Commission? Was it indeed of dependable quality? Was it information that could be assumed as very helpful in guiding the committee and the House toward safe and just conclusions? The chairman of the committee in his address opening the debate and explaining the bill stressed the importance of a speedy revision, and justified the bill by urging that duties should be imposed so as to equalize the difference in the cost of production in this country and the cost of production abroad. This he announced as a fundamental theory. And yet anyone who consults the information contained in the record of the hearings and in the compilations of the Tariff Commission will find that in respect to the bulk of the commodities involved, the witnesses and the Commission agreed that if it is ever possible to ascertain with any sort of precision the difference in production cost, it is absolutely impossible to do so at this time when all of the factors that enter into the problem are so uncertain and so constantly shifting on both sides of the ocean. That being true, the committee and the House were placed in a field of infinite conjecture. They were like a mariner on a turbulent sea without an approved chart or compass.

When the public hearings closed on February 16, publicity ceased. The majority members of the committee then went into executive session, and for weeks they remained in executive session, altogether detached from the minority members who were never called in for conference. Not until June 29, when the bill was introduced in the House by the chairman of the committee, was the veil of secrecy lifted. Between that date and the 6th of July, when the bill exactly as introduced was reported to the House, one open committee meeting was held, in which the minority members participated, but the bill as already drafted was not modified in any particular. The minority members were not permitted to offer and have passed on a single modification. During the period from February 16, when the majority of the committee was engaged upon its task behind closed doors, there were, of course, no minutes kept of what occurred, and there was no outgiving to the public or the House except occasional statements or rumors that found their way to the newspapers. It is thus known that many of the most important features of the bill were the subject of prolonged and heated controversy. It is known that conclusions as to matters of the utmost importance were confidently arrived at and summarily reversed. For instance, at one stage it was determined by a vote of 10 to 7 to place crude oil on the free list, and thereafter it was finally determined by a vote of 9 to 8 to charge it with a duty. My own view as to the unreliability of the ex parte work of the majority of the Ways and Means Committee in the privacy of its secret sessions, is expressed in the following extract from what I said with reference to the dye embargo, which was proposed in the bill, but which by a combination of the minority of the House and a part of the majority was stricken out before its final passage:

Now, Mr. Chairman, there are certain facts that stand out clearly in the midst of all the confusion. With all the uncertainty as to what the truth is, there are certain uncontested facts. This embargo is not the work of the Ways and Means Committee as a whole. It does not even come from the heart of the majority of the Ways and Means Committee. That majority sat in secret session, but we have enough information to know that it never was a unit on this question and that at one time the proposition to impose an embargo was rejected by a majority of the committee. Therefore what real weight does the final conclusion as expressed in the bill carry with it? How far can it be seriously regarded as a basis for deliberate and solemn action here, when it was rejected one day and shortly thereafter under the pressure of argument and influence of which we have no record, approved and brought here as the ultimate finding of a part of the majority of the Ways and Means Committee? And yet we are expected as custodians of the interests of the entire American people to put this thing through, that being its evolution so far as committee action is concerned. [Applause.]

In passing it may be noted that the bill as drafted proposed an embargo on the importation of certain dyes—not a duty, but an embargo, the very first embargo ever incorporated in a tariff bill—which was denounced not only by Democrats but by many Republicans as the most extreme measure of protection that has been devised and as a response to the demand of some of the most powerful and plutocratic corporations in the country.

At the outset of the debate in the House, or rather in the Committee of the Whole, which, as I have said, lasted but 12 days, contrary to all precedents, the proponents of the bill would not venture to estimate what revenue it would produce if enacted into law. On that point I said:

But there is at least this difference between the parties: The minority party believes, or many of them believe, as the most of the statesmen in the beginning believed, in a tariff for revenue with incidental protection, while it has been demonstrated during this debate that the majority party believes in a policy of extreme and unreasonable protection, with revenue as an incident, and very often with revenue entirely forgotten. There has been a shining absence all during this discussion of any reference to the matter of revenue. The chairman of the committee is unable to make an estimate of the revenue which this bill will produce in case it is enacted, and that ignorance envelops us at this moment in the same fog as prevailed when the discussion started.

Also, at the outset of the debate, contrary to all precedents, the proponents of the bill declined to make any comparison of the duties contained in the bill with the duties provided by the Payne-Aldrich law of 1909, which was so severely condemned by many leaders and a very large element of the Republican Party and contributed to that party's defeat at the polls. It was the lack of reliable data and the constant dispute as to facts while the bill was being discussed that caused me to quote the comment of Senator Root upon what transpired at the time the Payne-Aldrich law was being enacted, when the legislative conditions were similar to those of which I am speaking. Mr. Root said:

Upon one hand we have garbled statements, upon the other equally garbled and partial statements, and no means of distinguishing the truth. We are under the necessity of proceeding by guesswork, by conjecture, always with dissatisfaction, because we recognize the chance that we have guessed wrong about whose statements come nearest to the truth.

It is the earnest conviction of many of those who have made such examination of the bill as has been possible that if the bill should run the gantlet of the Senate and become a law without essential change, the rates of duty will prove to be higher than have ever been embodied in any of the many tariff revisions that have been enacted. This result seems to be made certain by the great number of ad valorem duties it carries, coupled with the requirement that for the purpose of imposing and collecting those duties, the value of imports after reaching this country, and not their value when shipped from abroad, shall be taken as a basis. Indeed, this change from the basis of valuation, which has nearly always been in effect throughout the entire period since the original tariff bill was passed by the First Congress, to a wholly new basis, will tend to convert import trade into speculative transactions and make in favor of exclusion rather than fair competition, which is all that any protectionist is entitled to claim. Such is reported to be the view expressed to the Senate Finance Committee by Dr. Thomas Walker Page, the very able and accomplished Virginian who is chairman of the Tariff Commission, and whose knowledge of tariff conditions is certainly unexcelled by that of any other man in this country. And other eminent men have advised the Senate committee that they concur in Dr. Page's view. Yet the right to offer a substitute for or an amendment of the enormously important valuation provision was denied.

As I have said, the bill was reported to the House on July 6. The general debate in the Committee of the Whole, which began later, ended on July 14. During the interval, no amendment, or offer of amendment, was permissible. On July 15 the bill was taken up for more detailed consideration. But this was rigidly limited by a special rule which was made effective notwithstanding the energetic protest of the Democratic minority and some of the majority. This unprecedented rule made it practically impossible for any amendments to be offered except by the majority of the Ways and Means Committee. It provided that the bill should be brought to a vote on July 21, and that prior to that date preference should be given to committee amendments, including amendments with reference to the dye embargo and duties on hides, cotton, oil, and asphalt. It was recognized, and so charged, and the result verified the charge that in the six days reserved for the detailed consideration of the bill it could not and would not be read paragraph by paragraph; that no Member outside of the majority of the Ways and Means Committee would be given any opportunity to offer an amendment to any portion of it, and that the rule would inevitably operate to commit the House in advance to the acceptance of a voluminous bill of enormous importance to the country, drafted in private, carrying excessive duties, and containing provisions not embraced, or thought of being embraced, in previous revisions of the tariff. The action of the party in control of the House in applying such a drastic rule to the proceeding signified that the House was willing to follow blindly the majority of the Ways and Means Committee and forego the performance in any substantial manner of its historic constitutional functions. The course pursued is but another evidence of the readiness of the House to abandon the high place which it was intended to hold in our legislative system. It blindly accepted the work of a minority of one of its committees, trusting to the Senate to rescue it and the country from the consequences of its own reckless action.

The prediction as to what would occur was realized. When at length the bill reached the House on the 21st of July from the Committee of the Whole, the only amendments that had been passed on were those relating to the five matters specified in the rule and a number of other amendments adopted at the suggestion of the Ways and Means Committee, which were mainly for the purpose of correcting formal errors and improving the phraseology of the bill. Had the right of amendment not been so sharply restricted, nothing can be more certain than that the bill would have been most materially altered before being brought to a final vote in the House, for it is full of rates and provisions that can not stand the test of criticism. For instance, it was claimed during the debate that the bill, should it become a law, would assist the agricultural interests. But what will farmers say about the duty on potash contained in the bill, which can not be enforced without greatly increasing the price of a fertilizer of which they make such extensive use? What will they say about the adjustment of duties on articles that enter into the construction and maintenance of highways, a matter in which they are immediately and vitally interested? When the duty on asphalt was under discussion in the Committee of the Whole I referred in the following language to the probable effect on highway work of certain of the contemplated duties:

As I understand it, not only may the cost of road construction be materially increased by a duty on asphalt but increased by the duties on explosives provided by this bill, by the duty on cement which the bill provides, and by the duties specified in the bill on structural steel and reinforcing steel. The matter of highway construction and maintenance is one of prime importance. In that work explosives are necessary. The Geological Survey states that the amount of stone annually quarried and crushed for road-building purposes and concrete road structures totals between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 tons, and that involves the use of explosives. It is estimated that approximately 20,000,000 barrels of cement are used in the construction of highways, including streets and bridges, every year. Steel, to the extent of a heavy annual tonnage, enters into the cost of all highway bridge structures. The facts as to the employment of asphalt in highway work have already been detailed.

What will the farmers and others, now paying transportation charges that are almost unbearable, think of the bill when they find that it increases the duties on a great number of articles that enter into the cost of maintaining and operating the transportation companies and lessens the prospect of freight rates being reduced? How will those who are concerned about the shortage of housing facilities, and who desire that the price of building material should be kept at a normal level, regard a bill that points to the imposition of a duty on lumber, in the event that Canada should think proper to maintain a duty on that article? Among the vast number of provisions of the bill which, under the special rule, could not be touched by amendment and had to be taken or rejected en bloc, and several of which I have just mentioned, there are scores of items that would have been eliminated or materially changed if they could have been brought to a separate vote, exactly as the embargo was stricken out when voted on separately, and the duties on crude and fuel oil and asphalt were stricken out when voted on separately. With reference to the proposed duties on hides and cotton which were voted on separately and rejected, it is enough to say that those who favored such duties in the belief that they might be of some benefit to the cotton grower and cattle raiser were in the end given to understand that no bill could be enacted carrying duties on hides and cotton without what are called compensatory duties being placed on leather, boots and shoes, and cotton fabrics. In other words, what might be given to the agriculturists with one hand was to be concurrently taken away with the other hand. With others, I voted for a duty on hides that would yield a substantial revenue and at the same time afford incidental encouragement to the cattle raisers; but I could not see the necessity or justice of so-called compensatory duties being conceded to the powerful and prosperous industries engaged in the manufacture and sale of boots and shoes and other products of leather.

From any point of view the bill, in my opinion, is utterly indefensible. In criticizing it, I have tried to lay aside party preconception or prejudice, and to look at the whole subject as a Representative who is primarily anxious, if it can be done, to disconnect the tariff, to some extent at least, from party politics, making it less the football of patisanship, and more a business matter to be dealt with in a business-like fashion. That this can be done may be a mere dream, but it has been the dream of many of the foremost thinkers in both of the great poltical parties, and unless in some way it can be translated into reality, then the country will be compelled to submit throughout the future to such periodical revisions of the tariff as the one now projected. It will always be a wholesale revision, engineered by one political party. It will never be a calm and impartial revision of individual schedules and individual duties and provisions made from time to time, not as called for by party platforms and exigencies, but in the interest of all of the people of the country. A less partisan and more business-like revision would not have the sanction of extreme protectionists who are willing to prevent imports and paralyze competition, or of those at the other extreme who take into account only the element of revenue and object to giving incidental encouragement to American producers, but it would have the approval of most reasonable people. There would be no novelty about such a consummation since it is understood that this is the only country where the fate of the tariff, and, therefore, the fate of nearly all business, in large degree, depends upon the fate of political parties.

I believe one step that could be safely and wisely taken would be to extend the authority of the Tariff Commission. The commission is now directed to investigate and ascertain all conditions pertaining to the tariff, and, at the request of the President or Congress, or the Ways and Means Committee of the House or the Finance Committee of the Senate, to furnish the facts ascertained; and that is practically the end of its authority. No one can consult the compilations of the Commission already mentioned without recognizing how wide has been the scope of its inquiries. Everyone who kept up with the debate recalls that prominent members of the Ways and Means Committee spoke of the great service rendered by the Commission in its codification of the customs laws and its assistance in phrasing the provisions of the bill. And nevertheless everyone will also recall that when they were asked whether the commission had made recommendations as to rates and provisions proposed to be incorporated in the bill, the answer was in the negative. Thus an expert body that, day by day, is examining tariff questions, is powerless to offer its opinions as to what should or should not be done by Congress. All others, including Government departments and agencies and the most deeply interested corporations and individuals, are free to speak, but the Tariff Commission must keep silent. Why, is difficult to understand. It is not easy to understand why, as it proceeds with its investigations, it should not give the country the definite benefit of what it finds, by submitting concrete recommendations. It is at least conceivable that a strong Tariff Commission composed of men selected as carefully, with regard to ability, character, and zeal, as the members of the Supreme Court, and authorized and required to unreservedly express its opinions, would be of invaluable assistance to Congress, and of corresponding advantage to the country. The advocates of such a departure entertain a strong hope that it would result in fairer duties, by removing or diminishing the influence of selfish interests; that it would tend to obviate the demand or necessity for wholesale revisions; that consequent on careful and patient study, it would lead to the substitution in large measure of specific rates for ad valorem rates, and thus eliminate an element of uncertainty in conducting our foreign trade; and that gradually the entire tariff situation would be stabilized, whereas it is now subject to sudden and complete change following any presidential election.

During the debate, in suggesting the view which I now reiterate, I said:

A gentleman a moment ago indorsed the proposition that the entire matter of revising or modifying tariff schedules or individual rates ought to receive better consideration than is possible under present methods. There are those who antagonize that view. There is in existence a Tariff Commission charged with the duty of exploring constantly the whole tariff situation, and yet there are influential gentlemen who for some reason are reluctant to allow that commission even to make a recommendation to Congress as to schedules or as to individual rates. Why should we not at some time—and there is no more favorable time than when we will be fresh from the unhappy experience of a general revision—so amend the statute as to untie the hands of the Tariff Commission and break its silence by authorizing the commission not only to ascertain facts by investigation but to make recommendations which conceivably might prove of great value or tend to make the tariff less a partisan question and have it dealt with more as an economic question, a business question? [Applause.]

There are bills now pending which provide for the enlargement of the power of the Tariff Commission, and their importance entitles them to early consideration. Should its power not be enlarged, perhaps further appropriations should be withheld and the commission abolished. If, however, its power should be enlarged, even only to the extent of allowing it to submit opinions and recommendations, the result might be so satisfactory as to warrant us in looking forward to the time when it should be entrusted with more important and comprehensive authority and enabled to render service of the very highest usefulness to the country.

OF

HON. WILLIAM S. VARE,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Speaker, the paramount need of a high protective tariff at this time to protect the American workingman and American industry against the influx of foreign products, manufactured by cheap foreign labor, is obvious.

It is with regret that I hear Members of this House, as few as the number may be, advocating the continuation of a tariff for revenue only. The low tariff or Democratic tariff has never been a success in the United States, and I might add that the world in general is fast coming to know that protection of home industries is essential for internal prosperity.

I have had occasion to look into the matter of tariff imposed by foreign nations since the Great War. Economic conditions have made radical revisions of the tariff necessary. Other nations have not waited until now to revise their schedules. The emergency tariff, which we passed at the beginning of this special session, has done much to relieve conditions, particularly in the farm sections. But a complete tariff bill on the statute books, with the passage of tax-revision legislation as soon as possible, will give the American manufacturer and business man the confidence which is needed to revive prosperity in the business world.

The Ways and Means Committee has made a thorough study of the problem, and as a whole the bill which we have before us is one which I believe will accomplish the end desired in the United States. It has for its object the three cardinal principles of protection, and that is, the protection of infant industries, the protection of home markets against competition of cheaper foreign labor, and the development of home industries to establish a military preparation in time of war.

While, as I have said, other countries are fast adopting the high-tariff system, the Republican Party has been the champion of the theory of protection ever since the Civil War. Even England is considering a high tariff act, known as the safeguarding of domestic industries act, now being debated in the House of Commons. In South America industries developed during the war are being protected by their Governments. In Argentina a 20 per cent horizontal increase in tariff has been adopted. In Chile even larger increases were ordered.

English colonies since the war have further increased their import duties. Australia has adopted a revised tariff and is now considering further measures to protect her own industries, to encourage the further development of industry, and to grant preference to Great Britain to aid that country in marketing its wares. British India has increased its tariff. In Canada the passage of our tariff bill is awaited before any further action is taken. The country has been promised, however, that its industries will be protected.

Like the United States, Japan has resorted to emergency measures, one passed July 27, 1920, and the other June 1, 1921. A permanent tariff measure will be passed later.

On December 1, 1920, Spain placed in effect a high tariff bill, ascribed officially to the desire of the Government to discourage the importation of nonessential goods, luxuries, and to protect Spanish industries. A further increase became effective May 21, 1921.

Belgium, conditionally a free-trade country, under the law of June 10, 1920, authorized increased protective duties, and on March 31, 1921, the limit of increase on original duties was raised as high as 600 per cent.

During the war the United States developed on a broad basis infant industries which we are now called upon to protect. Prior to the war the Democratic tariff failed to provide the necessary revenues to run the Government; and notwithstanding that the competitive producing nations of Europe were engaged in conflict, the industries of the United States for some time after the war in Europe started were faced with unfair European competition. This was caused by the existence of the Democratic "tariff for revenue only act," more commonly known as the Underwood-Simmons Act.

This act, as has been the case with all Democratic tariff acts, was not successful even in the eyes of its sponsors.

President Wilson, in his message to Congress September 4, after the Underwood Act had been on the statute books, asked that "additional revenue be provided for the Government." He gave as his reason for the request that "during the month of August there was, as compared with the corresponding month of last year, a falling off of $10,629,538 in revenue collected from customs." These figures do not represent a decrease of imports but a decrease in revenue, which meant that American labor was deprived of the advantage of just that much during the month of August, 1914, in its fight against the cheaper labor of foreign nations.

That the Underwood-Simmons Act was not a success was not new in Democratic tariff making. In his message to Congress in September, 1837, after the "sliding scale act" had failed to properly finance the Government, President Van Buren said: "I deeply regret that events have occurred which require me to ask your consideration of such serious topics." He then outlined the failure of that act.

President Buchanan, in his message to Congress nine months after the passage of the "progressive free trade act," declared, "We have possessed all the elements of material wealth in rich abundance, and yet, notwithstanding all these advantages, our country, in its monetary interests, is at the present moment in a deplorable condition."

The same was true of President Cleveland, who presented the most damning indictment of the ability of "tariff for revenue only" to support the Government, when, four months following his inauguration, he called Congress into special session saying, "The distrust and apprehension concerning the financial situation which pervades all business circles have already caused great loss and damage to our people and threatens to cripple our merchants, stop the wheels of manufacture, bring distress and privation to our farmers, and withhold from our workingman the wage of labor."

In all of these cases the Democratic Party promised the Nation lower living costs and prosperity. They found that the living costs did not fall, that the receipts of the Government did fall, and laborers, skilled and unskilled, in every trade were thrown out of employment.

The policy of the Democratic Party has been in vogue for eight years. During its first year of operation it was leading the industry of the Nation into chaos. The European war began and gradually removed from the American market the low-priced commodities which had been cared for by a protective tariff in the past. Europe is fast regaining its prewar production basis, and as soon as this production of European commodities reaches its prewar level the American markets will be flooded with manufactured goods.

We must be careful that we do not include in this bill noncompetitive raw materials, such as oil and lumber. The inclusion of either of these commodities in this bill would restrict the expansion of United States industry and reduce the supply in the United States to the point where we soon would be dependent upon other nations for these basic necessities.

Too much can not be said, however, concerning the need of actual protection for our industries, and I feel that the Fordney bill will care for American industries and the employees, whose standard of living must be maintained.

The Tariff Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JOHN Q. TILSON.

OF CONNECTICUT,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, July 21, 1921.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, the line of attack thus far adopted by those who find it necessary to oppose the pending tariff bill seems to be to call names and indulge in general abuse of the measure without specifying paragraphs or articles. In a bill containing several thousand different items adverse critics ought to be able to point out some that offend. In fact, a bill of particulars should be filed, so that each item may stand or fall on its own merits or demerits.

On the whole, the bill is a moderate, reasonable revision of the tariff schedules, with some increases and some decreases of rates as existing conditions may demand. I would call attention to the fact that the most notable increases and, in fact, the highest rates carried in the bill are some of those on certain products of the farm, mine, and quarry, and these are all results growing out of the war. The schedules covering manufactured articles especially have been revised with extreme care that rates be not increased beyond what has been heretofore found satisfactory, and these have not been increased, except in comparatively few cases, made necessary by unusual conditions.

Anyone challenging this statement should point out from the bill itself the facts to the contrary. It is not enough for the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] to say that the bill is a monstrosity. If his statement were accurate, his great ability would render easy the task of demonstrating its accuracy, but he is satisfied with a simple assertion, as if his saying so made it so.

The great New York newspapers, controlled by importing and international banking interests, such as the Times, the World, and the Evening Post, and their squeaking little echoes throughout the country, have been content to take up the cry and ring the changes upon it, calling it a monstrous bill, a vicious bill, a pernicious bill, or some other similar phrase, which is made to serve in lieu of argument or facts indicating even a perusal of the bill itself. It would be a safe bet that not one man in a thousand of those who have criticized has ever read the bill. Most of the critics have reminded us that the United States is now a creditor nation, as if this statement were sufficient to condemn any measure that imposes any duties whatever upon foreign imports. No critic, whether newspaper or otherwise, has attempted to explain how industry can prosper in this country if a large portion of its product is displaced in the American market by foreign-made goods. No well-informed person will deny that this condition prevails at this very hour in a number of industries. This tariff bill seeks to meet this condition in the only way that it has ever been successfully met since the first law on the subject was passed in 1789.

Until critics of the bill are able to propose a satisfactory remedy for the conditions actually existing, they should not be permitted to escape under a cloud of dust raised by their own blustering. Calling names will not answer for argument. There are those who will insist upon thinking for themselves after becoming acquainted with the facts. Such persons will not be content to accept the made-to-order opinions now being handed out by that portion of the press whose editorial policy is dominated by the advertising pages, but will insist upon knowing something about the bill itself. To such persons we turn with confidence as to what will be their mature judgment.

Those who find it necessary to denounce the bill and are unable to find fault with any specific paragraphs have pounced eagerly upon the American valuation feature. This is made easy by the fact that the proposed method of valuation is not generally understood. It is conceded that there is considerable difficulty in putting such a provision into operation. Secretary Hoover, a staunch advocate of the provision, frankly admits the difficulty, but with his usual firmness says it can be done. Of course it can be done. He goes further and says that it is the only practical way to meet a most difficult situation brought about by the world upheaval.

The method now used of foreign valuation is itself not free from difficulties. In fact it is so beset with difficulties that no effort is made to arrive at the true foreign valuation. Instead we accept the word of the foreigner and must rely entirely upon his honesty. Everyone well informed in regard to customs matters knows that the Treasury loses millions of revenue and American producers lose very largely the small rate of protection now provided by law through flagrant, persistent undervaluation of imported goods in order to evade customs duties.

American valuation means a fair valuation, made here where we have control of the customs officials and jurisdiction of the witnesses. Where there are standard prices well and generally known no troublesome questions can arise. In other cases our own officials can be relied upon to fix a fair, just, and reasonable valuation. Who has a right to ask for more or less? It will be objected to most strenuously by those who now profit most by the other method. "No man e'er felt the halter draw, with good opinion of the law," is a saying as true to-day as when it was written. In my judgment no honest man will be hurt by the adoption of this method. The rates in the bill have been fixed upon this basis and would be inadequate and illogical if this feature of the bill should be eliminated. No other method will serve the purpose under the disturbed and disjointed world conditions now prevailing.

HON. ROYAL C. JOHNSON,

OF SOUTH DAKOTA.

Friday, August 5, 1921.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with permission granted by unanimous consent of the House to extend my remarks in the RECORD and print the so-called "slacker list," I desire to call attention to a letter of Adjt. Gen. P. C. Harris, dated August 1, 1921.

It is my intention to insert these lists on the 5th day of each month until all of the names are printed. No good soldier will be injured by the publication of his name in these lists; but, on the contrary, if his military record is one to be proud of, the publication will only serve to call attention to that record. If by mistake the names of good soldiers have not been eliminated from the record, it will be my pleasure and duty to insert in the RECORD the facts in each individual case and to see that the facts are brought to the attention of the Secretary of War, who is as anxious as any soldier of the late war with Germany to have the records correct. Mistakes ought to be corrected while the men are living and while there is evidence to substantiate any valid claim as to service.

The letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,

The men whose names appear below and who were under the jurisdiction of the local boards named were, according to the public draft records, classified and reported by the draft authorities as deserters from the military service of the United States. The lists in which these names were originally included have been given at least one month's publicity.

The name of any man who since the publication of the lists has been found to have actually rendered service in either our own forces or in those of the Allies during the period between May 18, 1917, and November 11, 1918, is not included; nor is that of any man who, though he rendered no service during the period mentioned, has since the publication of his name been found to have been erroneously inducted or to have been erroneously certified as a deserter, nor that of any man who is known to be no longer living.

Every reasonable effort has been made by the War Department to eliminate from these lists names which for any of the aforementioned reasons should not appear thereon. Should it develop, however, that certain of the names listed below should for any of these reasons likewise be removed, notice to that effect will be published in each such case in a later issue of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

A Duty on Hides.

OF

HON. HORACE M. TOWNER,

OF IOWA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, July 15, 1921.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7456) to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage industries of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, it certainly is time we had a protective tariff in the United States. The failure of the present Democratic tariff both as a revenue producer and as a check on excessive importations is apparent. In 1911 the value of our imports was $1,527,000,000. On these imports we collected duties to the amount of over $309,000,000. The ad valorem rate was about 20 per cent, and about 50 per cent of our imports were admitted free. In 1920 our imports had risen to the enormous sum of $5,238,000,000, and on these imports our customs duties were only $322,000,000. Our imports had increased more than three times in amount, while our revenue therefrom was little more than in 1911. The average ad valorem rate under Republican tariffs was about 20 per cent, while under a Democratic tariff it has fallen to 6 per cent, and the percentage of imports admitted free has risen to over 65 per cent. If we had collected the 20 per cent rate on the imports of last year, our revenue would have been $1,047,000,000, instead of $322,000,000. An addition of $725,000,000 to our revenue would have solved some of the tax problems with which we are now confronted.

Nearly all the nations of the world have increased their tariff rates since the war except the United States. Our average tariff rate is lower than that of any other of the principal nations, so that we are now the leading free-trade Nation of the world. Great Britain has increased her rates to an average of 10 per cent as against ours of 5 per cent. Her revenue from her tariff last year was $600,000,000, or nearly twice our own. Canada has increased her rates to about 20 per cent ad valorem, which is more than three times our present rate. Japan's rate is about 18 per cent, or about the average rate under the Payne law. At that rate on last year's importations our customs revenue would be $900,000,000.

Under the proposed bill which we are now considering it is estimated that our revenue will be about $700,000,000 instead of $300,000,000. An increase of $400,000,000 in our revenue will help materially to reduce the present burden of taxation. If to that we can add five or six hundred millions annually due us on the war debt from foreign nations—and there is no good reason why this should not be done—we can relieve our people from much of the vexatious and business-hindering taxes they now carry. So much for the revenue-producing features of the bill under consideration.

The proposed bill will not only increase revenue, but will, we hope, protect American industry in every form and wherever located. It is not a manufacturers' bill nor a farmers' bill; it is an all-American bill. It is for the benefit of the South as well as the North, the West as well as the East.

A DUTY ON HIDES.

It has been a favorite argument, urged not only by free traders but also by American manufacturers who desired to secure their "raw material" as cheaply as possible, regardless of the welfare of American producers, that the farmers' finished products must be classed as "raw material."

Take hides, which we are now considering. It is strenuously urged by the leather and shoe men that no duty should be placed on hides, because hides are "raw material." But the hide of a 4-year-old steer is the farmers' finished product. It has taken four years of expense and labor to prepare it for market. The leather man dips it into a vat and in a little time and with less labor he produces a "finished product," which, however, the shoe man calls his "raw material."

Anything which man produces with labor is his "finished product," and there are no "raw materials," except natural products unchanged by human agencies.

The amendment now under consideration proposes a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem on hides. The present bill by its terms places hides on the free list, and the adoption of this amendment will restore them to the dutiable list with the same rate as was carried in the Dingley tariff law. Under the Dingley law the farmer made little complaint of the price he received for his hides. It was not excessive; it was fair and reasonable and bore a fair relation to the prices of other products. It is also interesting to remember that under that law the leather and shoe interests of the United States grew until they commanded the markets of the world.

The Dingley law was succeeded by the Payne law which placed hides on the free list, and this was continued under the Underwood law; so that hides are now on the free list, and this bill, if unamended, would compel them to remain on the free list.

RESULTS OF A FREE-TRADE POLICY.

Under the operation of the present law, both before and subsequent to the war, the producers of hides in the United States have been practically deprived of their market. Hides from other countries have been imported in such quantities and at such prices as to utterly destroy the American market. During 1920 the following were imported:

	Pounds.
Cattle hides	439,000,000
Calfskins	68,000,000
Buffalo hides	14,000,000
Other hides	277,000,000
Total	798,000,000

An average of over 36,000,000 pounds of cattle hides alone were imported every month of 1920. These hides, imported from Brazil, Argentina, Mexico, India, South Africa, and other countries, constituted about 45 per cent, or nearly one-half, of the hides manufactured into leather in the United States. In the meantime 2,000,000 hides were rotting on the ranches and farms because they would not sell for enough to pay the expense of removal, transportation, and marketing. In many places the price received for the hide would not pay for taking it from the carcass. Hides have sold on the market within the year at 4 cents per pound. July 11 hides sold on the market at Chicago for 8 cents. The local market has been for a year and is now in the Middle West 3 and 4 cents.

An average hide weighs about 50 pounds. In the local market at 3 cents it would bring $1.50; at 4 cents, $2; and in Chicago it would bring $4.

There are in the market two classes of hides—one known as packer's hides, the other as country hides. The packer's hides constitute about 65 per cent of the American production. They are worth on the market about 2 cents a pound more than country hides, because they are a better quality. Most packer's hides are tanned and marketed by the packers themselves. There are more than 350 packing establishments in the United States, all of which handle packer's hides, but the so-called Big Five handle the most of the product.

The country hides are produced and marketed by local butchers and individual ranchmen and farmers. Of the 34,000,000 hides disposed of in 1920, 12,000,000 were country hides. In order to bring the cost of production these hides should net the farmers $132,000,000. As it was, it is doubtful if the farmers realized more than $5 per hide, or $60,000,000 for their total production. This would mean a loss to them in one year's product of $72,000,000.

The packers can stand a low price for hides, for most of their product is not sold as hides but as leather, and leather has been kept at a price far greater in proportion than the market price of hides.

But the farmer can not stand it. He receives no benefit from the high price of leather or of shoes. As long as foreign importations are allowed to come in and compete with him in his home market he is powerless to resist its influence. As long as American manufacturers buy 40 or 45 out of every 100 hides from Mexico and Brazil and Argentina because they can buy them more cheaply than American farmers can produce them, our farmers are not only deprived of that much of the demand, but are forced to meet the cheaper foreign competition if they sell at all.

A duty is placed on the live steer, which, of course, includes the meat, the horns, the hoofs, and the hide. A duty is placed on dressed meat when it comes in separately. On what theory is it justifiable to demand that hides if brought in as such should be free of duty?

WOULD TARIFF INCREASE PRICE?

It is claimed by the leather and shoe manufacturers that a tariff on hides would not increase the price to the farmer. If it would not, they have nothing of which to complain. But if they would be compelled to pay more for the imported hides, they would be compelled to pay more for the home product, if, as is now the case, the imported product establishes the market price. They also claim that as most hides are sold with the live animal, they must be considered as only a by-product. But the hide is 15 per cent of the weight of the animal, and if the market price of hides per pound is greater than that of the animal, and it is most of the time and should be always, the purchaser would pay more in fair competition for the animal because of such increased price of the hide.

The basis of a protective tariff is to protect the American market for American producers against unfair foreign competition. American farmers claim that their market has been destroyed by foreign importations, and that they have been and are seriously injured thereby. They claim that those benefited thereby are the foreign importers and the manufacturers of leather and shoes.

There is no doubt free hides has helped the leather and shoe men. With free hides the tanning industry has grown, as they proudly claim, by "leaps and bounds." In 1909 their business had increased to $328,000,000, and in 1917 it totaled $750,000,000. Since then one company is reported to have increased its profits in two years' time 350 per cent. In the meantime its stock had increased in value from 44 cents to $15.52. This is not strange when it is reported they have bought hides at 6 cents a pound and sold leather at $1.50 per pound. An explanation is afforded by the statement made for them before the committee: "America has become the world's market for leather. This dominant position has been acquired through the timely abolition of duties on raw hides and undressed skins."

WILL DUTY INCREASE PRICE OF SHOES?

It is claimed that to impose a duty on hides will increase the price of shoes. It is sufficient answer to this to state that when the price of hides was lowest in our history the price of shoes was highest. There has been no increase in the price of hides reflected in the price of shoes, and there has been no decrease reflected in the price.

As everybody knows, the price of shoes was highest since the war, when the importation of foreign hides was greatest and the price of both the domestic and foreign product lowest. It would take seven 40-pound hides at 4 cents to buy one pair of good shoes now.

The hide of one animal will make the upper part of 42 pairs of shoes, and the entire hide is now selling at $4.40.

At most of the previous hearings the additional cost on a pair of shoes would be 3 cents per pair, if a 15 per cent duty was placed on hides. But if the 15 per cent duty would not add anything to the farmers' hides, how could it add anything to the price the tanners and shoe men pay?

Hides were placed on the free list so that harness and shoes would be cheaper. It was also claimed then, as now, that to remove the tariff on hides would not reduce the farmers' price. Neither claim has been sustained. On the contrary, the farmers' market has been destroyed by the importation of hides from countries such as Brazil, where cattle and hides can be produced at a profit for 3 cents per pound; and the American consumer has been compelled to pay the highest prices for shoes ever known before.

During the period the Dingley law was in operation, from 1898 to 1909, the importation of hides decreased 28,000,000 pounds per annum. So that a 15 per cent tariff on hides does reduce foreign importations.

In 1908, the last year under the Dingley tariff, the importation of hides was 92,000,000 pounds; in 1909, first free year, 192,000,000 pounds; in 1914, 279,000,000 pounds; in 1916, 434,000,000 pounds; in 1920, 798,000,000 pounds.

What the American farmer believes he has a right to ask Congress, especially a Republican Congress, is that the American market for his products shall not be taken from him by foreign importations. He believes that he has a right to ask that he be protected from the disastrous assaults of foreign competition. He is the more free to ask this when it is demonstrated that the great body of the American consuming public will not be in the least injured by such action.

HON. JOHN W. SUMMERS,

OF WASHINGTON,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 11, 1921.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, discussion of pending legislation with our constituents and by our constituents, in my opinion, should be encouraged.

I am therefore inserting this letter, which I trust may be accepted as a personal message by my friends.

The letter is as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 8, 1921.

MY DEAR FRIEND: Your discussion of farm problems interests me deeply. Our agricultural folks constitute about one-half of our population, and farm products equal in value the combined output of our mines and factories.

My district is preeminently an agricultural section. Whitman County will produce this year more wheat than any other county in the United States, while Walla Walla County will rank very high in per acre production. Yakima County will produce more apples than any other county in all the world.

Fifty-five thousand carloads of farm products from Kittitas, Yakima, and Benton Counties will roll to the markets of every continent during the next 12 months. Picture if you will a freight train 400 miles long, and every car marked "Yakima Valley products."

As you know, I was born and raised on a farm, and for many years have been a fruit and wheat grower in the Walla Walla Valley, so believe I am able to appreciate the farmers' viewpoint.

Our problem in the State of Washington is not production but is transportation and markets. The railroads, in my opinion, are cutting their own heads off by the almost prohibitive rates they are levying upon our shippers. The problem is complicated, but it is at least gratifying to note that their high officials are voluntarily reducing their own salaries.

The plan to ship our products by water will, no doubt, have a very wholesome effect on the railroads, and, I believe, will save money for the shippers. If Panama Canal tolls are lifted from our own coastwise traffic, that will further encourage water transportation and reduce carrying charges.

While the tariff bill, which is meant to protect our home markets and ease up the tax burden, will not suit everybody—tariff bills never do suit everybody—there is no question but what it has been very carefully prepared. A thousand witnesses from every section of the United States appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of 21 members, during the six months the committee was writing the bill. The measure covers 10,000 articles that are produced on American farms and in American factories. It is estimated to yield $500,000,000 annually in import duties.

The tax revision bill is now being prepared. My plea has been that taxes be reduced, and that the law be simplified so the average man can make his own report and figure his own income taxes. I now have some assurance that both these objects will be accomplished.

While we are all agreed that taxes should be reduced, we find the demands of the people are constantly increasing. Everybody is willing that some other section of the United States should curtail their demands. For example, an eastern farm paper now before me seriously objects to what it calls our "crazy irrigation program, which only increases overproduction." We of the West believe that money expended for the development of our dry lands is a good investment that should at all times be encouraged. The East would find no objection to money spent, for instance, to improve Boston or New York Harbors. Federal aid for road building meets the approval of nearly all sections of the country; however a few Eastern States object to the Federal-aid road-building program.

The care of our disabled ex-service men, at a cost of $460,000,000 annually, is a proper expenditure to which no one will object, and we can not overlook the fact that the World War has added a billion dollars a year to our tax burden for interest alone. Many other large expenditures necessarily follow the war.

Congress's biggest job is to cut down appropriations. The 10 Cabinet officers once a year submit in minutest detail a statement showing the amounts necessary to carry on the work of their respective departments during the next year. The Appropriations Committees of Congress and then the Congress take these estimates in hand and invariably reduce them by many millions of dollars. The estimate submitted by the Secretary of Agriculture is usually cut but little. The Army and Navy bills were cut this year hundreds of millions of dollars.

In fact, Congress has given the various departments, or Cabinet heads, $1,428,214,512.77 less than they demanded for running expenses next year. I mention this in detail to show you that instead of Congress boosting expenditures it is the constant effort of Congress to reduce expenditures.

Regardless of news stories and popular impressions to the contrary, a bill which appropriates money is, generally speaking, the most difficult measure to get through Congress; otherwise our irrigation projects, the Bremerton Navy Yard, and the proposed aviation base at Seattle would fare better.

While this special session of Congress was called especially to revise tariff and tax laws, I must remind you that we have passed many other important measures.

During this special session Congress passed and the President signed the farmers' emergency tariff bill; we revived the War Finance Corporation at the urgent request of the agricultural and business interests of the country; we have just enacted a law authorizing that $25,000,000 of Federal funds be deposited with the Federal Farm Loan Board to enable the board to function more successfully and meet the farmers' demands for loans more promptly; we have passed the meat packers' bill and the antigrain gambling bill through the House and no doubt both will soon become laws. Farm credits and foreign markets for American farm products are receiving consideration at this time.

The Sheppard-Towner maternity and infancy bill, which has for its object the conservation of the lives of mothers and infants, has passed the Senate and no doubt will pass the House at an early date.

Among the many other bills of importance that have been considered during this special session of Congress, we have again passed the budget bill, which was vetoed during the last administration. The budget law is a piece of constructive legislation that looks to better business methods in all departments of the Government and undoubtedly will save dollars for every taxpayer in America.

Your attention is being directed to some of the problems we are already trying to solve in order that I may ask you and your friends for such specific suggestions on pending or prospective legislation as concerns our people and the State of Washington.

My ambition is to faithfully represent all of the people and every legitimate industry of our district. In order to do this I solicit at all times thoughtful discussion of National and State problems.

Trusting I may hear from you from time to time, I remain,

Very sincerely,

JOHN W. SUMMERS.

The Colorado River.

OF

HON. EDWARD T. TAYLOR,

OF COLORADO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Wednesday, June 1, 1921,

On House resolution (H. J. Res. 32) to change the name of the Grand River in Colorado and Utah to the Colorado River.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, for the past 35 years my home has been and is now in the beautiful little city of Glenwood Springs, Colo., on the banks of what has heretofore been called the Grand River, the principal tributary and, in fact, the main stream of the Colorado River, and during all those years I have always hoped and believed that sometime the State pride of the sons and daughters of our beloved Commonwealth would bring about the change of the name of that stream to its rightful name, as the source and principal part of that wonderful river, and permit our citizens to fondly and proudly welcome the greatest river in our State as our great State's stream under the name that is dearest to every Coloradan heart. And with the passage of this resolution that hope of many years, not only of my own but thousands of other Coloradans, will be consummated.

For the general information of the House and to refresh our memories of the geography of the southwestern portion of our country, I will give a little description of the Colorado River and its two main tributaries.

DESCRIPTION OF RIVERS.

The main stream of the Colorado River from its mouth in the Gulf of California, in Old Mexico, up to the junction of the Grand and the Green Rivers, in the southeastern portion of the State of Utah, is in length a little over 1,000 miles. The junction of those two streams is only about 50 miles on an air line west of the boundary of Colorado; but along the course of the Grand River in Utah the distance is about 80 miles, and from the State line up the Grand River to its source in Grand County, in the northern central portion of the State of Colorado, the distance is about 350 miles.

The Green River rises in the Wind River Mountains in the west-central portion of Wyoming and comes down through the southern part of that State, runs about 35 miles through northwestern Colorado and receives a very large per cent of its flow from the Yampa River in Colorado and also from the White River just outside of Colorado, and runs thence southerly through a portion of eastern Utah to the junction with the Grand River. The Green River is much longer than the Grand, the same as the Missouri River is much longer than the Mississippi River above the mouth of the Missouri; but the Grand River is very much larger than the Green, carrying some 25 per cent more water, and is in reality the main stream of the Colorado River.

The flow of the Colorado River in recent years ranges from about 5,000 cubic feet per second in January to 150,000 cubic feet in June, and its average annual run-off is about 17,000,000 acre-feet.

Western Colorado is only a little more than one-tenth in area of the entire drainage basin of the Colorado River, which is 244,000 square miles, yet 20 counties in my congressional district furnish nearly 60 per cent of all the gigantic and terrific floods that the Colorado River pours into the Gulf of California, while the Green River, aside from its Colorado tributaries, furnishes only about 15 per cent of that total flow; and yet, from a very self-evident lack of definite information, some writers have in the early days assumed that the Green River was the main stream simply because it is longer than the Grand. And some later writers, without examining the facts, have repeated and echoed those early erroneous statements. Western Colorado was largely the Ute Indian Reservation and was an utter "terra incognito" until within very recent years, while nearly all western explorers and trappers were quite familiar with the Green River. It is a comparatively small stream in Wyoming, and everyone crossed and recrossed and floated on it with crude rafts with perfect safety, and they often referred to it as the extension of the Colorado River.

But I infer from nearly all the records I have been able to examine that most of such references to the Green River were made by men who knew little or nothing whatever personally about the size or character of the Grand River. If any of them had ever attempted in the spring or summer to cross the Grand River at any place within 200 miles of its junction with the Green they never would have reported their expedition. It is one of the most swift, deep, dangerous, and treacherous rivers anywhere in this country. The chairman of our board of county commissioners, and also the road overseer of my own home county, and quite a number of other people were at different times and places drowned in that river within the past year. And none of them were trying to cross it. They accidentally fell into the edge of it and were swept down. No one who ever lived to cross the Grand River at the same time of the year that he had crossed the Green would ever report that the Green was the main stream. The actual facts are absolutely against any such contention. Aside from the Gila River, it is the western slope of Colorado that furnishes the main part of the water of the Colorado River, and comparatively little of it comes from either Wyoming or Utah.

The actual official measurements and ratings which I will submit definitely and conclusively determine the comparative size and importance of these two streams.

NAMING OF RIVERS.

But, aside from the local and physical aspect of these three rivers, I desire to refer to them briefly historically.

The histories of the West tell us that the first white man who ever saw the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River was Don Lopez de Cardenas, a Spanish explorer, in January, 1540. But history generally accords the credit of the discovery of the great Rio Colorado of the West to Hernando de Alarcon, another Spanish explorer, on August 26, 1540. The river was given or known by various names from that time until about 300 years ago, when it was named the Rio Colorado of the West, and has been known as the Colorado River ever since before the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth Rock in 1620. It is also assumed in our histories that the river was naturally given the name of "Colorado" from its mouth in the Gulf of California to its source, wherever that might be. The early explorers never knew where the river arose. In fact, very little was known about the Colorado River above the extreme lower part of it for nearly 300 years after its discovery. It was about the year 1776—the year of the Declaration of Independence—that the two main forks were discovered by other explorers and known to be the sources of the Colorado, and were then given various other names from that time on until about a hundred years ago, when they first became locally and rather intermittently called the Grand and Green Rivers, and have been generally so known for the past 75 to 100 years.

TREATY WITH MEXICO.

At the time of the negotiations of the treaty between the United States and Mexico, after the Mexican War, by which all of that southwestern country was ceded to the United States under the terms of the "Treaty Guadalupe-Hidalgo," including practically all of the drainage basin of the Colorado River which, as will be shown on the map, included the western portions of New Mexico and Colorado and parts of Wyoming and all of Utah, Nevada, California, and Arizona, section 6 of that treaty provided that the Colorado River should be free to navigation from the Gulf of California up through old Mexico and into the United States; and the courts have ever since held, in accordance with that treaty, that the lower portion of the Colorado River is navigable. As a matter of fact, it is not only navigable by international treaty, but it is navigable in fact, and has at various times been used quite extensively for navigation purposes from the gulf up the river approximately 400 miles. So that the Colorado River is an international stream, and also a navigable stream, and has been so recognized ever since the proclamation of that treaty on the 4th of July, 1848.

NAMING OF COLORADO.

When the bill providing for the original creation of the Territory of Colorado was before the Thirty-sixth Congress, it passed the House providing for the naming of our present State "The Territory of Idaho." But in the debate over in the Senate, the Senate amended the bill and struck out the name "Idaho" and christened our present State "The Territory of Colorado," as they then expressly stated:

For the reason that the Colorado River arose in its mountains, and there was a peculiar fitness in the name—

the name "Colorado" is more appropriate and more harmonious * * * and is the handsomest name that could be given any Territory or State.

Those statements were made on the floor of the United States Senate on February 4, 1861, and every loyal son and daughter of Colorado, wherever they may be, have heartily and enthusiastically approved of and applauded that sentiment from that day to this; and there has always been a real, genuine, patriotic, and sincere regret among a large per cent of the people of my State that that great river—the largest, grandest, and most interesting river in Colorado—did not bear the name of Colorado, as it should, clear up to its source in Grand County, in the northern central portion of our State.

It has always seemed a strange and anomalous situation that our great State should be named for one of the greatest rivers in the world that arises and flows hundreds of miles within our borders, and that the river should bear the name of our State from its mouth clear up nearly to the border of the State and then be called by some other name within our State; especially a name that does not have any particular meaning to our State. It is a meaningless misnomer. It has always seemed an absurd situation. It is absurd for one part of any stream to be given one name and the rest of the stream another name. We have in Colorado no State pride in the name "Grand." That name is merely an adjective, and does not mean anything but large or great, and might be applied to any large or beautiful stream. Practically everything in Colorado is grand, and as applied to a river it is a very commonplace name. It has no historical or special signification, while, on the other hand, the magic word "Colorado" does have a very great and affectionate significance to every civilized human being on this planet. It is not only one of the most beautiful and charming words of the English language, and the handsomest name that could be given to any Territory or State, and for the past 100 years that wonderful name has attracted thousands of nature lovers of all nations to one of the greatest and most unique and scenic rivers in the world, with a marvelously interesting and weird history, but even much more than all that, for the past 60 years "Colorado" has meant the heart of the Golden West, the actual top of the world, the land of sunshine, good health, and gorgeous scenery, the summer playground of the Nation, the Switzerland of America, the bright jewel set in the crest of this continent, where it shines as the Kohinoor of all the gems of this Union; the sublime Centennial State.

Colorado is the fascinating mecca toward which many millions of afflicted humanity are to-day hopefully, longingly, and prayerfully looking. And I can not appreciate how any thoughtful American citizen—especially any loyal Coloradan, with red blood in his veins, could try to deprive our magnificent State of our unquestionable right to the historic name of that great international river that arises in the Rocky Mountain National Park, on the highest ridge of the Continental Divide of this Nation, in the glaciers and eternal snowbanks on top of some of the highest peaks in this country, at an elevation of over 14,000 feet, and madly rolls, whirls, and pitches 10,000 feet down hundreds of canyons, cataracts, and gorges, and flows then majestically through the valleys of western Colorado for nearly 400 miles within our borders; and every ripple is a murmer of rebuke to this long denial of its birthright to the name "Colorado."

As the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON], who very kindly reported this bill from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, has said, this House joint resolution 32 is practically identical with House joint resolution 460, which I introduced in the Sixty-sixth Congress.

STATE LEGISLATION.

If you will pardon a personal reference and permit me to digress a moment, I will say that about 15 years ago I prepared and introduced a bill similar to this in the Colorado State Legislature, when I was a member of that body, providing for the change of the name of the Grand River to the Colorado River. But, owing to matters that were largely aside from the merits of the measure, and because it was entirely novel at that time and public sentiment had never considered the subject, I was unable to pass the bill through the legislature, and I temporarily discontinued my efforts in that direction for several years thereafter.

I am not cognizant that anyone before or since that time, until recently, has ever undertaken to pass a bill of that kind through our Colorado Legislature. However, I am delighted to say that last winter the Rotary Club in the city of Grand Junction, Colo., the largest city in my congressional district and situated on this river, took this subject up in a very vigorous and energetic manner, and State Senator Ollie E. Bannister, of that city, did me the honor of taking from the files at the State capitol a copy of my former bill and introduced it in the Twenty-third General Assembly, and so diligently followed it up that he passed the bill through the Colorado Legislature at its recent session, and it was signed and approved by the governor of Colorado on the 24th of March of this year, and is now a law of the State of Colorado, and the name of that stream is by that law officially changed from the name of the Grand to the name of Colorado River within the borders of the State of Colorado. But, of course, that State law is only applicable within the border of our State and still leaves a portion of that stream in the State of Utah officially called the Grand River.

I may also say that I took this matter up with the governor of the State of Utah, and with former Congressman Welling, and the present Congressman COLTON, from that section of Utah, and they all expressed their approval of this measure. But it was not taken up in the Legislature of Utah until just shortly before it adjourned, and they did not have time to act upon it, and the legislature of that State will not convene again for two years.

I presume if the Legislature of Utah will take the same action that Colorado took, that for all practical purposes that would be sufficient. However, I should say that I had the former chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee submit my former resolution (H. J. Res. 460) to the Secretary of the Interior for his report, and the Secretary reported that owing to the fact of the Colorado River being an international stream and navigable, and also an interstate stream, and the Grand River itself being an interstate stream, it would be more appropriate for this change to be made by an act of Congress; especially in view of there being such large appropriations of water from the Colorado River by the Government in various States for irrigation purposes and water-power purposes and other Federal matters affected more or less in many details by the change. So that I am earnestly in hopes that the House and Senate will pass this resolution and that the change may meet with the approval of our President.

I will insert as a part of my remarks a copy of the Colorado law and also a copy of the report of the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of War and of the Geological Survey.

[Senate bill No. 79. By Senator Bannister.]

A bill for an act concerning the change of the name of the Grand River to the Colorado River.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

SECTION 1. That the name of the Grand River in Colorado is hereby changed to the Colorado River, by which name said river shall hereafter be known from its source to where it crosses the western boundary of the State of Colorado.

SEC. 2. The change of the name of said river shall in no wise affect the rights of this State, or of any county, municipality, corporation, association, or person; and all laws, records, surveys, maps, and other public or private documents of every kind and nature in which the said river is mentioned or referred to under or by the name of the Grand River shall hereafter refer to the same river and with the same purport and effect under and by the name of the Colorado River.

REPORT OF THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, February 2, 1921.

Hon. JOHN J. ESCH,
Chairman Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. ESCH: I am in receipt of your letter of January 28, 1921, inclosing copy of H. J. Res. 460, "To change the name of the Grand River, in Colorado and Utah, to the Colorado River," and asking for an expression of opinion as to the jurisdiction of Congress to enact such a bill, whether it would be more appropriate for the State or Congress to consider such a measure, and whether there are any precedents for the action proposed.

In reply I have to advise you that the Grand River is an interstate stream, rising in and traversing the State of Colorado, passing through a part of the State of Utah, and forming, in conjunction with the Green River, the Colorado River, which, after passing through or forming the boundaries of a number of States, enters the Republic of Mexico and empties into the Gulf of California.

As you are aware, under the Constitution and decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the jurisdiction of Congress over navigable rivers in matters relating to navigation and fisheries is defined, and while the question is open to some discussion, it is contended that this jurisdiction extends not only to the navigable portion of a stream but to the upper or nonnavigable portion which feeds the main stream. Whether this be true or not, it is clear that Congress would have this jurisdiction not only over streams now actually navigable in fact, but over those portions which can be made navigable by dams or other public works. Then, too, Congress has consistently exercised jurisdiction over interstate matters, such as interstate railroads, power lines, etc.

I do not believe that the changing of the name of an interstate stream should be left to State legislatures, and am of opinion, therefore, that such a measure as this should be considered by Congress, because of the interstate character of the stream, and because water appropriations, power appropriations, county boundaries, and numerous Federal, State, and county records now designate the stream as Grand River. It would be less confusing and would obviate legal questions if the change is specifically authorized by congressional action.

The only thing in the nature of a congressional precedent which I have been able to find is a joint resolution approved June 19, 1852 (vol. 10, p. 147, U. S. Stat. L.), wherein the name of a river in the Territory of Minnesota, theretofore known as St. Peters, was changed to the Minnesota River.

If Congress shall deem it advisable to enact the measure, this department has no objection to interpose thereto.

JOHN BARTON PAYNE, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
February 1, 1921.

Respectfully returned to the chairman Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, House of Representatives.

So far as the interests committed to this department are concerned, I do not know of any objection to the favorable consideration by Congress of the accompanying bill, House joint resolution 460, present session, to change the name of the Grand River, in Colorado and Utah, to the Colorado River.

W. R. WILLIAMS,
Assistant Secretary of War.

REPORT OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY,
Washington, February 16, 1921.

Hon. E. T. TAYLOR,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. TAYLOR: In response to your oral request, I am sending you a statement of the history of the naming of the Colorado, Grand, and Green Rivers, and a statement of the history of naming the State of Colorado. I have also included a tabulation of the comparative stream flow records of these three rivers and a record of precedents in changing the name of a river by congressional action.

This material (with the exception of the stream flow records) has been compiled by Mr. James C. McCormick, who is a member of the United States Geographic Board.

I will send a number of copies of this material to Hon. John J. Esch, in response to a request from him for copies to be used by his committee.

Yours, very cordially,

GEO. OTIS SMITH, Director.

THE NAMING OF COLORADO RIVER.

Exploration northward from New Spain was stimulated by the wonderful reports of Alvar Nuñez Cabeza de Vaca in 1546 and of Friar Marcos de Niza (of Nice) in 1539. De Vaca, one of the survivors of the Narvaez expedition, which met disaster on the Gulf of Mexico coast, after six years of wandering across the continent, through Texas, Chihuahua, and Sonora, reached Culiacán in Sinaloa, at that time the northernmost settlement on the Gulf of California coast. Fray Marcos, sent out by the Viceroy Antonio de Mendoza, by an overland journey reached the Zuñi pueblos in New Mexico, which he called the Seven Cities of Cíbola. (Hodge, F. W., Spanish Explorers in the Southern United States, 1528–1843, pp. 3–8, 12–126, 275, 290–291, 1907.)

In 1539 Cortez, the conqueror, sent Francisco de Ulla from Acapulco with three vessels to explore the Pacific coast to the northward. Ulla explored the Gulf of California to its head and the outer coast of the peninsula nearly to 30° north. He proved Lower California a peninsula and noted appearances which led him to believe that a great river entered the head of the gulf, though he did not see it. (H. H. Bancroft's Works, vol. 15, pp. 78–82, 1884; Hakluyt's Voyages, Goldsmid edition, vol. 3, pp. 317–377, 1891.) In 1540 Viceroy Mendoza sent out the Coronado expedition, in the course of which (1540–1542) the pueblo country of New Mexico and Arizona and the Great Plains as far northeast as central Kansas were explored; Colorado River and Grand Canyon were discovered; and the lower Colorado River was explored. (Winship, "The Coronado Expedition, 1540–1542," 14th Ann. Rept. Bu. Am. Ethnology, Part 1, pp. 341–344, 385, 395, 403, etc., 1896.)

The Coronado expedition, assembled and organized at Compostela on the Pacific coast near latitude 21°, started north February 23, 1540, with Francisco Vazquez Coronado, captain general, in command. A stop was made at Culiacán, the most northerly settlement. On April 22, 1540, Coronado left Culiacán, and marched across country to the upper Sonora River, where he established a base at or near the site of the present town of Sonora.

Leaving Melchior Diaz in command at Sonora, the army, under Coronado, with Fra Marcos de Niza as guide, started from that place May 26 and, marching northeast, arrived at Cibola (Zuni) July 7. (Winship, op. cit., pp. 386–389.)

In the meantime Mendoza had sent two vessels in command of Hernando de Alarcón up the Gulf of California to cooperate with the land expedition. Leaving Acapulco on May 9, Alarcón was to follow the coast as closely as possible, get in touch with the army, carry heavy baggage, and render any assistance that Coronado should desire. He explored the coast as directed and reached the mouth of Colorado River August 26 without having seen anything of the army. With the assistance of the Indians he made two ascents of the river in boats, reaching a point some 25 miles above the mouth of Williams River. To the Colorado he gave the name of Rio de Buena Gula (good guide). Of this he says in his report to Mendoza that in departing up this river the second time he ordered those on the ships to build a chapel on shore in honor of Nuestra Señora de Buena Gula, and that they should call this river the Rio de Buena Guia "because that is your lordship's device." (Winship, op. cit., pp. 403–406; Hakluyt, op. cit., vol. 4, p. 33.)

At the end of September the same year, 1540, Melchior Diaz with 25 men left Sonora for the coast to look for the vessels under Alarcón. He traveled slowly up the coast to the mouth of the Colorado River and northward along the east bank of the river. The weather was cold, and the Spaniards observed that the Indians carried burning sticks with which to warm themselves. This custom suggested the name which they gave to the river, Rio del Tizon (firebrand). Diaz found a letter which Alarcón had buried at the foot of a tree near the river mouth. He ascended the river by the east bank, 35 miles above the Gila; crossed the river and made a five days' journey into the desert to the west; returned to the west bank, which he followed to the mouth; and thence 30 miles down the west coast of the gulf. Here he died, January 8, 1541, from an accidental wound received 20 days before. (Winship, op. cit., pp. 406–407, 485–486, 501–502, 574.)

Meanwhile Coronado at Zuni was exploring and conquering in all directions. July 15 he sent a party under Pedro de Tobar to discover Tusayan (Moqui). This party returned the middle of August and reported that at Moqui they had heard rumors of a great river beyond. Garcia Lopez de Cardenas, with about 12 men, was sent to find this river. Cardenas started about August 25 and was authorized to make a journey of 80 days. He went to Moqui, and from there, in a journey of 20 days, discovered the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, but failed in his attempts to descend to the river or to discover a crossing. Thus, in September or October, 1540, the Grand Canyon was discovered, and about the same time or soon afterwards the river there was correctly identified with the Rio del Tizon of Melchior Diaz. (Winship, op. cit., pp. 390, 489–490, 574–575.)

The Coronado expedition had proved disappointing, and no other expedition is known to have entered New Mexico until the Rodriguez expedition of 1581. This party went by way of the Rio Conchos and Rio Grande to the pueblos about Socorro and Bernalillo, visited Zuni to the west, and the buffalo plains to the east beyond the Pecos, and left missionaries in the Bernalillo region. The reports of this expedition renewed the enthusiasm for northern exploration and plans were formulated for the conquering and settling of New Mexico.

The contract for the conquest and settlement was finally awarded in 1595 to Juan de Onate, who was made governor, adelantado, and captain general of the Province of New Mexico. In 1598, Onate reached the Santa Fe region with an army and a colony of 400 men, of whom 130 had their families. Onate ruled New Mexico until 1605. By 1605 he and his subordinates had reexplored practically all the ground covered by Coronado and opened new trails. In 1604 he made a journey from San Gabriel, his headquarters near Santa Fe, to the head of the Gulf of California. He went by way of Zuni, Moqui, and Williams River to the Colorado and down the east bank of that river to the gulf. Crossing the Colorado Chiquito, or little Colorado "10 leagues" southwest of Moqui, he named it "Rio Colorado * * * because the water is nearly red" (Bolton, E. B., Spanish Explorations in the Southwest 1542–1706, p. 269, 1916). Be it noted that the name "Colorado" is here given for the first time, not to the Colorado River but to one of its branches, the Little Colorado. To the Colorado itself, Onate gave the name "Rio Grande de Buena Esperanza" (good hope). (Bolton, op. cit., p. 271; H. H. Bancroft's Works, vol. 17, p. 155, 1889.)

At some indefinite time during the next hundred years the name Colorado was transferred from the Little Colorado to the main river, and before the end of the century had been pretty well established. Father Kino, the great Piman apostle, 1683–1711, uses the name freely, as he does the alternative name Rio del Norte; and he even bestows upon it a new name, Rio de los Apostoles. On his map, compiled in 1701, he letters the River Rio Colorado, "o (or) del Norte." He insists over and over again that it "is the true and real Rio del Norte of the ancients." To see the point of this it is necessary to recall that in Kino's time and for a hundred years before, the Rio del Norte was the Rio Grande above El Paso. (Bolton, H. E., Kino's Historical Memoir or Pimeria Alta by Father Eusibio Francisco Kino, vol. 1, map frontispiece, pp. 242, 249, 251–253, 258, 305, 310, 316, 322, 348; vol. 2, pp. 243, 244, 253.)

A revolt of the Pueblo Indians in 1680 resulted in the entire evacuation of New Mexico by the Spaniards until its reconquest by Vergas in 1692–1694, when most of the missions were reestablished also. San Diego, the first of the California missions, was established in 1769; and in the next 30 years 17 others had been established, dotting the coast from San Diego to San Francisco Bay. From the establishment of San Diego onward the missionaries and the traders were equally eager to discover the most direct and feasible route from Santa Fe to California.

Father Silvestre Velez de Escalante, then stationed at the Zuni mission, spent eight days at Moqui in June, 1775, trying to discover whether there was an Indian trail across the Grand Canyon. He failed to extract any information from the Indians, and concluded that the canyon was impassable. In a letter on the subject written to Father Garces August 18, 1775, he called the river or the canyon Rio Grande de los Cosninos. The Cosnina (Havasupai) Indians were settled on Cataract Creek. He also mentioned a Rio de los Misterios which Garces asserts is Colorado River. (Harris, Dean W. R., The Catholic Church in Utah [Escalante's Diary and Travels], pp. 96–98, 1909; Coues, Elliott, On the Trail of a Spanish Pioneer, Garces Diary, 1775–76, vol. 2, p. 366, 1900.) The next year, 1776, Garces himself traveled from Mohave to Moqui, and went into the Grand Canyon at the bend below the Little Colorado on June 26. He named the canyon Puerto de Bucareli (Bucareli's Pass) in honor of the then viceroy (Coues, op. cit., p. 348).

In 1776 Father Escalante and Father Francisco Atanasio Dominguez, with a small party, made a route from Sante Fe to San Diego. They left Santa Fe July 29 and arrived back in Santa Fe January 2, 1777. They went northwest and north by way of the valley of the rivers Chama, San Juan, Dolores, and Uncompahgre, crossed Gunnison and Grand Rivers above their junction, and still in Colorado, the White River. Turning west between White and Yampa Rivers, they crossed Green River, went up the valley of Duchesne River and across the mountains to Utah Lake. From here traveling south they passed to the east of Sevier Lake, up the valley of Beaver River in Utah and down the valley of Virgin River in Arizona. From the Virgin they returned to Santa Fe, crossing the Colorado near the Utah-Arizona boundary.

When crossing Green River Escalante wrote: "It (the San Buenaventura or Green River) forms a junction with the San Clemente (White River) but we do not know if it does so with other rivers previously mentioned"—namely, the Grand, Gunnison, Dolores, etc. (Harris, op. cit., pp. 164–165.) But near the end of his journey after fording the Colorado (the Rio Grande de los Cosninos) northwest of Moqui, he is satisfied "that the rivers Navajo (San Juan) and Dolores flow into it here, as do all the other rivers mentioned in this journal." (Harris, op. cit., p. 226.) This seems certainly to include the Green as well as the Grand; but the map makers overlooked it; and though properly connecting the Grand River drainage with the Colorado, the upper Green River, called Buenaventura, with its branches down to and including the San Clemente (White River) they carried off into the Pacific Ocean. It was not until about 1830 that the map makers began to show the true relations, even in the most general way. The northern limit of Kino's map, 1705 (reproduced in Bolton, op. cit.) is Moqui; and Father Font's map, 1777, of Garces explorations (reproduced by Coues, op. cit.) stops short of the junction of Green and Grand Rivers.

The various names bestowed on Colorado River are given below in chronological order:

Date.	Name.	By whom named.
1540	Rio de Buena Guia	Alarcón.
1540	Rio del Tizon	Diaz.
Unknown	Rio del Norte	Unknown.
1605	Rio Grande de Buena Esperanza	Oñate.
1605	Rio Colorado, given to Little Colorado	Do.
Unknown	Rio Colorado, transferred to Colorado	Unknown.
1697	Rio de los Martires	Kino.
1775	Rio Grande de los Cosninos (Grand Canyon)	Escalante.
1776	Puerto de Bucareli (Grand Canyon)	Garces.

The following forms have also been much used: Rio Colorado del Norte; Rio Colorado del Occidente; Rio Colorado of the West.

THE NAMING OF GRAND RIVER.

Grand River, both above and below its junction with Gunnison River, was named Rio San Rafael by Fathers Dominguez and Escalante in 1776. To the south branch, the present Gunnison River, they gave the name Rio San Javier (Xavier) and reported the Ute Indian name as Tomichi. In this area Pike's maps, 1805–1807, like other early maps, are difficult to interpret. His "Rio de los Animas" (las Animas) is much more like Grand River than his "Rio San Rafael." In 1843 Fremont lettered it Grand River, as did Capt. Stansbury in 1849.

But for long years the maps showed great diversity of nomenclature. Below its junction with the Gunnison, this river was usually called Grand River, rarely Rio Colorado or Grand, and even Colorado. Above the junction it was called Grand, Bunkara (Cf. Nah-un-kah-rea below), Blue, and North Fork of Grand River. Gunnison River was named variously Eagle, Eagle Tail, South Fork of Grand, Grande, and Grand River.

The maps in Pacific Railroad Reports, Volume II, 1861, carry the name Grand River up the branch which is now Gunnison River, and call the north branch, from the mouth of the Gunnison to its source in Middle Park, Blue River. In 1853 Capt. Gunnison led an exploring expedition down the river which now bears his name and westward to Sevier Lake in Utah, where he was killed by Indians. Lieut. Beckwith, who wrote the report of the expedition, and consistently called this branch Grand River, says (Pac. Railroad Repts. 2, 50, 1855): "Grand River * * * joins the Nah-un-kah-rea or Blue River of the Indians and mountain men, which rises in the Middle Park and is erroneously called Grand River on some of the most correct maps." Later on (p. 57) the expedition fords Blue River just above the junction, "the volume of water being twice that of Grand River."

In after years Capt. Gunnison's name became gradually fixed on the branch which he explored, and the name Grand on the north or main branch, while the name Blue River now describes a small south branch of the latter in Summit County, Colo.

THE NAMING OF GREEN RIVER.

Green River was called Rio de San Buenaventura by Dominguez and Escalante in 1776, and Escalante says (Diario, Sept. 17, 1776), that it was so named in 1763 by Fr. Alonso de Posada. Thinking that it flowed to the west the map makers represented it as crossing the Great Basin and flowing into the Pacific Ocean. Thus it was that the River Buenaventura became the famous "ghost river," which for years haunted the maps of the far West. Pike, 1805–1807, mapped it with headwaters in the position of upper Green River, having an affluent, Rio de San Clemente (Escalante's name for White River, an east branch of the Green River), and flowing southwest into Sevier Lake (nameless), Green River (lower) including part of the upper Colorado, the letters "Rio Zanguananos." This, one of the names of Green River used before and after Pike, was written variously Zaguananos, Saguaguanas, Akanaquint, etc.

Before 1811, however, upper Green River was known to be connected with the Colorado. The Astorians called it both Spanish River and Colorado River. Irving's Astoria says that it was named Spanish River by the hunters, and Chittenden (History of the Fur Trade, 2, 779) cites the Missouri Gazette of May 15, 1813, as showing that the Astorians called it Colorado or Spanish River. It was called Rio Colorado by Jedediah S. Smith in 1824 and Rio Colorado of the West by William H. Ashley in 1825 (Ashley's Narrative in Dale, Ashley-Smith Explorations, 151, 155, 157, 1918). Bonneville, 1837, lettered it Colorado of the West on his map of the territory west of the Rocky Mountains, and Fremont (Narrative, Aug. 16, 1843) records that he had often heard Green River called Rio Colorado by Indians.

Escalante, 1776, having crossed Gunnison and Grand Rivers above their junction, and having crossed Green River between the White and the Yampa, wrote: "This river of San Buenaventura (Green River) is the largest that we have crossed." (Harris, the Catholic Church in Utah, p. 164, 1909.) The Green River is larger than the Grand and is the upper continuation of the Colorado. (Maj. Powell, Exploration of the Colorado River of the West and its Tributaries, 1869–1872, Smithsonian Institution, p. 3, 1875.) "Of the tributaries of the Colorado," says Chittenden (Hist. of the Fur Trade, 2, 779, 1902), "the Green River, which is really the main stream, is the largest." And again (same page), "For a time the name (Colorado) applied to the whole river, but now only to that portion below the junction of the Green and Grand." On the other hand, the following data supplied by the Water Resources Branch of the United States Geological Survey shows that Grand River carries the greater volume of water:

	Green River.	Grand River.	Colorado River.
Length along course.	700 miles	423 miles	1,000 miles (below junction).

[1] 92 per cent of total area. [2] Moab station, drainage area, 24,300 square miles.

NOTE.—Only four years of comparative records available; other yearly records are incomplete.

In his narrative, August 16, 1843, Fremont says that 25 years before, Green River was familiarly known to the hunters and traders by the Crow Indian name Seeds-ke-dee-agie (Prairie Hen River). This name Seedskedee River, was in use before 1826, for in that year the above-mentioned J. S. Smith, coming upon Colorado River below the Grand Canyon, identified it with Green River by naming it "Seedskeeder" (Dale, Op. cit. 189, 190). This name, with others, seems to have been in common use down to 1840.

The name Green River dates at least as far back as 1824, Dale (Op. cit., 156) refers to a news item in the Missouri Intelligencer, June 25, 1825, of a party leaving Santa Cruz in November, 1824, to trap on "Green River." Fremont says (Nar. Aug. 16, 1843), that the Spaniards, contrasting "Its timbered shores and green wooded islands with its dry sandy plains," named it Rio Verde (Green River); Bancroft (History of Utah, 21, 1889), speaks of an employee of Ashley's, "Mr. Green who gave his name to Green River"; and Chittenden advances the theory (Op. cit. 2, 779) that the name may have been suggested by the color of the water.

THE NAMING OF THE STATE OF COLORADO.

The act of Congress providing for the organization of the Territory of Colorado was approved February 28, 1861. As introduced and as passed by the House, the bill named the proposed new organization the Territory of Idaho—"Idaho" having been selected from many names proposed. In the Senate, on motion of Senator Wilson of Massachusetts, the name of the Territory was amended by striking out "Idaho" and inserting "Colorado." "This was done at the suggestion of Delegate Williams, for the reason that the Colorado River arose in its mountains, hence there was a peculiar fitness in the name." (Frank Hall, History of Colorado, 1, 258, 1889.) Bancroft, however (History of Nevada, Colorado, and Wyoming, p. 413, 1890), says that "The name Colorado was given to it at the suggestion of the man (William Gilpin) selected for its first governor"; and he quotes from a manuscript of Gilpin's as follows: "Some wanted it called Jefferson, some Arcadia. I said the people have to a great extent named the States after the great rivers of the country, and the great feature of that country is the great Colorado River. 'Ah,' said he (Wilson of Massachusetts), 'that is it'; and he named it Colorado."

I may say that during all of these years that I have been trying to bring about this change I have had the loyal support of the Colorado State Historical Society, and I will insert their report on the subject, as follows:

Resolution adopted by the Colorado Historical Society.

Whereas there is now pending in the House of Representatives of Congress a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 460, Taylor) to change the name of the Grand River in Colorado and Utah to Colorado River; and

Whereas the so-called Grand River is in reality and by official measurement the main stream and upper continuation of the Colorado River and the main source of water supply of said Colorado River; and

Whereas the State of Colorado, through its streams which furnish the water supply of the Colorado River, such as the Grand, San Juan, Yamba, and White Rivers, furnishes approximately 60 per cent of the entire volume or run-off of the said Colorado River; and

Whereas the change in name of the Grand to the Colorado River in no way detracts from the reputation of any other State and is a distinction to which the State of Colorado is entitled as the main source of the Colorado River; and, further, for the reason that it identifies this State with a great river bearing the same name, which State received its Territorial name of Colorado for the reason that "the Colorado River arose in its mountains, hence a peculiar fitness in its name" (excerpt from the Congressional Globe, Feb. 4, 1861, vol. 31, pt. 2, 36th Cong., 2d sess., pp. 729 and 766): Therefore be it

Resolved by the Board of Directors of the State Historical and Natural History Society of Colorado, That it approves and recommends the passage of H. J. Res. 460, by Congressman TAYLOR, now pending in Congress.

[SEAL.]

DR. WM. N. BEGGS,
President.
ELMER A. KENYON,
Secretary.

Resolution adopted at a meeting of the board February 7, 1921.

DATA PERTAINING TO THE COLORADO RIVER.

In further support of the foregoing resolution of the Colorado Historical and Natural History Society, Prof. Ellsworth Bethel, the director and curator, suggests the following data pertaining to the Colorado River and reasons for changing the name of the Grand River to Colorado River:

The Grand River is the main stream or continuation of the Colorado River, as shown by its discharge or run-off at the confluence of the Grand and Green, being normally nearly 30 per cent greater than that of the Green. (It should be noted that the Green has 35 miles of its course in Colorado and receives more than a third of its water through the Yampa and White Rivers, situated in Colorado.)

The Grand River furnishes more than 40 per cent of all the water of the Colorado River.

The Colorado River receives nearly 60 per cent of all its water from the State of Colorado through the Grand, San Juan, Yampa, White, and other rivers.

It will be observed that the Green River, though longer than the Grand, drains a region of arid plains, and if the water of the Yampa, White, and other rivers supplying water from Colorado be deducted it would have a drainage of only about one-third of that of the Grand.

The followfng records of run-off of rivers is an average of all records up to and including 1914:

	Acre-feet.
Colorado River at Yuma	17,000,000
Grand River at its mouth	6,720,000
Green River at its mouth	5,480,000
Tributaries of the Green (water derived from Colorado):
Yampa River at its mouth	1,000,000
White River at its mouth	500,000
Tributary of the Colorado River (water chiefly from Colorado): San Juan River at its mouth	2,400,000

The foregoing data are from Water Supply Paper 395. Papers Nos. 409 and 439 give the discharge for 1915 and 1916, and show even larger percentages in favor of the Grand River.

The people of this State are anxious to have the Colorado River identified with this State, since it bears the same name. It is a distinction to which we think we are entitled, aside from any reason of sentiment. Grand is a rather commonplace name, applicable to any beautiful stream. We already have one river by this name, the Rio Grande (Spanish for Grand River).

The people residing along the Grand River, I am told, are very enthusiastic for this change, and it is favored by the State Historical and Natural History Society, the Colorado Mountain Club, the Sons of Colorado, and many other patriotic organizations as well as a large number of prominent men, such as ex-Gov. E. M. Ammons, Hon. Thomas F. Dawson, president of the Sons of Colorado, and others.

The 80 miles of the Grand River in Utah will still retain the name until the Legislature of Utah takes action, or it is changed by Congressman TAYLOR'S bill or by the United States Geographic Board. The change in no way detracts from any other State.

ELLSWORTH BETHEL,
State Museum, Denver, Colo.

I may also add that I had the support of all of the cities and towns and business organizations along the line of this stream in western Colorado, and, in fact, the measure has the unanimous approval of the citizens of our State, and the bill was passed by our State legislature unanimously by both the senate and house.

The only precedence I have been able to find for this legislation in the entire history of our Government was a resolution similar to this passed by Congress in 1852, which changed the name of a river in the then Territory of Minnesota. The river had for many years been known as St. Peter's River, and the pioneers of that region concluded that St. Peter had little or nothing to do with that river, so they had a resolution introduced and passed through Congress changing the name of it to the Minnesota River, and they have every since been proud of the river as a great State stream.

Both that resolution and this one carry out the sentiment that is quite prevalent throughout this country, in that some 18 of the 48 States in this Union have been named after rivers and a large number of rivers have been named after States.

We feel in Colorado that our State has an absolute right to this name. It is a matter of sentiment with our people; it is a pride of the Centennial State. I have been working nearly all my life for Colorado, and this is one of the many hopes that has been dear to my heart all of these years.

The Colorado River takes its name from the bright, red-colored standstone formation of the bluffs along the Colorado River throughout a large portion of its length and also from the very reddish color of the water of the stream after heavy rains and cloudbursts among the red standstone hills, which gives the waters of the stream a very reddish appearance, often for weeks at a time.

As you all know, the Colorado River is by far the most picturesque, scenic, unique, marvelous, and famous river in the world. It is the Nile of America. Travelers from every nation of the earth visit that stream, especially the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, every year; and there are, I presume, a hundred volumes written about it. But no tongue or pen can ever adequately describe the sublime and awe-inspiring grandeur of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

The Colorado River, from its source in the Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado to the Gulf of California, is the greatest natural museum and living laboratory in the world. It vividly presents the most varied, realistic, sublime, and awe-inspiring example of the workings of nature, which Secretary Lane says, "Tells the history of the making of the continent, where the primal forces may yet be seen in action."

What State would not be proud to bear the name of Colorado and have its largest river bear the same name? No wonder the friends of the then proposed Territory of Arizona tried in Congress to take the name from us and give it to that Territory. No wonder the United States Senate 60 years ago approved the sentiment that it was the handsomest name that could be given to any Territory or State.

The Colorado River has no rival in the world. It is the giant of the Rockies. It bears a message from the prehistoric past. The entire river is a marvel of magic and mystery. All nations will some day make their pilgrimage to the sublimest marvel of nature's revelation on this planet, as shown in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. It is a weird, fascinating, moving, imperial tragedy of nature. It certainly is the waterway of the gods, and that canyon is the Titan of chasm. Incomparably the greatest abyss on earth. It is the sublimest vision ever offered to the human eye. The wonder that dwarfs all other wonders of the world. That canyon itself is the most instructive exposition of geology in the world. Verily here nature hath done her uttermost. It has been pronounced the greatest thing on earth, in height and depth, and in its wonderfulness of shapes and colors. The reason its water in the lower portion of the river is always muddy is because it has washed down that canyon 13 miles wide and 6,000 feet deep and 217 miles long. It is the muddiest stream I ever saw down near its mouth. The river carries a solid cubic mile of rock every century, besides a world of surface soil and vegetable matter.

Water is the master sculptor of the world and sand is the effective working tool of nature in our mountain streams.

The waters of a hundred roaring mountain rivers unite to form the Colorado River. That river falls 14,000 feet from its source on the backbone of this continent, and as it dashes down to the sea its waters are always ladened with rock, sand, and other débris, which for millions of years has been constantly cutting deeper and deeper into the rocks through which it runs until their sides are now towering cliffs of solid rock.

Geologists tell us that it has required 40,000,000 years to form the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and that during all of that time this earth has been inhabited by man. A description of the origin of the Grand Canyon and the geological workings of the Colorado River from the top of this hemisphere to the Gulf of California reads like a weird, gigantic, and superhuman fairy tale.

The whole mass of the Alps Mountains could be put into the 600 miles of this abysmal chasm of the Colorado River without filling it up.

It is a crying shame that any American should be deprived of seeing this greatest abyss on earth, nature's masterpiece upon this planet.

One eloquent writer has closed his description of the Colorado River with the exclamation:

This living death!
This tragedy divine!
This woe and chaos sublime!
This masterpiece of Heat, water, and time!

Let me say to each of you members of this committee that if you have never visited that canyon and rode down the Bright Angel Trail on a mule your education and knowledge of American scenery will never be anywhere near complete until you do.

As you go down Jacob's Ladder and the Devil's Corkscrew on the Bright Angel Trail you will have many grave apprehensions that you are liable to be a bright angel any minute. But you will not. A misstep of the mule you are riding would drop you straight down 1,000 feet and into eternity long before you and the mule stopped rolling. While the mule will very often nonchalantly step within three-quarters of an inch of instant death, yet he does not care to fall into the abyss himself, so you will be spared, and this trip to nature's picture gallery of weird and mysterious grandeur will be one of the most charming and never-to-be-forgotten episodes in your life.

Joint resolution to change the name of the Grand River in Colorado and Utah to the Colorado River.

Whereas the Colorado River, which traverses or forms the boundaries of the States of Utah, Arizona, Nevada, and California, is formed by the junction of the Grand and Green Rivers, in the State of Utah; and

Whereas the Colorado River was discovered in the year 1540 and was given various names until about 1620, when it was definitely named the Rio Colorado of the West, and has ever since been known throughout the world as the Colorado River; while the two main forks of the Colorado River were not discovered until about the year 1776 and were given some 8 or 10 different names during the following 50 years, when they finally became generally known as the Grand and Green Rivers; and

Whereas the so-called Grand River is and always has been in reality and by official measurement the main stream and principal source of water supply of the said Colorado River, and historically and for every other reason should have been originally named and ever since known as the Colorado River throughout its entire length from its source in the Rocky Mountain National Park in the State of Colorado to its confluence with the Green River in Utah, and thence to its mouth in the Gulf of California: and

Whereas by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1861, providing for the organization of the Territory of Colorado, the Territory was named Colorado "for the reason that the Colorado River arose in its mountains and there was a peculiar fitness in the name," and also because "the name Colorado is more appropriate and more harmonious and is the handsomest name that could be given to any Territory or State" (Congressional Globe, Feb. 4, 1861, vol. 31, pt. 2, 36th Cong., 2d sess., pp. 729 and 766, and Hall's History of Colorado, vol. 1, p. 258); and

Whereas the Legislature of the State of Colorado by unanimous vote of both the senate and house of representatives of the twenty-third general assembly, has recently passed the following bill:

"A bill concerning the change of the name of the Grand River to the Colorado River.

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado, That the name of the Grand River in Colorado is hereby changed to the Colorado River, by which name said river shall hereafter be known, from its source to where it crosses the western boundary of the State of Colorado.

"SEC. 2. The change of the name of said river shall in nowise affect the rights of this State, or of any county, municipality, corporation, association, or person; and all laws, records, surveys, maps, and other public or private documents of every kind and nature in which the said river is mentioned or referred to under or by the name of the Grand River shall hereafter refer to the same river and with the same purport and effect under and by the name of the Colorado River"; which act was approved by the governor and became a law of that State on March 24, 1921: Therefore be it.

Resolved, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the river heretofore known as the Grand River, from its source in the Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado to the point where it joins the Green River in the State of Utah and forms the Colorado River, shall be known and designated on the public records as the Colorado River.

SEC. 2. That the change in the name of said river shall in nowise affect the rights of the State of Colorado, the State of Utah, or of any county, municipality, corporation, association, or person; and all records, surveys, maps, and public documents of the United States in which said river is mentioned or referred to under the name of the Grand River shall be held to refer to the said river under and by the name of the Colorado River.

PRECEDENT FOR CHANGING NAMES OF RIVERS BY CONGRESSIONAL ACTION.

[Joint resolution, Thirty-second Congress, first session.]

Resolved, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the river in the Territory of Minnesota heretofore known as the St. Peters shall be known and designated on the public records as the Minnesota River.

Approved, June 19, 1852 (U. S. Stat. L., vol. 10, p. 147).

THE COLORADO RIVER MADE NAVIGABLE BY TREATY.

The treaty of peace, friendship, limits, and settlement between the United States of America and the Mexican Republic known as the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, which was concluded between our country and Mexico on February 2, 1848, and duly ratified by both countries and proclaimed on July 4, 1848, provides, in article 6, as follows:

"That vessels and citizens of the United States shall in all times have a free and uninterrupted passage by the Gulf of California and by the River Colorado, below its confluence with the Gila, to and from their possessions situated north of the boundary lines defined in a preceding article, it being understood that this passage is to be by navigating the Gulf of California and the River Colorado, and not by land without the express consent of the Mexican Government."

Afterwards, at the time of the negotiation of the Gadsden Purchase from Mexico, we negotiated another treaty, entitled "A treaty of boundary, cession of territory, transit of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, etc.," known as the Gadsden treaty, which was concluded December 30, 1853, and proclaimed June 30, 1854. By that treaty the boundary lines were changed between the United States and Mexico, and as a result of that change article 4 of the Gadsden treaty provides as follows:

"The provisions of the sixth and seventh articles of the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo having been rendered nugatory for the most part by cession of territory granted in the first article, are hereby abrogated and annulled, and the provision as herein expressed substituted therefor: The vessels and citizens of the United States shall, in all times, have free and uninterrupted passage to the Gulf of California, to and from their possessions situated north of the boundary line of the two countries, it being understood that this passage is to be by navigating the Gulf of California and the River Colorado, and not by land, without the express consent of the Mexican Government; and precisely the same provision, stipulation, and restriction, in all respects, are hereby agreed upon and adopted and shall be scrupulously observed and enforced by the two contracting Governments in reference to the Rio Colorado so far and for such distance as the middle of that river is made their common boundary line by the first article of this treaty."

That provision of that treaty is still in full force and effect, and has been respected by the two Governments ever since. And there are a large number of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States construing and enforcing those provisions of that treaty. As everyone knows, a solemn treaty between two Governments is, next to the Constitution, the highest law of the land.

The Colorado River is not only navigable in fact but it is expressly made navigable by an international treaty, and has been recognized as such by both nations for 73 years; and even the Congress of the United States can not pass a law declaring that river not to be navigable, at least in so far as concerns the portion of it affected by that treaty.

LETTER SUBMITTED BY THE COLORADO MOUNTAIN CLUB.

THE COLORADO MOUNTAIN CLUB,
Denver, Colo., February 12, 1921.

Hon. EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. TAYLOR: The board of directors of the Colorado Mountain Club yesterday most heartily indorsed your bill for changing the name of the Grand River to the Colorado. It is a good move, and we hope you can put it across.

Our secretary will write you more in detail, but I thought I would drop you a line at once to advise you of our action.

Sincerely, GEO. R. HARVEY, Jr., President.

THE HIGH PEAKS OF COLORADO.

[A list gathered from the latest available authorities of the named mountain summits in this State exceeding 14,000 feet in altitude. Compiled for the Colorado Mountain Club by Ellsworth Bethel and James Grafton Rogers.]

Colorado is the mountain State of the Union. Of the 55 named peaks of the United States (exclusive of Alaska) which exceed 14,000 feet in height, Colorado has 42, California 12, and Washington 1. There are probably at least 5 more peaks of this altitude in Colorado which remain unnamed. It is estimated that one-seventh of the State stands above 10,000 feet in altitude, that it contains at least 350 peaks above 11,000 feet, 220 above 12,000 feet, 150 above 13,000 feet, and 47 above 14,000 feet.

The highest peak in the United States proper is Mount Whitney, Calif. (altitude 14,501 feet). According to the records of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, Mount Elbert, Colo., ranks second (altitude 14,419.6 feet); Mount Rainier, Wash., ranks third (altitude 14,408 feet); and Mount Massive, Colo., ranks fourth (altitude 14,404 feet). According to the records of the United States Geological Survey, Mount Rainier ranks second and Mount Elbert and Mount Massive rank third and fourth, respectively, both having the same altitude, 14,402 feet. Blanca Peak, Colo. (altitude 14,390 feet), ranks fifth in the United States.

In the following table the first column gives the name of the mountain, the second column the altitude of the peak above sea level, the third column the survey or other authority from which the figure is derived, the fourth column the mountain range to which the peak belongs, and the fifth the county in which it lies. In the third column the letters U. S. C. & G. S. signify that the figure is fixed by the records of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. U. S. G. S. indicates the records of the United States Geological Survey; Colo. G. S., that it is taken from the Colorado Geological Survey; Hayden, that it is derived from the Hayden survey of Colorado; and C. A. C., from work done by Prof. L. G. Carpenter and students of the Colorado Agricultural College. Pikes Peak and Longs Peak were determined by checked spirit leveling and are probably correct within 1 foot. Those credited to the United States Geological Survey were determined by vertical angulation and are probably correct within 10 feet, while those credited to Hayden and Wheeler were determined many years ago by mercurial barometer and may be in error as much as 100 feet.

Recent determinations have reduced the elevations of Mount of the Holy Cross and Buckskin Mountain so they no longer belong in this list. The name Crestone supplants Three Tetons, and Mount Wilson has been adopted in the place of Glacier Mountain.

Mount Evans, Longs Peak, and Pikes Peak are visible from Denver; Grays Peak and Torreys Peak can also be seen from some parts of the city. Pikes Peak is visible from Pueblo and Colorado Springs.

The British Budget.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS
OF
HON. C. WILLIAM RAMSEYER,
OF IOWA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 16, 1921.

Mr. RAMSEYER. Mr. Speaker, I have before me the speech of the Right Hon. A. Chamberlain on making the financial statement, April 25, 1921, in the British House of Commons. In the back part of the pamphlet containing this speech is an itemized statement of the revenue and expenditure for the fiscal year 1920-21, and the estimate of the revenue and expenditure for the fiscal year 1921-22. The fiscal year of Great Britain commences on the 1st day of April and ends on the 31st day of March following. I am sure it will be of interest to Members to have before them these two statements to compare them with the revenue and expenditure of our own Government while we are considering the revenue bill. While making such comparison, Members should bear in mind that the national wealth of Great Britain is less than one-third the national wealth of the United States. The statements as they appear in the speech of the Right Hon. A. Chamberlain give the revenue and expenditure in pounds. The statements that I insert in the RECORD give the pounds as they appear in the speech of Mr. Chamberlain and the equivalent thereof in dollars at the normal rate of exchange. The revenue and expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1921, are as follows:

Revising the Revenue Laws.

They say it is proposed to repeal the excess-profits tax. Splendid achievement! Every unconscionable profiteer will sing "Hallelujah" and light bonfires in celebration of the event.

But what will the long-suffering American consumers say? Is it not likely that they will ask why you do not abolish the odious system of permitting excess profits which exacts high tribute from every household in America?

Why concern yourselves about the tax? Is it not clear, even to a blind man, that the tax will automatically repeal itself when the unfair excess profits cease? It is up to the profiteer. Let him stop making excess profits and he will not have to worry to pay the tax.

HON. ANTHONY J. GRIFFIN,

OF NEW YORK,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 13, 1921.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, the present revenue bill, devised hurriedly to raise revenue to pay the unparalleled expenditures of the war, has many objectionable and harassing features. It needs revision badly. The American people will welcome in proportion to the degree that it alleviates the existing intolerable conditions. Rumors are abroad that the new revenue bill will not contain much to benefit the consumers. I presume, as a Democrat, I ought not to be very much upset at the prospect of the majority party digging its own political grave by making a muddle of the taxation problem. I can not, however, take so partisan a view of my obligations as a Representative in Congress. I would disdain to take pleasure in the thought that the taxpayers of the land ought to suffer in order to be taught a lesson. They have suffered enough. I would like to see partisanship forgotten. The times are too serious to draw party lines. The task of meeting the fearful problem of devising a wise system of raising revenue should have the cooperation of all men who love their country.

Before the bill comes out of committee, or before the majority members hold their proposed conference on Monday, I desire to lay before the House my views on one phase of the proposed measure.

They say it is proposed to repeal the excess-profits tax. Splendid achievement! Every unconscionable profiteer will sing "Hallelujah" and light bonfires in celebration of the event.

But what will the long-suffering American consumers say? Is is not likely that they will ask why you do not abolish the unfair system of permitting excess profits which exacts high tribute from every household in America?

Why concern yourselves about the tax? Is it not clear, even to a blind man, that the tax will automatically repeal itself when the odious excess profits cease? It is up to the profiteer. Let him stop making excess profits and he will not have to worry to pay the tax.

Let me put the situation in the form of a primer on taxation:

Q. What is the excess-profits tax?—A. A tax on excess profits.

Q. What are excess profits?—A. Profits in excess of a reasonable return on capital invested.

Q. Are excess profits conscionable?—A. The practice of gouging excess (or unreasonable) profits out of the people in the stress of war has always been considered as highly reprehensible and as even unpatriotic.

Q. Was this largely the reason for the imposition of the excess-profits tax?—A. It was.

Q. Is there any reason for continuing the making of excess profits?—A. None whatever, except inherent greed.

Q. Would we stop the making of excess profits by repealing the tax?—A. We would not. The same spirit of greed which prompted their exaction in the first place would continue with unabated force.

Q. Is there any guarantee that if the excess-profits tax is repealed the profiteers will reduce prices to the consumer?—A. None whatever, except their propaganda arguments, which are far from being promises.

The March, 1920, Bulletin of the New York Chamber of Commerce contains the following admission:

> The detrimental and deadening effect of the heavy taxes on incomes and the profit taxes is now generally recognized. Such exactions from the larger incomes, both individual and corporate, result in the absorption by Government of that portion of the income of the country's industry which would naturally be annually added to capital.

Of course, we did not need this to learn what the corporations will do with the margin of excess profits left to them after the repeal of the excess-profits tax. We know they will add this margin to their capital, because that is what they have been doing right along.

For instance, the Standard Oil of Indiana has increased its capital from $1,000,000 to $30,000,000. Many of the branches of the Standard Oil Co. throughout the United States have surpluses far in excess of their permitted capital waiting for the opportunity—the propitious moment—to increase their capitalization. The Atlantic Refining Co. has increased its capital from $5,000,000 to $50,000,000. The Continental Oil Co. has raised its capital from $3,000,000 to $18,000,000.

Of course, all these increases in capital simply mean turning the surplus and excess profits into the capitalization, followed by a general distribution of the increased stock among the conspirators.

For instance, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has a capital of $98,338,382 and a surplus of about $500,000,000.

Senator CALDER, in his statement based on his congressional committee's report, says:

> The coal consumers of the United States during the year 1920 were looted to the extent of over $1,500,000,000 in excess profits.

That is correct. "Loot" is the word. Excess profits are simply "loot" and nothing more.

I hope, therefore, that the Ways and Means Committee will halt before it carries out its rumored plan to repeal the excess-profits tax—a tax that is a burden only to the profiteer—and devise instead some plan of putting an end to profiteering.

APPENDIX.

EXTRACTS FROM MY SPEECH IN THE HOUSE ON APRIL 27, 1920, ON WAR AND EXCESS PROFITS.

STOP THE EXCESS PROFITS.

What, then, are we to do? Obviously there is only one thing to do, and that is put a stop to the making of excess profits. It is not the tax that hurts. That only adds a little more to the burden of the consumers. The thing that really oppresses is the excess profit itself. For what the Government has got out of it by increasing the rate of taxation has been and will be very small, indeed, in proportion to the gross sums exacted from the people by this vicious system of profiteering which has now become a confirmed habit.

The excess-profits tax was not devised primarily as a means of raising revenue. It was intended only as a stabilizer to equalize the profits or, rather, proportion them commensurate to the expense of production in the various war industries. Another example of a worthy weapon turned to a wicked use.

GROWTH OF MILLIONAIRES.

In 1914 there were 2,348 millionaires in the United States. In 1917 there were 6,664, an increase of 4,316 in three years.

In one of President Wilson's utterances he said that a man who would make a profit out of this war would be eternally disgraced. Then, according to that, there are 4,316 men in the United States to-day who are eternally disgraced.

There was one single man in the United States who earned in the year 1917 a net income of $34,936,604. There was one man who earned $5,794,559.

There were 8 whose net incomes were over $4,000,000 and their aggregate net income was $37,000,000; there were 5 whose net incomes were over $3,000,000 and their aggregate net income was over $16,000,000; there were 24 whose net income was over $2,000,000 and whose aggregate net income was $58,000,000; there were 33 whose net incomes were between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000; and there were 67 people in the United States whose aggregate net income was $80,413,549, who had net incomes between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 each. Those having net incomes between $500,000 and $1,000,000 were 315, and their aggregate net income was $214,000,000. In other words, there are 460 persons, less than a battalion of fighting men, in the United States whose net income was $520,835,914.

CORPORATION PROFITS.

There were 232,079 corporations in the United States, which reported gross incomes of $79,540,004,981.

From this they claimed deductions of $68,809,644,680, and only paid taxes on a net income of $10,730,360,211. This is an example of how the staggering war profits of the profiteers "disappeared" when the taxgatherer came around.

On this amount they only paid war taxes and excess-profits taxes of $2,142,445,769, or less than 20 per cent of their net income.

You will note that manufacturing corporations led the procession in gross incomes. The Treasury report shows that this class of corporations reported a gross income of $40,437,716,989. Their net income was about one-sixth—or so they reported—and they paid a total tax of $1,326,960,480.

Wholesale and retail trade corporations came next in the gross amount of income reported. For them the figures show $19,804,255,613, but after making the deductions claimed their total net income was only $1,481,060,780, and on this they paid taxes aggregating $324,847,386.

Most of the corporations paid an average tax amounting to about 20 per cent of their net income. Transportation and utilities corporations, finance corporations, and foreign corporations only paid an average of 0.09 of their net incomes as taxes.

The Inheritance Tax.

"Of all forms of taxation this seems the wisest."—Andrew Carnegie.

OF
HON. C. WILLIAM RAMSEYER,
OF IOWA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, August 16, 1921.

Mr. RAMSEYER. Mr. Speaker, on July 25, 1921, I introduced H. R. 7910, a bill to amend title 4 of the revenue act of 1918. This is the estate tax title. The provisions of my bill, if enacted into law, would greatly increase the revenue of the Federal Government derived from estates. According to the estimates of the Treasury we will derive from that source during this fiscal year $150,000,000. I wish to compare, in the first place, the amount we collect by our estate tax law with what Great Britain and France, respectively, collect from the same source. The national wealth of each of these three countries, according to the Statistical Abstract of the United States for 1920, conservatively estimated, is as follows:

United States	$250, 000, 000, 000
Great Britain	80, 000, 000, 000
France	70, 000, 000, 000

ESTATE TAX OF GREAT BRITAIN.

During the last fiscal year Great Britain collected from estates £47,729,000, or, based on normal exchange, $231,962,940. Our national wealth is at least three times that of Great Britain. If we would collect from this source at the same rate as Great Britain does we would realize from our estate tax $695,888,720 annually, more than four times the estimate for this fiscal year.

ESTATE TAX OF FRANCE.

France last year collected from the estate tax and the tax on donations, 927,294,000 francs, or, based on normal exchange, $179,160,743. The national wealth of the United States is more than three and one-half times that of France. If we collected revenue from that source in the same proportion that France does, we would realize from our estate tax $627,062,600 per year.

HEAVY ESTATE TAX ADVOCATED BY EMINENT AUTHORITIES.

Theodore Roosevelt, the leading statesman of our time, was a strong advocate of heavy estate taxes. In a speech delivered April 14, 1906, while he was President of the United States, he said:

> As a matter of personal conviction, and without pretending to discuss the details or formulate the system, I feel that we shall ultimately have to consider the adoption of some such scheme as that of a progressive tax on all fortunes beyond a certain amount, either given in life or devised or bequeathed upon death to any individual—a tax so framed as to put it out of the power of the owner of one of these enormous fortunes to hand on more than a certain amount to any one individual; the tax, of course, to be imposed by the National and not the State Government. Such taxation should, of course, be aimed merely at the inheritance or transmission in their entirety of these fortunes swollen beyond all healthy limits.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, one of the leading and best-known financiers of our time, was a pronounced advocate of heavy estate taxes. In his well-known Gospel of Wealth, on page 11, he says:

> The growing disposition to tax more and more heavily large estates left at death is a cheering indication of the growth of a salutary change in public opinion.
> Of all forms of taxation this seems the wisest. Men who continue hoarding great sums all their lives, the proper use of which for public ends would work good to the community from which it chiefly came, should be made to feel that the community, in the form of the State, can not thus be deprived of its proper share. By taxing estates heavily at death the State marks its condemnation of the selfish millionaire's unworthy life.
> It is desirable that nations should go much further in this direction. Indeed, it is difficult to set bounds to the share of a rich man's estate which should go at his death to the public through the agency of the State, and by all means such taxes should be graduated, beginning at nothing upon moderate sums to dependents, and increasing rapidly as the amounts swell, until of the millionaire's hoard, as of Shylock's, at least—
> "The other half comes to the privy coffer of the State."

Mr. Carnegie was a strong individualist and, like myself, opposed to socialism. On the next page of this book he answers the argument of some that if estates are taxed heavily it will take away the incentive of men to accumulate, as follows:

> Nor need it be feared that this policy would sap the root of enterprise and render men less anxious to accumulate, for to the class whose ambition it is to leave great fortunes and be talked about after their death it will attract even more attention and, indeed, be a somewhat nobler ambition to have enormous sums paid over to the State from their fortunes.

Mr. Carnegie, in an article entitled "My partners, the people," first published in British Review of Reviews January, 1907, beginning on page 28, presents a clear and convincing argument in support of heavy estate taxes. I submit a few excerpts from that article:

> It would be unwise to interfere with the working bees; better allow them to continue gathering honey during their lives. When they die the Nation should have a large portion of the honey remaining in the hives; it is immaterial at what date collection is made, so that it comes to the National Treasury at last.
> It is difficult to understand why at the death of its possessor great wealth gathered or created in any of these or in other forms should not be shared by the community, which has been the most potent cause or partner of all in its creation. We have seen that enormous fortunes are dependent upon the community; without great and increasing population there could be no great wealth. Where wealth accrues honorably the people are always silent partners.
> It is clearly at the rich man's death that the community should exact a large share of the estate, a graduated share, increasing in proportion to its extent. It should be paid over to the Government and applied to the service of the people, the silent but contributive partner from whom it has been so largely derived.
> The people see how equivocally in many cases, how unfairly in others, fortunes have been made. Especially have the numerous failures of prominent men in official position to perform their duties properly deeply impressed them and produced a strong feeling of antagonism to wealth and millionaires as a class. As wealth comes mainly from the community, it should be administered as a sacred trust by the temporary recipient for the public good. Property in one sense is a mere creature of the law. Whether the holder be permitted to bequeath it to his successors, and to what extent and how, are simply questions of policy for the people, through the Government, to determine.
> Funds collected by the Government from the estates of the millionaires at death would never be likely otherwise to be put to so good a use as the payment of Government expenditures, relieving the people in part from the burden of taxation.
> Meanwhile, as the masses become more intelligent, they may be expected to criticize and denounce the growth of fortunes which fail to contribute largely to the public good, and finally to insist that they shall be made to do so. The first step to this end should be heavy graduated death taxes upon wealth.
> Indications of alarm are sometimes seen regarding present conditions. Fears are expressed that a war of classes may arise. On the contrary, there are none but healthful signs in the awakening intelligence and deep interest of the masses in this problem.

The position of Roosevelt, the statesman, and of Carnegie, the financier, on this great problem is convincing and unassailable. An estate tax in this country, even considerably less in proportion than is collected in Great Britain or France, would relieve enterprise from many annoying and restrictive taxes, pay off the national debt in a generation, and allay social unrest. When will the statesmen and financiers of our own day learn practical wisdom from Roosevelt and Carnegie and follow in their footsteps?

HON. TOM CONNALLY,
OF TEXAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 11, 1921.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, under the leave granted me by the House to extend my remarks by placing in the RECORD a tribute to Maj. C. M. STEDMAN, I desire to submit an article from the May, 1921, issue of the Confederate Veteran, written by Mr. Chief Justice Clark, of North Carolina.

It has been my privilege to serve with Maj. STEDMAN four years on the Committee on Foreign Affairs of this House, and I have had excellent opportunity to become acquainted with those splendid qualities that endear him to all who know him well, and I feel that I express the sentiments of his associates in the House of Representatives when I say that his courage, his gallantry, and his distinguished public service reflect great credit upon North Carolina and the people whom he represents in this Chamber.

THE REAR GUARD OF THE CONFEDERACY—CHARLES M. STEDMAN.

[By Chief Justice Walter Clark, of North Carolina.]

When the grand army of half a million soldiers with which Napoleon entered Russia, defeated by the cavalry of the hail and the infantry of the snow and depleted in numbers, was on that disastrous and ever-memorable retreat and the last column of 9,000 men from all arms of the service under Marshal Ney reached the Beresina, the bridge had been destroyed. By the efforts of the heroic marshal a bridge was built that night. When morning dawned 80,000 Russians occupied the amphitheater of hills; and while their artillery and the floating cakes of ice in the river threatened the frail structure, the enemy's cavalry and infantry made continuous assaults, but were beaten back. The bridge was broken again and again, but was as often repaired, and at nightfall the last of the 9,000 had passed. Ney then ordered the bridge broken down, and, snatching a musket from a private soldier, fired the last shot at the enemy.

All night that weary and broken column toiled on. The marshal, worn out by constant fighting and two days and nights without sleep, staggered on alone far in the rear. Near dawn a solitary figure was seen climbing the hill at the first French outpost. Enlarged by the mists of winter and the rising dawn, he seemed of gigantic size. The sentinel, alarmed at the apparition, brought his gun to the charge and cried: "Who goes there?" The figure replied "Marshal Ney, the rear guard of the grand army."

In a late memorable scene in Congress one lone Confederate, appropriately from North Carolina, remained in those halls as the last representative of the great armies of the Confederacy. When an assault was made upon the memories of Lee and Jackson, this brave soldier rose to the occasion and in ever-memorable words defied those who would tarnish the memory of the mighty dead.

As a young soldier CHARLES M. STEDMAN, or Maj. STEDMAN, as his few surviving comrades love still to call him, was the ideal of the dashing Confederate soldier. At Chancellorsville, at the Wilderness, at Reams's Station, August 25, 1864, "the North Carolina victory," as it was called, when four North Carolina brigades assaulted and, almost unaided, drove Warren's corps from behind their breastworks, and on many other occasions during that great war he distinguished himself. When the Confederate Army was starting on the memorable retreat from Petersburg to Appomattox, which has been styled appropriately "the funeral march of the Confederacy," and the enemy were pressing on our rear, Gen. Louis G. Young, of Georgia, relates (Fourth North Carolina Regimental Histories, p. 568): "In my memory is vividly stamped the face and figure of Maj. C. M. STEDMAN, of the Forty-fourth North Carolina Regiment, as he advanced to meet me, his sword drawn and raised, saying in loud tones: 'Our men are ready to advance and only await the command.' I was very much tempted to give the command, and many a time since wished I had." On the recent occasion when the fame of our great commanders was traduced this sole survivor of the armies of the Confederacy in Congress, with the enthusiasm of his youth and with the burning eloquence with which his voice has rung out in many a civic contest since, repelled the charge.

If the spirits of the soldiers of Lee and Jackson who sleep on many a battle field on mountain side and by many a river and they who since, falling beneath the leaden hail of the years, have filled honored graves throughout the South could be summoned and down the long lines could pass the figure of this last soldier of the Confederacy in the halls of Congress, the shadowy squadrons and battalions and brigades would salute him as "the rear guard of the Confederacy," faithful to his comrades and their fame to the last.

OF

HON. T. FRANK APPLEBY,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, August 12, 1921,

On House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 172) granting consent of Congress to an agreement or compact entered into between the State of New York and the State of New Jersey for the creation of the port of New York district and the establishment of the port of New York authority for the comprehensive development of the port of New York.

Mr. APPLEBY. Mr. Speaker, this resolution (H. J. Res. 172) now before the House for its approval should command the attention and support of every Member of this body. Its adoption will mark the greatest step ever taken toward the intelligent development of the port of New York, and when we realize that approximately 150,000,000 tons of freight and more than 50 per cent of the foreign commerce of the United States pass through the port of New York every 12 months it immediately stamps this port as an asset of the entire Nation, and every progressive step in its development brings its proportionate blessings to every section of the United States.

It is not often that a tremendous development project is presented to Congress that some one does not discover politics or some political scheme connected with it. But this project is unique in this respect, as both of the dominant political parties in both of the States seeking to consummate the compact have made it a part of their declaration of principles. Since 1834, when the States of New Jersey and New York entered into a limited agreement fixing and determining the rights and obligations of the two States in and about the waters of the two States, especially in and about New York Bay and the Hudson River, Republicans and Democrats have joined hands and voices in urging a better coordination of the terminal, transportation, and other facilities of commerce in, about, and through the port of New York that greater economies might result and not only the State of New Jersey and the State of New York but the entire Nation be benefited.

In recent years the commerce of this port has so developed and increased that it was felt by the authorities of the States that the terminal facilities were woefully inadequate and out of date, and the lack of cooperation between the States was largely responsible for the terrible condition of congestion, and something must be done to improve conditions. Some three years ago a joint committee of representatives from the two States was appointed to study the matter and report a comprehensive scheme of development to the end that the port be constructively organized and thoroughly equipped with the most modern methods of rail, water, pier, and freight facilities. This committee presented its report on December 16, 1920, in a volume of about 500 pages, and is a most exhaustive and comprehensive proposal of plans and recommendations. Its principal administrative recommendation is the adoption of a compact between the States of New Jersey and New York providing for the creation of a single port district and the administration by a single port authority. The sanction of the United States Government of such a compact is sought in this resolution we are now considering, and I am encroaching upon the valuable time of this body solely to urge that a unanimous vote be cast in favor of the same. I present it to the House, Mr. Speaker, not as the port of New York, but as the port of the Nation, and plead for its consideration as such. With its 800 miles of water front, its 12 principal railroads, the terminus for nearly all of the more important transatlantic lines, it constitutes one of the main arteries and principal gateways between the United States and the markets of the world. Every possible aid should be extended in its development.

In contemplating the commercial possibilities presented in developing the plans of the port of New York district, I feel constrained to say, on behalf of the district which I represent in Congress, that it will mark the beginning of an era of prosperity for this section of New Jersey surpassing any period of its history. Historically, geographically, and commercially New York and the industrial districts of the northern part of New Jersey constitute a single unit, a great metropolitan district of more than 8,000,000 people.

In my district, within the radius of the proposed port of New York district, are many important manufacturing centers. Many plans for their development proposing the creation of modern facilities are now lying dormant because of the lack of coordinated interests. For instance, the great port of Perth Amboy, with its important shipbuilding interests, has no outlet to the Atlantic except the devious route through the Arthur Kill, Newark Bay, Kill Van Kull, and New York Bay. This plan, through the deepening of the channel of Raritan Bay, will give Perth Amboy a direct outlet to the ocean. Other rail and water projects of importance, as proposed in the recommendations of the committee, will mean the immediate and rapid development of the cities of Metuchen, New Brunswick, South Amboy, Keyport, Matawan, South River, and Atlantic Highlands, all important centers. One project in which I am particularly interested and which is compassed in the survey of the committee making the recommendation for the creation of the port of New York district is that of the deepening of the channel in Raritan River and Raritan Bay to a sufficient depth to permit ocean steamers to reach the municipal docks of the city of New Brunswick. This would undoubtedly give New Brunswick a population of 100,000 within the next three or four years and would contribute materially to the advancement of all of Middlesex County. This county is now one of the greatest industrial counties of the State, and with these improvements every municipality within its borders would get some benefit from the volume of commerce that would pass in and out of the river. The deepening of this channel would immediately bring capital that would utilize acres of land on both banks of the river for huge warehouses, and the possibilities connected with this improvement alone are simply marvelous.

But all this presupposes the accomplishment of the work on the comprehensive plan of cooperation contemplated by the two States as set forth in this resolution. The adoption of the resolution will mean unified authority and control, which will bring order out of chaos and afford a blessing not only to New York and the contiguous municipalities but also to the country at large.

The resolution is approved and recommended by the Secretary of War, it carries no appropriation, the legality of the compact has been upheld by the courts, and, if my personal judgment is of any value to this body, the resolution will be unanimously adopted.

OF

HON. WILLIAM S. VARE,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Speaker, passage of tax revision legislation which does not become effective until next January only serves to postpone the time when the great industries and the small business men in the United States can adjust their affairs to a sound peace-time basis.

It is to be regretted that the wisdom of the Ways and Means Committee, which provided that the bill we are now considering should, in its excess-profits taxes and income-tax sections, become effective as of January 1 of this year, was not supported by the caucus of the Republican Members of this body.

One thing that is needed more than any other to aid the average business man in adjusting his business to a normal basis is the lifting of these tax burdens. They can be lifted this year without any serious effect to the financial structure of the Government and in fairness to all.

The manufacturer to-day has halted production. He is faced with the question of possible losses due to natural causes which he must sustain out of his own pocket or with making a fair return, the major part of which must go to the Government.

It has been argued that the public has paid the excess-profits taxes to the manufacturer and producer this year and that he should turn this money into the Government. This is true to such a limited extent that it is hardly worth considering. The majority of the business men in the great industrial centers have not produced this year and therefore have not collected these profits.

There are 6,000,000 men in this country out of employment. Until the employer is assured that any earnings he might make will not be taken by the Government he will not start the wheels of industry going. Until this is done there will be no relief for this army of workers.

The removal of the tax burdens for the current year will change the entire situation. Industry will resume and the matter of unemployment will be at an end or greatly relieved. Stagnate industry is a net loss not only to the workers and those having their money invested but to the Nation as a whole.

The excess-profits tax was paid willingly during the war. The war is over. The quicker we realize the war is over, the better it will be for the country at large. The great industrial leaders can not be expected to take chances which mean nothing or very little to them if they win and a net loss for them if they fall behind.

It is necessary, however, that further economy be practiced by the executive departments of the Government if taxes are to be reduced without affecting the Treasury or injuring the fiscal structure of the Government.

There are but few war-time agencies which could not and should be eliminated before the beginning of the next calendar year, if the heads of the various departments would agree to such a proposal. It can not be expected that this will be accomplished if important positions in the Government service are retained by Democrats, repudiated last November as extravagant and wasteful. I am referring to the large number of "hold-over" Democrats, whose only policy of economy is that "cheeseparing" variety, which is more expensive than helpful. The country voted in November for a complete change in management and not only a change in Cabinet officers.

The War Department stands to-day as an example of how the money of the people of the United States derived from unjust taxation is spent. Cantonments are maintained throughout the country. True, some of them have been closed. Others are continued and money spent to maintain a spirit necessary in war but absolute extravagance in peace.

The Army itself is overmanned. There should be no more than 100,000 men in the standing Army of the United States. The maintenance of more than this number when there is no danger of war is another wasteful expense which should be eliminated. There is no need for such a large Army, and the reduction of the standing forces to 100,000 would reduce the expenses of the Government $75,000,000 a year. To lower the number of officers in the Army to a figure which would balance with the enlisted force would save another $25,000,000. The United States Army is overofficered.

Notwithstanding that the War Department decreased its expenditures in July of this year, as compared with July of 1920, the decrease was far from what it should have been. In July of this year the department spent $59,000,000, exclusive of money derived from liquidation.

Only four departments of the Government have decreased their expenses, according to the official records of the Treasury Department, for July, 1921, as compared with July, 1920. They are Congress, the White House, the War Department, and the Department of Commerce. The figures for all departments are shown in the daily report of the Treasury Department for August 15.

We must be fair with ourselves; we must be fair with our constituents. Are we decreasing the cost of government operation? Are we operating on a plan which will permit the sharp decrease in the taxes which we all know is necessary? Is the postponement of the repeal of the objectionable excess-profits taxes for one year due to the fact that "we need the money" this year to pay for the large amounts the Treasury statement shows are being expended?

There are various efficiency commissions working. They are doing much, no doubt. Their efforts have not materialized into any actual savings, except in some places where "hold-over" Democratic bureau chiefs have endeavored to create an impression by discharging men without regard to their term of service or experience or the civil service law in some cases.

We have in Philadelphia a navy yard where there are shipways idle while the Shipping Board is expending large sums of money for the construction of ships on private ways. The repair shops of the Philadelphia yard have discharged several thousand trained Government workers who did not desert the Government for the high salaries at the private yards during the war. At the same time the Shipping Board is paying large sums to have the repair work done in private yards. The Philadelphia Navy Yard workmen by actual records of the Navy Department have shown that they can underbid and do the work at less cost than the private yards can do it. Admiral Benson, now a member of the Shipping Board, and former commandant of the Philadelphia yard, can attest to that fact.

The Navy Department must keep its yards and equipment intact. The cheapest way to do it is to use it for the repair of Shipping Board vessels. This will hold the trained men to their posts that they might be available in time of emergency. The Navy must be maintained. It is our first arm of defense, and we must keep it available at all times.

We must put a stop to all manner of extravagance. The people are demanding it. They are demanding the passage of a tax revision bill, but not one that will give them a remedy three months after it is signed. The average business man wants to know now and should have known several months ago what his obligations to the Government are going to be. It is not his fault that the tax rate for 1921 was not fixed soon after March 4, as the Ways and Means Committee could have reported a tax revision bill at a much earlier date.

I feel that with the protective tariff bill passed the interest of the workingman will be protected, and with the tax bill passed, which must be accomplished at once, the country will speedily return to prewar conditions.

The Revenue.

OF

HON. OSCAR E. KELLER,

OF MINNESOTA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, August 19, 1921.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, with the Nation in the midst of the severest financial depression of its history; with thousands of factories closed; with freight cars idle; with farm produce rotting in the fields because prices will not defray the cost of transportation; with bank failures and bankruptcies increasing; and, most serious of all, with 5,735,000 men unemployed as winter approaches, I want to protest against the hasty passage of an unscientific, illy-conceived, privilege-written revenue bill, which is going to still further depress the purchasing power of the people by imposing upon small producers and consumers an additional burden of $600,000,000 which has been lifted from 5,000 millionaires well able to pay it out of their war profits.

Taxation is the most vital problem that confronts the country. Federal taxes alone total approximately $4,000,000,000 a year. One-third the net income of corporate business is drained away for the payment of State and National taxes. Our per capita tax for the National Government amounts to $36.40 a year, or $182 annually for the head of the average family. State and local taxes practically double this sum. This vast sum can not be taken away from productive industry every year without the serious likelihood of disrupting our entire economic structure; and anyone who has gone beneath the surface and studied the causes of our business decline is forced to conclude that unsound methods of raising governmental revenue are responsible to a great extent.

We have adopted a patchwork, makeshift revenue scheme that places the entire burden upon production in such a way that taxes are absorbed in higher prices and then passed along to the consuming public. The result is inflated prices and deflated purchasing power. When the public finally was driven to a "buyers' strike," declining sales made it impossible for manufacturers to pass their taxes to the consumer, and then they rested with paralyzing effect upon manufacturers. Industrial stagnation is the result.

It ought to be plain to any thinking person that the method of raising our excessive Federal taxes has had a depressing effect upon industry, and that we can not restore national prosperity nor compete on equal terms with foreign nations in the world markets unless we adopt a sound system which will strike the shackles off industry and release a greater proportion of our capital for productive purposes.

Our ability to compete for world markets, and consequently our prosperity, depends upon reasonable transportation charges, cheap power, low interest, easy rents, and light cost of Government. All these factors, which so largely determine manufacturing costs, are dependent upon our method of levying taxes. Railroad rates are high, hydroelectric power is expensive, money is dear, rents are unreasonable, and governmental expenditures are burdening industry largely because we have adopted revenue laws which are in direct conflict with all the accepted tenets of political economy. We have protected privilege and penalized production, with the result that industry is staggering beneath the unfair burden.

There is no valid reason why taxation should shackle industry and crush production. Taxation measures can be devised which actually will stimulate all lines of legitimate business, promote building, and make land more productive. There are certain time-tested principles of taxation, conceded by all economists of repute, which have this effect and which, if incorporated into our revenue laws, would speedily end our financial depression. Why is a system based upon these principles not adopted? Simply because most politicians scrupulously avoid reading political economy, and the all-powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee in particular, instead of calling in experts and students, sought the advice of men whose chief concern was to protect privilege and carry out preelection promises rather than to frame a scientific bill that would raise the needed funds with the least injury to the Nation's industry.

A little clique, consisting of the President, his Wall Street advisors, two millionaire Cabinet officers, and a handful of trusted lieutenants on the Ways and Means Committee—themselves wealthy and very tender to privilege—concocted this scheme at White House conferences and then drove it through by the threat of presidential displeasure and appeals to party regularity. It is true that some of the worst features of the original bill had to be abandoned—they were too nauseous even for many regular party men to stomach—but much that is evil remains, and the net result will be to further burden industry, to impose fresh checks upon industry, to decrease the people's purchasing power, and to protect and to foster certain great monopolies which already have the country by the throat.

By repealing the excess-profits tax entirely and reducing the income surtaxes from a maximum of 65 per cent to 32 per cent, the Fordney revenue bill—it ought to be called the Harding-Mellon-Hoover bill—relieves less than 5,000 millionaires of taxes aggregating more than $600,000,000 and throws an additional burden of approximately this sum upon small merchants, manufacturers, jobbers, professional men, and farmers and laborers. The corporation income tax is increased from 10 per cent to 12½ per cent, and this increase, proportionately, will fall heaviest upon the small producers. The big monopolists who derive rents or royalties from natural resources and add nothing to the Nation's wealth, are given a decided advantage. The income tax can only be justified on the theory that it is imposed in accordance with ability to pay. It is now proposed to destroy this theory by untaxing a little privileged group of millionaires—most of them war profiteers and all of them well able to pay—and heaping the taxes on those least able to pay. It is one of the most astonishing proposals ever made by a responsible Government and seems to justify the assertion, frequently made these days, that the seat of the administration has been transferred from Washington to Wall Street.

I want to be fair, and it affords me great pleasure to be able to say that the bill as finally adopted by the House Republican caucus is much better than the measure originally schemed by Harding, Hoover, Mellon, Fordney, and Longworth. Word of their intentions leaked out and public protest forced some compromise. The bill, as amended, contains some good features. It increases the individual exemption from $2,000 to $2,500, and the additional exemption for dependents is increased from $200 to $400. The savings accruing from these two changes, however, only aggregate $70,000,000 and are inconsequential in comparison with the additional burdens heaped upon producers and the $600,000,000 lifted from our privileged millionaire class.

But the real victory won by the House caucus is not in what the bill contains, but in what it does not contain. According to reliable reports the first draft retained the transportation tax and all the nuisance taxes; levied a $10 tax on automobiles—as much on the humble flivver as upon the proud Packard; proposed a 2-cent tax on checks irrespective of their amounts; and increased the first-class postage rate from 2 to 3 cents. But, worst of all, the President himself, according to those who consulted with him, wanted the lifting of the excess-profits tax and higher income surtaxes to be made retroactive to January 1, 1921, which virtually would have presented these profiteers with $350,000,000, as most of these concerns had already included their taxes in their prices and passed the sum total with enhanced profits for collection along to the public. This is one of the most indefensible suggestions that ever has come to my attention, and it sheds considerable light upon the motives of the administration "inner circle," whose pernicious interference so strangely shaped the revenue bill.

The ostensible fathers of this bill justify it on the ground that "it will reduce taxes." Republican leaders are claiming that the Fordney bill will reduce taxes $193,640,000 for the present fiscal year, $377,790,000 for the fiscal year of 1922, and $790,330,000 for the fiscal year 1923. These so-called "tax reductions" are purely illusory and have been accomplished only on paper for political effect by a very palpable juggling of figures, which will not stand analysis. If there is any reduction of taxes, it will only be accomplished by a corresponding increase of the public debt, and this is a despicable species of deception discreditable, indeed, to the men who are putting it over on the public.

On April 30, 1921, Secretary Mellon wrote to Chairman FORDNEY, of the Ways and Means Committee, and estimated the expenditures for the year as $4,565,877,033. This was before the political possibilities of the situation had been pointed out to him. His figures were generally accepted at that time.

In the meanwhile, Chairman FORDNEY and Mr. MONDELL had been making some very loose statements about the amount of money they intended to save, and therefore there was great consternation among the "inside circle" when Secretary Mellon intruded himself like a bull in a china shop before the House Ways and Means Committee, and, after accounting for all reductions over his previous estimate, presented detailed figures showing the expenditures for the fiscal year 1922 would be $4,554,012,817. He pointed out that $3,830,000,000 of the total must be raised by taxation. The rest was to come from customs, the sale of war supplies, and other miscellaneous receipts.

This cold-blooded analysis of the real situation knocked the guesses of Messrs. FORDNEY and MONDELL higher than a cocked hat and made it apparent taxes could not be reduced without drastic economies, particularly in the military arm of the Government. But despite his call for a purported disarmament conference, President Harding has evinced no disposition to curtail our military program, and after several hurried confabs it evidently was decided that it would be easier to manipulate figures than to reconsider Army and Navy appropriations. I do not pretend to know what pressure was brought to bear upon Secretary Mellon—although rumor has it he proved recalcitrant at first—but finally on August 10 he issued a "revised estimate," which placed the Government's expense at only $4,034,000,000, of which but $3,075,000,000 had to be raised by taxation.

Secretary Mellon's first report stated that—the estimates which the Treasury has presented may be regarded as conservative—

And, after pointing out that the expenses for July were about $14,000,000 greater than for the corresponding month a year ago, he added:

The Treasury can not take into account paper savings or hoped-for reductions in expenditures which can not reasonably be expected to materialize,

if expenditures are to continue at anything like these figures the estimates will be greatly exceeded.

In view of these strong statements, his sudden "revision"—evidently under presidential pressure—is not very convincing. The reduction is arrived at by arbitrarily lopping off $350,000,000 of estimated expenditures and $170,000,000 due on floating debt, and then adding $70,000,000 to the estimated customs returns, $140,000,000 to the estimated salvage from war supplies, and $131,000,000 to estimated revenue from "other miscellaneous sources."

I can not conceive how any intelligent person can be duped by this transparent jugglery of funds, especially in view of Secretary Mellon's detailed explanation of his first estimate before the Ways and Means Committee on August 4:

The necessary expenditures, including sinking fund, will certainly not be less than $4,550,000,000 for the year—according to present prospects, and may be even larger; so that from all the information we can gather this is the amount of necessary revenue.

A little later Mr. Mellon's assistant, Mr. S. P. Gilbert, jr., in reply to a question as to whether in arriving at the total of $4,554,000,000 the Treasury Department had taken in account the reductions attributed to Gen. Dawes, replied in the affirmative, saying they had "reduced some figures and modified others." Mr. Gilbert afterwards admitted the possible failure of the War Finance Corporation to market some of its securities might require "a revision upward." Finally he concluded by stating "that these are our best estimates of the amounts to be received and the figures have all been most carefully considered by the Government actuary and checked up to date."

The mythical savings which Mr. Mellon "hopes" to accomplish—I will give him credit; he was not very enthusiastic about swallowing his own previous estimates—consist of amounts lopped off various departments, as follows:

War Department	$50,000,000
Navy Department	100,000,000
Shipping Board	100,000,000
Department of Agriculture	25,000,000
Railroads	50,000,000
Miscellaneous	25,000,000
Total reduction	350,000,000

Most of the appropriations for these departments already have been made, and to one who knows the ways of departmental red tape and extravagance it is difficult to conceive of this money not being spent. Moreover, Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board has already declared that he will need $300,000,000 during the year instead of the paltry $48,000,000 which was granted him; and Chairman Davis of the Railway Administration has admitted that he does not know even the approximate amount of money which his department will require. Our naval program has not been abandoned or curtailed; the President himself told Congress that his unwillingness to demobilize the Army as rapidly as the legislative body decreed might "require additional appropriations"; and there seems to be no intention to be economical at the expense of the hungry railroads or to withdraw our Army from the Rhine.

As a matter of fact the administration, despite the newspaper headline "savings" of Gen. "Hell and Maria" Dawes, is not disposed toward drastic economies. For July, the first month of the fiscal year of 1922, the Government spent $14,000,000 more than in July, 1920, and during the first 15 days of August, 1921, the Government expended $20,000,000 more than the much-condemned Democratic administration of a year ago. An excess of $34,000,000 in six weeks over the preceding administration is not a very good beginning toward keeping our expenses down to $4,034,000,000, especially when Secretary Mellon's assistant, Mr. Gilbert, admits that the disbursements for the year ending June, 1921, were $5,115,000,000, a mark which we are exceeding at the rate of nearly $6,000,000 a week.

Secretary Mellon's increased paper receipts are of the same nature as his decreased estimates on expenditures. What evidence does he present to show that he had any reason to expect the income from the salvage of war supplies would be increased from his first estimate of $60,000,000 to $200,000,000? What impelled him to increase his estimate of the revenue from "other miscellaneous sources" from $156,087,000 to $287,643,000? He gives no details. What warrant has he for supposing the Fordney tariff bill will bring in additional revenue of $70,000,000 when the Senate has not finished rewriting its schedules, and all economists of repute concede the high rates of the measure which passed the House would virtually exclude European imports and actually decrease the revenue? His revised estimate that back taxes will yield $300,000,000 per year is on a par of his other extravagant figuring. Why the arbitrary increase of $65,000,000 over his "conservative estimate" of a week previous?

As a matter of fact, owing to the state of business depression, which will be made worse if the revenue bill passes in its present form, the returns from the Fordney bill are much more likely to shrink than they are to show the startling increases in Mr. Mellon's "revised estimate."

His estimated savings are on the same unsubstantial basis. The only saving that he is sure of effecting is the reduction of $170,000,000 in the amount of the public debt, and this amount must be paid next year—with interest of about $8,000,000. This is a fair example of the much heralded "saving to the taxpayer," which the Fordney bill will bring about. If taxes are lower, it will only be because the public debt is higher, and at the end of the year the taxpayer will find his "reduced taxes" waiting for him—with interest.

I charge that no member of the administration, including Secretary Mellon, and no responsible member of the Ways and Means Committee, takes this claim seriously, and it is raised for political effect and with the deliberate intention of deceiving the people. I make this charge because the Fordney revenue bill itself bears the evidence of deceit and hypocrisy in this matter. A provision of the Fordney bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to increase the certificates of indebtedness from $7,000,000,000 to $7,500,000,000, and I know, and every other intelligent man knows, this provision was put into the bill to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to take care of the half billion dollar deficit which is sure to result from this effort to "reduce taxes." I warn my colleagues against this foolish attempt to postpone the day of reckoning, for when it does arrive, if we persist in carrying out this program, we must bear the brunt of broken faith as well as of taxes made heavier by accrued interest.

I do not want to appear to be in the position of offering only destructive criticism. I wish to point out that it is possible to meet our budget requirements frankly and honestly, levy sufficient taxes to defray the Government's expenses without creating deficit, and to do this without burdening industry to the point of depression.

The Ways and Means Committee and its millionaire Cabinet officer advisors apparently have never looked into the revenue-raising possibilities of two almost untouched fields—land values and estates which pass by inheritance. Almost unlimited revenue could be raised from both these sources, and instead of injuring business it actually would stimulate industry. Certain members of the Ways and Means Committee are not so devoid of economic knowledge as to be unaware of these facts, but they are more concerned about coddling millionaires and protecting privilege than in following sound principles of taxation.

Several billion dollars annually pass by inheritance in this country. Increased rates on these estates would produce between $500,000,000 and $750,000,000 a year as compared to the paltry $103,000,000 which we took last year from the inheritors of great fortunes. There is no valid reason why these rates should not be increased. A tax on inheritance is not a tax on industry. It does not have an injurious effect upon business. Instead it actually increases business and adds more productive capital for productive purposes by putting into general circulation money which otherwise would be hoarded by individual heirs or trusteeships.

There has been much talk before the Ways and Means Committee of stopping investment in tax-exempt securities. Secretary Mellon testified that $10,000,000,000 already is invested where it can not be assessed to assist in supporting the Government. An inheritance tax is the most effective method of reaching tax-exempt securities. An inheritance tax in effect is a deferred income tax collected where evasion is impossible and where the amount of the levy can not check production or retard investment.

The United States is more tender toward the inheritors of great fortunes than any other civilized country on the globe. England taxes inheritances much more steeply than we do, and so does France and other continental nations. We have made no serious effort to raise revenue through this source in the United States, principally because the wealthy exercise a disproportionate political influence; but now, when industry is staggering under such oppressive burdens, we should avail ourselves of this easily reached field. Land values is the other great untouched source of Federal taxation which we have neglected—to the detriment of industry. According to estimates based upon the last census reports, land values and industrial values in the United States aggregate about $140,000,000,000 each. Industry pays a tax of more than $4,000,000,000 annually, while land values only are taxed a total of about $600,000,000, derived in the form of transfer taxes, income taxes from rents, and profits on the sales and resales of realty.

The injustice of this is apparent. There is no sound reason why industrial values should be taxed so heavily or why land values should almost entirely escape. Most of our industrial difficulties and social injustices are the result of this uneconomic discrimination, and any system of tax reform that lightens the load upon business will have to do so by imposing taxes upon land values.

I have introduced four bills which incorporate these two principles. My bills also make a distinction between earned and unearned income and reduce by one-half the rates on the former. They also repeal the excess-profits tax—and the corporation income tax as well—but instead of relieving 5,000 millionaires of $100,000 a year in taxes and adding $600 a year to some 200,000 small-business men, my program provides a constructive substitute which takes money from those best able to bear it without dislocating industry or penalizing production.

The first bill repeals all existing transportation stamp and sales taxes except those on tobacco, distilled spirits, oleomargarine, habit-forming drugs, and products of child labor. The bill also repeals the excess-profits tax and the 10 per cent tax on the income of corporations.

The second bill amends the income tax so as to distinguish between "earned" and "unearned" income. The present rates on "unearned" income, together with the supertaxes are retained, but the tax on "earned" incomes is cut in two. "Earned" income is defined as income derived from personal services or from business personally conducted. "Unearned" income is defined as income derived from rents of land or other property, interest on mortgages, notes, or bonds, dividends on shares of stock whether in the form of money or stock dividends, and from any source other than the labor, skill, or business or industry personally conducted by the person receiving the income.

The third bill amends the inheritance tax. Beginning with estates of $20,000 to $35,000, there is a tax of 1 per cent; $35,000 to $50,000, 2 per cent; $50,000 to $150,000, 4 per cent; $150,000 to $250,000, 6 per cent. The tax then graduates in increasing scale until the point of $100,000,000 is reached, after which the tax is 90 per cent.

The fourth bill provides for a tax of 1 per cent on land values in excess of $10,000, after exempting buildings and improvements, and in the case of farms, cost of clearing, drainage, and maintenance of fertility. This bill aims to tax monopoly owners of natural resources, valuable "sites" in cities, and the holdings of land out of use. The exemptions are so applied to farms as to exempt from taxation approximately 98 per cent of all actual farmers. Owners of city homes also would be exempt from taxation under the proposed law. The tax would raise about $1,000,000,000 annually, and the bulk of it would fall upon wealthy monopolists.

This program is scientific because it conforms to the four basic tenets of taxation, namely, that taxation be imposed upon those best able to pay; that it be imposed when most convenient to be paid; that it be levied without distressing uncertainty; and that it take as little capital as possible from the channels of productive industry. The program is constructive because, instead of burdening business by imposing penalties, it will take the shackles off industry and actually promote production. It is my purpose to prove that this program, if enacted into law, would not only raise sufficient revenue to meet all the current needs of government, but would benefit business, labor, and the farmers—and when you benefit business, labor, and the farmers, you are favoring no classes, but benefiting the Nation as a whole, for these classes comprise the Nation.

This program would repeal nuisance taxes aggregating about $810,000,000, and the repeal of the excess profits and corporation income taxes would relieve industry of about $925,000,000 more. It is the chief merit of these bills that they would relieve the purchasing public quite as much as the individual manufacturer. It is a well-known fact that most taxes are pyramided and passed off on to the public in the form of higher costs. The $1,730,000,000, which these bills would take off of the producing end of industry, would aggregate between five and eight billion dollars by the time they were paid by the public, so that it can be truthfully said that this program would relieve the people and add to their purchasing power to that extent.

Investigations by the Department of Justice revealed the fact that the income and excess profits taxes alone have increased the cost of the average commodity by 22 per cent, and repeal of these measures ought to decrease prices by approximately one-fifth. Lessen taxes to this extent and, in fact, you are increasing the people's purchasing power by between five and eight billion dollars. Anyone can readily see that this would have an immediately stimulating effect upon business and would go far toward restoring the prosperity that all sections of the American people are hoping for.

These tax bills would not only stimulate business by adding between $250 and $300 annually to the purchasing power of each average American family but would go further by compelling the improvement of vacant city lots and idle farm lands. This would boom the building trades, solve the housing shortage, reduce rents, provide employment for hundreds of thousands of workers now in enforced idleness, and give a long-needed impetus to the slow-running wheels of our industrial system.

To prove this point, I want to quote the following clipping from the New York Times of June 6:

TAX-FREE LAW SPUR TO HOUSE BUILDING—PLANS FILED SINCE FEBRUARY 25 FOR DWELLINGS TO ACCOMMODATE 13,279 FAMILIES—WAY TO STOP RENT GOUGING—CURRAN SAYS INCREASE IN CONSTRUCTION MUST CONTINUE IF RATES ARE TO COME DOWN.

Plans have been filed for houses to accommodate 13,279 families in the five boroughs since February 25, when the tax-exemption ordinance went into effect, according to reports compiled by the building bureau and made public yesterday by Henry H. Curran, borough president of Manhattan. He said the plans had been filed at a rate of prospective accommodations for 1,000 families a week.

The increase was 157 per cent over the corresponding period in 1920, when plans were filed for buildings to house 5,171 families.

"While the number of apartments planned has taken a sudden jump," Mr. Curran said, "the most encouraging feature to me of the building that is going on all over town is the great number of one and two family houses that are under way.

"Of the 13,279 families provided for in the last three months 7,559 families will live in the little houses and 5,720 in apartments. That means a substantial increase in the number of New York families who own their own homes. The more we can have of these little houses, where people can go upstairs to bed and downstairs to breakfast, and begin to live like human beings instead of cliff dwellers, the better off we shall be.

"The only way to stop rents from going up again is to keep on building. Rents will stop going up when enough new houses have gone up, but not before. The pace that tax exemption has set—1,000 families a week—must be not only maintained but increased. This means more money at reasonable rates of interest. The estimated cost of these 13,000 new homes is a little over $63,000,000. Such a total means that while there has been profiteering in some quarters there must be somebody around town who is lending money for new homes at decent rates. The housing shortage is not yet over."

Another clipping in my possession corroborates the testimony of the New York Times. This clipping from the Washington Post of April 28 gives an account of a speech which Senator CALDER, of New York, delivered before the City Club of Washington. The greater portion of the clipping is as follows:

CALDER PRAISES NEW YORK'S EXEMPTION PLAN—TO RELIEVE NEW HOUSES FOR TERM OF 10 YEARS—NEEDED IN DISTRICT—SENATOR TELLS CITY CLUB THIS WOULD STIMULATE ALL BUSINESS.

"Unless business men of this country foster house construction by private builders the Government in self-defense will be forced to go into the housing business," declared Senator WILLIAM M. CALDER in an address before the members of the City Club at their weekly luncheon forum yesterday afternoon.

Senator CALDER predicted that with a national shortage of more than 1,000,000 homes, immediate measures must be taken to stem the emergency. He urged that Congress be awakened to the need of taking present penalties off private builders.

"From a lifetime experience as a housebuilder, I would say that material and labor costs apparently are as low as they are going to be," said Senator CALDER. "By passing the proper laws to encourage private building, the Government, which is really responsible for the shortage through its war-time restrictions, can start an immediate and extensive resumption of house building."

RAPS MASSACHUSETTS PLAN.

Pointing to the danger that other States would adopt the Massachusetts plan of house building by municipalities. Senator CALDER urged instead the adoption of the so-called New York plan under which new housing is exempted from local taxation for 10 years, thus encouraging private builders.

"In the six weeks that this plan has been in effect now in New York City," he said, "it has proved a tremendous stimulus. Already the building permits issued show contemplated increased expenditures of more than $10,000,000 over the same period last year. There is going to be a tremendous construction of one and two family houses in the outlying boroughs of New York."

Citing the Washington situation as fully as bad as New York's, Senator CALDER advised his audience to organize and seek passage of a similar law here.

HELPS ALL BUSINESS.

"You have got to organize to impress this matter on Congress," he said, "as I find it very difficult to impress them of the same situation nationally. You would find, however, that such a law would bring a great stimulus to business here. It would not only establish a proper supply of homes, but it would increase the sale of building materials and all the furnishings that go into a home, as well as affording employment which would bring new buyers here.

"There would be little if any increase in other taxes, as only the improvements are exempted and the land is taxed as usual, and while it may add a bit to your school, police, and fire-protection bills, the amount would be so small that it would be absorbed in the increased revenue coming from new business."

The above clippings show to what a large extent the exemption of housing improvements from taxation has benefited not only the building industry but all lines of business in New York City in the comparatively brief period since the amendment was adopted. The fourth of my revenue bills imposes a 1 per cent tax on land values, but deducts all improvements and allows an individual exemption of $10,000. This bill, if adopted, would have precisely the same effect upon the Nation as the New York housing-exemption plan has had in New York City. There is not the slightest doubt that passage of this bill would promote immediate improvement of vacant city lots, boom the building industry, stimulate all branches of commerce, solve the housing shortage, and to a material extent abate the alarming unemployment that exists all over the country. The exemption of improvements from taxation has had this result wherever it has been tried, and the experience of New York merely is another example of what already has been proved in scores of municipalities in all parts of the world—namely, that the exemption of improvements from taxation and the imposition of a direct tax upon land always results in the rapid improvement of vacant property.

Now, more than ever before, we need such a construction campaign in America. We need it for two reasons, each equally valid. In the first place, as Senator CALDER pointed out, we have a national shortage of more than 1,000,000 homes, partly due to the war restrictions upon building and partly due to the fact that banks are demanding exorbitant interest rates and that the landlords and builders and financiers of our great cities have in more than one instance entered into conspiracies to prey upon the necessities of the people and to prevent building by illegitimate means. All this has been proved by the Building Trust investigation conducted by Mr. Samuel Untermyer.

UNEMPLOYMENT WOULD BE RELIEVED.

The second reason is that there must be some abatement of the serious state of unemployment which exists, unfortunately, throughout the length and breadth of the Nation. We are all hoping for a revival of business, which for some months has been in a depressed condition, but it is obvious that there can be no improvement in the situation unless men are given employment and provided salaries wherewith to purchase goods.

The prostration of purchasing power always is the final and most serious phase of a panic, and it must be plain to everyone that our national purchasing power must be greatly curtailed when Government estimates show that between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 breadwinners are out of work. The workers connected with the building trades comprise the largest single element in our industrial population, and any legislation that would promote activity in this line and provide them with employment would be a long step toward "normalcy." It would be like giving a meal to a man who has gone hungry for several days, and the stimulation in this one industrial field soon would affect other lines and strengthen and stimulate the entire business fabric.

It is not only by providing employment and assisting the building supply dealers that this bill would benefit business—important as this would be—but also through a needed reduction in rents. The land-values tax, with the exemption of improvements, would result in the improvement of vacant office "sites" as well as dwelling lots and the consequent building would lower rents for offices and factories as well as residential property.

HIGH RENTS DEPRESS BUSINESS.

Rents have continued to advance, while the cost of nearly everything else has fallen, and this is one of the prime causes of our business stagnation. Samuel Untermeyer brought out in his New York investigation that rents in that city, both for offices and residences, had advanced from 100 to 400 per cent since 1915 and were still advancing despite the general reduction in the price of commodities.

Why are rents high? Simply because we have so much vacant property in our large cities, which is allowed to remain unimproved while its owners pay comparatively small taxes and ultimately get rich off its increased value—value which has not increased through their efforts, but through the energy and enterprise of those who did improve their property and thus created social community values. Under our absurd system of taxation we penalize the producers and encourage land speculation, housing shortages, and high rents by making it easy, cheap, and profitable for property owners to hold their property out of use. The land situation is acute. In New York City, to be exact, there were 193,544 vacant parcels of land, about one-half of the area of the entire metropolis. Yet New York has one of the worst slum districts in the world. Chicago has 463,243 city lots held out of use, yet Chicago also has a slum district where the poor are forced to live in frightfully congested conditions that are insanitary and fatal to their best mental or moral development.

These conditions—the housing shortage and high rents for dwellings, offices, and factories—can only be corrected by the tax legislation as outlined by my program. These bills get down to the cause of these conditions; all other legislation proposed only palters with effects.

My bills will not only compel improvement of vacant lots through the exemption of improvements, but will have a tendency to break up the great estates, consisting of tax-exempt securities, which to a great degree are responsible for the high rate of interest which also is checking building. We now have in this country, according to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon—and some experts estimate the figure still higher—some $10,000,000,000 invested in tax-exempt securities. Our Federal taxes have risen to a point where they equal 2½ or 3 per cent of our net income, so that 5 per cent from tax-exempt securities is equivalent to 8 per cent from ordinary stocks and bonds. Therefore money lenders insist upon getting the same rate of interest as they could get by investing in tax-free securities and this increases interest rates in all departments of industrial activity and makes it difficult to finance building operations.

There is no constitutional method to make laws retroactive, and tax-exempt securities already created can not be touched, so that the only manner in which this condition can be corrected is through increased inheritance taxes. By levying such a tax, these huge collections of tax-exempt wealth can be broken up gradually and the money returned to productive channels. Every business man should welcome this bill for this reason.

The operation of the exemption of improvements and the graduated income tax would compel owners of vacant land to improve their property and also make for cheaper money with which to finance building. This would result in new dwellings, offices, and factories and competition and the law of supply and demand would speedily reduce rents. There is no doubt about the desirability of this. Rents are now excessive and many a factory is shut down and many a small store closed because the exorbitant rental swallowed all its margin of profit and forced its discontinuance.

Cheap hydroelectric power and more reasonable transportation rates also would be brought about by the adoption of this taxation program. Hydroelectric power is expensive, because we have allowed our water-power sites to be monopolized by great combinations of capital which hold them out of use. Tax this privilege and the holders of these natural resources would be compelled to develop these sites or sell them to some one who would. This would compel competition and bring about lower rates. The same process would lower transportation charges. The high price of fuel is one of the chief items in the cost of conducting railroads. Coal is high for the same reason hydroelectric power is costly. A few monopolists hold great areas of undeveloped coal fields and by keeping down production keep prices up. Taxation of land values would force the mining of these coal fields, and thus cheapen the cost of fuel and consequently lower railroad rates.

At the beginning of my address I stated that our ability to compete successfully in the world's markets depended upon reasonable transportation charges, cheap power, low interest, easy rents, and light taxes upon industry. I have conclusively demonstrated that these desirable conditions, which are the determinate factors of our national prosperity, can be brought about by a scientific and constructive taxation system, and can be brought about in no other way. If we want to restore the people's purchasing power, if we want to stimulate production, if we want to provide employment for our millions of idle men before winter descends upon us with its hardships, if we want to see the wheels of industry revolving again, we must cease protecting a few privileged monopolists and must stop placing such burdens upon our producers that they falter and gall beneath the load.

A certain British prime minister once boasted that he could "frame a system of taxation that will tax the last bite in the poor man's mouth and the last rag on his back, and he will not know what is robbing him." The bill which you are rushing through to-day, with limited debate and little opportunity for amendment, will accomplish the same purpose, although its iniquities are less skillfully concealed. The individual victim may not realize exactly what is wrong; but it is patent that the purchasing power of the people has dried up and business is depressed to-day largely because of an injurious method of taxation which this bill accentuates and perpetuates.

In view of the supreme importance of taxation and its direct relation to our national prosperity, it would seem to be wise for the administration to abandon its announced intention of "railroading through" the revenue measure in record time, and to give this matter serious consideration with the end in view that a tax bill might be devised in conformity with time-tested and accepted principles of economics, instead of being dictated by special interests whose greed is only equaled by their blind stupidity.

HON. EDWARD B. ALMON,

OF ALABAMA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921,

On the bill (H. R. 8245) to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, under the leave granted me to extend my remarks by placing in the RECORD an article issued by the American Farm Bureau Federation expressing its views upon the pending bill I respectfully submit the following:

FARMERS TELL PRESIDENT THEY OBJECT TO SHIPPING TAX BURDEN—PRESENT BILL ABANDONS PROGRESSIVE TAXATION AND RAISES PROPORTION OF TAXES TO BE COLLECTED OUT OF LIVING WAGE AND PAY ENVELOPE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 16.

President Harding yesterday showed much interest in the protest made to him by the American Farm Bureau Federation against the abandonment of the theory of taxing a man according to his ability to pay taxes for support of the National Government, the lowering of the surtaxes, and commenting favorably upon the proposed repeal of the transportation tax and establishing an authority for final settlement of disputed taxes. The American Farm Bureau Federation was represented by President J. R. Howard, Gray Silver, Washington representative, and H. C. McKenzie, special tax representtaive of the federation, who presented the views of the federation as follows:

The membership of the American Farm Bureau Federation, now numbering more than 1,000,000 farmers, was delighted to see in your first message to Congress that "the country does not expect and will not approve a shifting of burdens." We therefore wish to call to your attention a number of changes in the new tax bill now before Congress which distinctly places a larger proportion of the tax burden on the shoulders of those who are least able to pay.

The new bill will raise the proportion to be collected out of the living wage and pay envelope from 26.4 per cent to over 50 per cent. In 1920 the percentage of tax raised by income and excess-profits taxes was 73.6 per cent of the total, and the amount raised by consumption and other taxes was 26.4 per cent. The burden of both the personal income tax and the excess-profits tax is on net income, and the repeal of one and cutting in two of the other is one effort to shift the burdens.

The flat tax on corporations will be easier to pass on to the consumer than the excess-profits tax.

MERITS AND FAULTS OF THE NEW TAX BILL.

We believe you will agree that there are two things that a good tax measure should do:

RAISE THE NECESSARY REVENUE—DISTRIBUTE THE BURDEN EQUITABLY.

The American Farm Bureau Federation believes there is grave doubt that this bill will accomplish either.

THE MERITS OF THE BILL.

It repeals the transportation tax, which should be the first to go.

It establishes authority for final settlement of disputed taxes, which is one of the administrative reforms most needed.

THE ERRORS OF THE BILL.

What does this bill do for corporations?

It relieves the most prosperous of the bulk of their taxes and adds to the burden of the less prosperous. It abandons the theory of progressive taxation, which is acknowledged to be correct, for a flat tax that will produce less revenue.

The tremendous drive being made to get rid of the excess-profits tax is made because it is generally acknowledged that the principles on which it is based are correct, and those interested are afraid that if once the Government gets in shape to efficiently administer it, they will never be able to have it repealed.

The lowering of the surtaxes is indefensible.

Senator SMOOT stated before the Finance Committee of the Senate that already persons with net incomes of $300,000 and up had invested two-thirds of their money in tax-free securities. This being true, why relieve them of the bulk of the tax on the other third?

Under the present law a man with an income of $300,000, all taxable, would pay $161,190, or 53.7 per cent, but with two-thirds of his assets invested in tax-free securities his tax is $31,190, or only 10 per cent on his net income. With an income of $500,000, all taxable, it would be $383,120, or 60 per cent, and with two-thirds tax free it is $66,860, or is 13.3 per cent. With an income of $1,000,000, taxable, it is $563,100, or 66.32 per cent, with two-thirds tax free it is $181,680, or 18 per cent. This is certainly letting them off easy.

And yet the new bill proposes to reduce their surtaxes from a maximum of 65 per cent to 32 per cent.

This should not be done until all their income is taxable.

The remedy for this situation is not the lowering of the surtaxes, but the abolition of tax-free securities, and Congress should see to this at once.

What does this bill do for the 90,000,000 people in this country whose incomes are below the income-tax level?

The burden of both the personal income tax and the excess-profits tax is on net income, and the repeal of one and cutting in two of the other is an effort to shift the burden, which is what the President alluded to in his first message to Congress, when he said:

"The country does not expect and will not approve a shifting of burdens."

The policy adopted in formulating this bill of estimating receipts at the possible maximum and expenditures at the possible minimum is financially unsound. Any business concern that based its solvency on such a procedure and in the "hope" that none of the funds would not be called for until the next year would go on the rocks. In this case the result would be an increased floating indebtedness when all financial authorities are agreed that one of the things most to be desired is the canceling of the floating debt before the refunding operations of 1920.

Expenditures are determined by the appropriation bills, which have been passed long since, not by juggling estimates.

There is no virtue or economy in lowering the Government income below the necessary expenditures.

The bill is dictated not by the general welfare, but by a mistaken notion of political expediency.

The promise to repeal the excess-profits tax was not demanded by or made to the farmers or the people in general, but to those who were interested in having their taxes lowered. It is contrary to the general welfare, and the mistake should be freely acknowledged.

The idea of social justice expressed by Secretary Hughes in his invitation to the allied Governments and to China should not only be applied to foreign nations but to our domestic tax bills as well.

The foundation on which this bill is built is the theory that the poor should pay the taxes and the rich accumulate more money.

The American Farm Bureau Federation's criticism of the present bill is based upon its creed, which is as follows:

1. The measure of a man's ability to pay taxes for the support of the National Government is net income, and the taxes should be levied and collected on that basis.

2. The rate should be progressive—that is, the larger the income the higher the rate.

3. As this is the country of all the people, all the people should have some part in supporting the Government; and a certain proportion of the taxes may, therefore, justly be raised by means of the tariff and other consumption taxes.

4. While recognizing that the first concern in any tax measure is the raising of revenue, its collateral effects must not be lost sight of, and in so far as is practicable the taxes should be laid so as to tend to the distribution of wealth among the many and not to its concentration in the hands of the few.

FARM BUREAU RECOMMENDATIONS.

1. Economy.
2. Keep the excess-profits tax; revise the administrative features and establish local boards of assessment and adjustment in each district. Establish authority to which cases can be referred for final adjustment.
3. Do not lower the surtaxes on individual income.
4. Raise approximately 75 per cent of the taxes from income and excess-profits taxes and 25 per cent from consumption taxes.
5. When the financial condition of the Treasury will warrant the reduction of taxes, begin with those that will do the greatest good to the greatest number.
6. Take the necessary steps to stop the issuing of tax-free securities.

Very truly, yours,

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION,
J. R. HOWARD, President.

OF

HON. CLEVELAND A. NEWTON,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, there are two kinds of beverages. One is a cereal beverage, which is made by extracting the soluble portions of grain, then putting the food products thus extracted through a carbonizing process. The other is a sugar beverage, a carbonated drink of which sugar forms a basic element, and to which some flavoring extract is added. The major portion of soft beverages may be classified as fruit juices and grain juices. A cereal beverage is a grain juice. When you extract the fluid from fruits and berries and apply the carbonizing process you have a fruit juice, of which sugar forms an additional element. They are all soft drinks. They are all sold upon the same market in competition with each other. They are all in the same class and they should all be treated alike when the taxing power of Congress is applied.

Under the present law a tax of 15 per cent ad valorem is levied upon the manufacturer of cereal beverages, while a tax of 10 per cent ad valorem is levied upon the manufacturer of sugar beverages. There never was any justification for this discrimination, and it can only be accounted for by remembering the dominance of the prohibitionist in Congress and the prejudice which they had against beer and the belief which prevailed among the prohibitionists that a cereal beverage is a near-beer. It must be conceded, however, that the man who regards the average cereal beverage as a near-beer is not very proficient in his judgment of distance.

The bill now under consideration by this House at the time it was written placed a tax of 2 cents per gallon upon sugar beverages; and that provision is still in the bill. The bill, at the time it was written, placed a tax of 15 cents per gallon upon cereal beverages. Upon what theory such an exorbitant tax was placed, or what justification the committee could have given for such a gross discrimination, I am unable to conceive. A hearing being impossible on account of the lack of time, individual members of the committee were appealed to. The committee reduced the tax upon cereal beverages to 12 cents per gallon. Further appeals were made to the committee by those of us who felt that an unjust discrimination was being made. The committee then again reduced the tax to 6 cents per gallon. Again we appealed to the committee and protested against this unfair discrimination, and again the committee made a reduction in the tax upon cereal beverages to 4 cents per gallon. This makes the tax upon cereal beverages 100 per cent higher than the tax upon sugar beverages, while the tax under the law now in force, which is to be superseded by the bill now under consideration, fixed the tax upon cereal beverages only 50 per cent higher than the tax upon sugar beverages. I insist that this discrimination is indefensible. These beverages are all in the same class; they are all soft drinks; they all compete in the same market, the only difference being that the one is made from sugar and fruit, while the other is made from grain.

To begin with, it costs more to manufacture a cereal beverage than it does to manufacture a sugar beverage. No expensive machinery, no elaborate buildings, no expensive freight in the assembling of ingredients is reqnired in the manufacture of ginger ale, Coca-Cola, sarsaparilla, grape juice, root beer, or any of the drinks of this class, while in the manufacture of a cereal beverage the barley is shipped from the North, the rice from the South, the hops from the East, West, and Europe, and the increased freight rates constitute an enormous element of expense. Furthermore, the materials which go to make up a cereal beverage are harvested only once a year and the manufacturer must, of necessity, have large sums of money tied up in materials. Furthermore, the machinery, buildings, and labor are far more expensive in the manufacture of cereal beverages.

The sugar-beverage manufacturer can procure a tank car full of sirup; he can place the sirup and other necessary ingredients in a vat and mix it; he can bottle it the next day and upon the following day it is ready for the market. It is different with a cereal beverage. To make a cereal beverage it is first necessary to go through all the processes of making beer; then the alcohol must be extracted. In doing this 40 per cent of the fluid content is lost. For instance, the manufacturer makes 1,000 barrels of beer of the best grade and such as was sold upon the market in former years. He must then proceed to eliminate the alcohol. When this is done there is only 600 barrels of cereal beverage left. He has 40 barrels of alcohol which, in its pure condition, he can sell upon the market at this time for less than 25 cents per gallon, because under the prohibition law now in force alcohol must go through an expensive chemical process in order to render it unfit for internal use before it can be placed upon the market. Then, too, a cereal beverage when manufactured and bottled is not ready for immediate consumption. It must be ripened six months before it is ready for the market. Thus, it will be readily observed that it is far more costly to produce a cereal beverage than it is to produce a sugar beverage.

On the other hand, I have investigated the market prices of sugar beverages. I find that cereal beverages are being sold by the manufacturers of this country for an average price of $1.10 per case, consisting of two dozen bottles, while I find that sugar beverages are being sold by the manufacturer at a much higher price. The margin of profit is immensely greater upon sugar beverages than it is upon cereal beverages. It seems to me that the amount of tax levied by this Congress ought to be determined by the profit yielded in an industry, and by the ability of the manufacturer to pay, and if you apply this rule in fixing a tax upon beverages, the tax upon sugar beverages will be higher than the tax upon cereal beverages.

The present tax of 15 per cent ad valorem upon cereal beverages has been found by practical operation to amount to an average tax of 5.6 cents per gallon. If the amendment proposed by the committee prevails, the tax upon cereal beverages will be 4 cents per gallon; to this must be added the tax of 5 cents per pound, which this bill proposes upon carbonic acid gas and which must be used in the manufacture of cereal beverages. The experts tell me that this tax will amount to 1 cent per gallon upon cereal beverages, making a total tax in the present bill of 5 cents per gallon, which is only six-tenths of 1 cent less than the present tax upon cereal beverages, while the tax upon sugar beverages will be reduced from approximately 4 cents per gallon to 3 cents per gallon when gas tax is added.

Members of the Committee on Ways and Means feel that having cut the tax from 15 cents per gallon down to 4 cents per gallon they have been abundantly considerate of the cereal beverage industry; but, as a matter of fact, to place a tax upon one kind of nonintoxicating beverage 100 per cent higher than the tax upon another kind of beverage in the same class is an unjustifiable discrimiation, and to have placed a tax 750 per cent higher, as was done in the first instance, was simply indefensible. No discrimination ought to be made. They are all in the same class, and they ought as a matter of justice to be treated alike.

Furthermore, the cereal-beverage manufacturers of this country have been losing money during the past two years under a tax of 5.6 cents per gallon. I challenge you to go to the Internal Revenue Department of this Government and show me a single cereal-beverage manufacturer in the United States who has earned enough income in the past two years to pay an income tax. I challenge you to show me a single cereal-beverage manufacturer in the United States who has earned enough to enable it to pay a 1 cent dividend to its stockholders. If you will go to the Treasury Department you will find that 470 permits were issued last year to cereal-beverage manufacturers in the United States. You will also find that only 235 have been issued this year. This means that if this discrimination continues and Congress will not be fair to this industry, the industry will soon be destroyed.

If 4 cents is a reasonable tax for cereal beverages, then certainly the tax upon sugar beverages ought to be equally high. If 2 cents per gallon is a sufficient tax for sugar beverages, then it certainly ought to be no higher for cereal beverages.

I have made sufficient investigation to know that the larger cereal beverage manufacturers of this country are actually losing money. Sensible business men will not continue in an industry of this kind. The cereal beverage industry last year furnished a market for 15,000,000 bushels of barley, for 15,000,000 pounds of hops, for 600,000,000 pounds of rice, and it gave employment to approximately 75,000 men. Unless this unfair discrimination is corrected before this bill is sent to the President for his signature, and an opportunity given for the cereal beverage industry of this country to live, then this market will be destroyed and approximately 75,000 men will be thrown out of employment at a time when it is next to impossible for them to procure employment elsewhere.

I do not contend that to destroy the cereal beverage industry of this country, which last year paid into the Treasury of the United States the sum of $16,000,000 in taxes, will destroy the market for the barley, rice, and hops which are now being used in this industry, for I am conscious of the fact that thousands of families, who are now using a nonintoxicating cereal beverage will, when they are deprived of that beverage resort to home brew. They will consume the hops and the barley and the rice all right; they will produce a beverage which contains from 8 to 10 per cent alcohol, which is not healthful and which is not wholesome, and upon which this Government will not collect one cent of tax, but which, on the contrary, will make technical criminals out of thousands of good American citizens and which will breed disrespect for the law. I voted against prohibition not because I was opposed to temperance, because I will join hands with any man in the promotion of that virtue. I voted against prohibition because I did not believe it was practicable or enforceable, because I thought it would breed intemperance and disrespect for the law, and I believe a test of nearly two years of prohibition in this country has vindicated my judgment. You can not enforce any law in the violation of which the people see no moral turpitude. You do not have to write a law making it a crime to commit murder, robbery, or arson or rape in order to convince any American citizen that any of these acts are wrong. On the other hand, you can not make the average American citizen believe that it is wrong for him to make or drink a mild wine or beer containing a nonintoxicating quantity of alcohol, merely because Congress writes a law declaring it a crime. And those acts which are regarded crimes in laws written by Congress ought to be acts in which the average American citizen would regard as wrong in the absence of any law.

What are the conditions in this country to-day? Instead of having a few hundred licensed breweries regulated by law, making a wholesome beverage with a prescribed and reasonable amount of alcohol and paying hundreds of millions of dollars into the Treasury of the United States in taxes, when we are in such dire need of funds, we have hundreds of thousands of home brewers who are made law violators and many of whom are making an unwholesome brew with a high percentage of alcohol and who are paying no taxes to the Government whatsoever, and in addition thereto we have bootleggers and border-runners and crooked prohibition enforcement agents from one end of this land to the other. If the prohibitionists in this country are sincere in their desire for temperance, if they want to end lawlessness, if they want to strike a deathblow to the bootleggers of this country, if they want to save millions of dollars, which is now in great measures being wasted in an attempt at prohibition enforcement, and if they are willing to turn lawlessness into order and at the same time produce hundreds of millions of dollars of revenue for the Treasury of this country, let them have the courage of their conviction and advocate the licensing and taxing of mild wine and beer. That this is the solution and the only solution and that it will come I have not the remotest doubt. I have reason to know that prohibition leaders and lobbyists who have infested this Capitol and with the best organized political machine ever formed in this country have intimidated Congressmen and Senators into voting for radical and un-American prohibition provisions against both conscience and judgment, are fully conscious that this is the only solution of this most vexing problem. If they have the moral courage which the crusader ought to have, and the patriotism to serve their country best, they will come before Congress without delay and will advocate the licensing and manufacturing of a mild wine and beer, which will satisfy the demands of the American people and will remove them from the temptation of the illicit distiller and the ruthless bootlegger and which will increase temperance and sobriety, will promote respect for law and Government, and will provide funds for the Treasury at a time when the country needs them as it never needed them before.

HON. WILLIAM A. OLDFIELD,
OF ARKANSAS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921.

Mr. OLDFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing two tables prepared for me by Mr. Howard Clinton Beck, certified public accountant, from the State of Michigan.

The first of these tables is an illustration and comparison of the effect of the proposed law with regard to excess profits.

The second table illustrates how the very rich individuals are relieved of taxation under the provisions of the proposed law.

Mr. Beck has rendered a distinctive service to the Congress and the country by submitting these tables. They are absolutely correct. No expert in the Treasury Department, or elsewhere, can controvert these tables.

I desire to place them in the RECORD to-day, so that Members of the House of both parties may have the facts before them during the remainder of the debate on the bill:

EFFECT OF THE REPEAL OF THE EXCESS-PROFITS TAX.

The new revenue bill reported by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives contains a provision for the repeal of the present excess-profits tax on corporations and an increase in the normal tax from 10 to 12½ per cent.

The effect of this proposed law on those corporations whose invested capital is from $5,000 to $10,000,000, and who are earning from 5 per cent to 50 per cent thereon, is shown in the following exhibit.

The figures between the heavy black lines is the amount by which their taxes will be increased: the figures to the right and below the second black line is the amount by which their taxes will be reduced.

The above comparison is upon the basis that the surtax upon all incomes above $68,000 shall be 32 per cent. No change is made in the rates of surtax on incomes of $68,000 or less, nor is there any change made in the normal tax rate. Exemption is taken in the above comparison at $2,000.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. BENJAMIN K. FOCHT,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted to me to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I herewith insert an interview by Benjamin Norton with William H. Woodin, president of the American Car & Foundry Co., which is as follows:

William H. Woodin might be called a car builder by birth, his father having been in the business before him. After leaving the school of mines at Columbia University 30 years or more ago, he went to Berwick, Pa., his native place, and commenced in a moderate way with the Jackson & Woodin Car Manufacturing Co. This is now one of the subsidiary plants of the American Car & Foundry Co. Later on Mr. Woodin became general superintendent of the Berwick Works and finally its president. He became district manager of the Berwick plant, under the American Car & Foundry Co., in 1899. He was afterwards assistant to the president of the American Car & Foundry Co., and finally became its president. This office he has held for the past five or six years.

During his days at Berwick Mr. Woodin was something of a political factor in the affairs of the community, and at one time was candidate for Congress in the seventeenth Pennsylvania congressional district. He now resides in New York City and has become a consequential figure in the life of the metropolis.

The American Car & Foundry Co. is very large; in fact, it is the largest organization of the kind in the United States. And when a concern of its dimensions can pay 7 per cent dividends on its preferred shares, of which there are $30,000,000 outstanding, and 12 per cent on its common stock, consisting of a like amount, it is fair to say that American Car & Foundry is exceedingly prosperous.

When the company was organized, 20 or more years ago, a large number of independent car companies were taken over. To-day there are 16 plants located in various parts of the country, all under the one management. With these facilities and a working capital now of nearly $24,000,000, there is little in the way of car building that the company can not undertake. On the average it employs some 25,000 operatives, and the combined plants have capacity enough to turn out 93,600 freight cars a year, not to speak of 1,560 passenger cars, over 1,090,000 car wheels, and 84,000 and 265,000 tons, respectively, of gray iron castings and bar iron.

In the language of the street, American Car & Foundry is "some company," and it is in the hands of a master.

OPTIMISTIC.

"Times are bound to be better before long," Mr. Woodin said. "There is a definite limit to the length of time depression can continue in this country. The immensity of the United States and its opportunities, still very large, for growth and expansion are the ruling factors which must make for a great business revival sooner or later. The revival may not come about next month; it may not come about for several months; but it is in sight, and it is bound to materialize eventually.

"I am a great believer," Mr. Woodin continued, "in statistics, especially when based on, say, 10-year averages. I do not assert that changes for better or worse can be estimated by means of statistics with perfect exactness; I simply mean that statistics enable us to judge pretty closely what a given trend is.

"It is to a certain extent on such statistics that I base much of my confidence in the future of railroad-equipment buying. The roads have had a pretty hard time of it for the last few years. They have been compelled to forego a great part of the renewals and reequipment which, according to the figures they actually needed. To-day the railroads are hungry, so to speak, for every form of equipment, and the time is fast approaching when renewals, considering all the circumstances, will have to begin on a very large scale.

"It is my own belief," the president of the American Car & Foundry Co. went on, "that the American railroads are worse off to-day, particularly as regards equipment, than they ever were before. It will take a very long time and vast sums of money to put them back into condition. Repair tracks are literally covered with cars awaiting attention. And as for new equipment, the needs of our railroads I believe to be tremendous."

DOES NOT FAVOR STEEL CARS.

The president of the American Car & Foundry Co. incidentally is not a believer in all-steel cars. "My company is in a position to build cars of either wood or steel. But I don't believe there is any economy in steel cars for certain classes of freight. If used for carrying coal, for instance, steel cars deteriorate very quickly. The elements affect them in a most amazing way, and sulphur from the coal and other detrimental substances get in their fine work in a very short time.

"At any rate, the comparative merits of steel cars and wooden cars constitute an exceedingly fascinating subject and it will be interesting to see how things work out."

FUTURE OF THE RAILROADS.

Getting back to his original subject, Mr. Woodin stated that he believed "we car builders can depend upon our works being very busy places, sooner or later.

"Moreover," he continued, "although I am talking to you entirely from the standpoint of the car builder, what I have said about the road's car needs is equally true of their needs, I think, as regards locomotives, buildings, bridges, and tracks. It is the scope of these requirements, in my opinion, which will ultimately prove the basis for a general revival in business.

"Of course, the railroads will have to get stronger financially before they can start their buying; but when everybody realizes how much rail reconstruction will do for industry and business in general there will be little doubt of the outcome. Railroad buying means everything to everybody."

Mr. Woodin has little patience with those who question the future of the railroading business in this country. "Here and there," he agreed, "there may be a disposition to belittle the future of the railroads, but the facts don't warrant it. The American railroads are here to stay. If anyone has any idea that they have even seen their best days, he is very much mistaken. These great thoroughfares, these 'continental arteries,' are the backbone and mainstay of this country. They will not only remain in existence, they will keep on growing.

"As I said before," he went on, "it will take a long time and many millions of dollars to put our railroads back into first-class condition. But they will get back," emphatically; "you can rest assured of that."

"As for the country itself, I am a great believer in its future and I think everybody else should be, too. Ten years from now we Americans will look back and smile at the troubles that are vexing us so terribly to-day; and we will wonder why, with what we had in store, we didn't exercise a little more hope and confidence. There's ample foundation for both."

And, if the interviewer may inject an opinion, ample room for both, as well.

EUROPEAN IMPRESSIONS.

President Woodin recently returned from a European tour. The particular object of his trip was to obtain first-hand impressions of Europe's industrial potentialities, her ability to compete with America, particularly her ability to meet those of her own needs which this country supplied during the war.

"I have to admit, with regret," said Mr. Woodin, "that my company can't expect much business from over there. So far as railroad equipment goes, at least, I think Belgium, France, and Germany will be well able to take care of Europe's requirements, furnishing pretty much everything she needs that she can't produce herself. As for Russia, I believe her needs will be met largely by Germany."

"By the way," Mr. Woodin interjected, "what a sorry state of affairs Russia presents just now!

"Generally speaking, though," he went on, "the business recovery in Europe has already been striking."

President Woodin is more optimistic as to the opportunities in countries to the south. "I believe we can count on getting a lot of business from the South American countries. We will probably get plenty of orders from this quarter.

"On any subject," Mr. Woodin added, "people have their own ideas. Sometimes they are free to express these ideas; other times they are not. On the subject of foreign trade I have an idea which I am free to express. It is, the importance of reciprocity. Reciprocity in the form of a combination of free trade and protection, for example; or reciprocity in some other form; but in any event reciprocity. I believe in it thoroughly. In my opinion it is the basis upon which trade in general should be established. It was James G. Blaine's theory. It's still good. Let anyone calmly consider it and I am quite sure he will agree with me."

VIEWS IN WASHINGTON.

After a good deal of discussion between the powers that be at Washington and the railroad executives, a plan for rehabilitating the railroads has been worked out and has been finally embodied in a message to Congress from President Harding.

The plan involves no appropriation by Congress; but it will put the railroads in funds for materials and other much-needed requirements. There are no complications, and, in the ordinary course of events, there is no reason why Congress should not act on the President's suggestion.

Some $500,000,000 will then be available through the avenue of the War Finance Corporation.

It has taken some time to advance matters to the present point, and the administration and the railroad executives are certainly to be congratulated upon having accomplished so much in so little time.

Government control of the railroads, as every one knows, results awfully. No one can tell what might have happened if Government operation had continued very much longer. It is easy to see how the railroads have suffered, and why their demands for something to rehabilitate with now are so extremely urgent. Anyone familiar at all with railroad operations can readily appreciate the present necessities, as well as the constructive disposition of the administration now in power. Once Congress acts progress will be very rapid.

This is a subject in which it was natural to suppose Mr. Woodin would be much interested. I put the question to him.

"You ask me how I like the way affairs are going at Washington," said Mr. Woodin. "I will tell you just what I think: We are getting genuine, constructive action from the present administration. We need it, and they are giving it to us—they are working—busy all the time—doing things—things that count! There is no doubt of that.

"The railroads, in particular, need constructive attention in Washington. From what has been accomplished so far, I believe we can expect substantial results from that direction. Indeed, it is wonderful to me how they seem to grasp the situation down there. From the President down everybody seems alive to the overwhelming demand of the hour.

THE FUTURE.

"I hope before very long," said Mr. Woodin, in conclusion, "to see our 16 plants in full operation, helping to fill what, in my opinion, will be the greatest demands the railroads ever made upon us. I am inclined to believe that the eastern roads are better off, in the matter of equipment, than the western, but they all need a surprising lot of new equipment, as well as repairs of all sorts."

OF

HON. LEONARD S. ECHOLS,

OF WEST VIRGINIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. ECHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I do not support this bill because I believe it is perfect in its provisions. No tax system has ever been perfect. No human agency in the very nature of things can evolve a tax system that works exact justice to everyone affected thereby. The bill will perhaps prove as satisfactory and will result in as nearly equalizing the burden of taxation as any that can be evolved under the very difficult circumstances under which the Congress is forced to enact a tax law.

The bill substantially carries into effect the platform of the Republican Party adopted last year and the promises made to the people during the campaign. The minority appears to be opposed to the bill as a body. That is to be expected. No one familiar with the record of that party on questions of taxation expects it to support a tax measure that is workable. The Congress and the country recall that in 1914 that party was, under authorization by Congress, levying a so-called war tax for the purpose of obtaining revenue to take care of the current expenses when we were not at war, nor were we afflicted with the immediate results of war. Their record in conducting the fiscal affairs of the Nation is not a sufficient guaranty to induce the Republicans to look to them for advice in framing a revenue bill under present world industrial conditions. Almost the whole argument presented is against those provisions repealing the excess-profits tax law and reducing the surtax, although President Wilson and Secretaries of the Treasury McAdoo and Houston recommended these amendments while in office. They overlook the fact that the head of every family with three dependent children—and this is the average family—will pay no income taxes under this bill unless his income is in excess of $3,700.

The great mass of people about whom that party seems so much concerned belong to this class. Outside of a few months during the war and a few months thereafter, the heads of families and their dependents coming within the class whose net income is less than $3,700 constitute, perhaps, more than 90 per cent of the population of the country. In addition to the increased exemptions which affect so many people, repeal of the tax on clothing, the tax on ice cream and soda water, insurance, and the stamp tax on proprietary medicines will relieve this great mass of people from burdensome and annoying taxation.

There are now more than five and one-half million people out of employment. Who can say how many of that five and one-half million people who come within the exempted class under this bill are out of employment because of the tremendously high rate of taxation that is imposed under existing law? That it is one of the big items causing industrial depression no one informed will deny. The excess-profits tax and the high rate of surtax have driven millions of dollars out of business, and it has sought seclusion in nontaxable securities, of which there are $15,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000 now outstanding in the country.

Under the proposed bill it has been demonstrated that a man with a large invested capital and doing a large business must make a profit of 16.66 per cent before he realizes a net profit of 4½ per cent. It therefore naturally follows that a man of large means must be quite sure that he is going to make a profit of 16.66 per cent, or else he will invest his capital in nontaxable securities that bear a rate of 4½ per cent or more. The average business of the country does not produce a return on invested capital of anything like 16.66 per cent. The great difficulty about taxing incomes at extremely high rates is that it fails to produce revenue. As pointed out, taxes from incomes of $300,000 or more have fallen off since 1916 from $950,000,000 to $270,000,000 in 1920; yet it is a well-known fact that incomes in 1920 were greater than any preceding year. The incomes did not fall off, but the tax produced from the incomes did fall off.

It has been the history of taxation that when any government or any subdivision of a government undertakes to impose unreasonable rates upon incomes or upon intangible property, the tax from those sources ceases to produce substantial revenue. As was pointed out by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MILLS], that State at one time had a tax imposing a rate of 40 per cent on intangible personal property, and while that high rate was in existence the great State of New York collected less than $1,000,000 from that source.

The law was changed. The same argument was made against the change as is made by the minority here to-day, but in spite of that argument the intelligence of New York saw the mistake, the tax rate was reduced from 40 per cent to 3 per cent, and to-day that State is collecting instead of $1,000,000 from that source approximately $35,000,000. That amount of revenue is substantial even in a State like New York.

It has been suggested during the debate on the pending bill that the Government should take all income over a specified amount, and that the inheritance or estate-tax provision should be amended so as to take all of an estate at the death of the owner above a specified amount. How utterly absurd. The proposition could not be sincerely made by any man who understands human nature. If such were the law there would be no income or estate above the limit fixed by law. Laws can never be made strong enough to compel a man to engage in a business and earn an income if the whole of that income is to be taken by the Government or to hold an estate until he dies if the estate is to be taken by the Government. Such a proposition violates the cardinal principles of every successful scheme of taxation known to civilized nations. I favor the principle of the State and the Nation taking a just share of the income of men of large means and a fair proportion of the estates of great value at the death of their owners. I am not so impractical as to believe all can be taken.

I took the trouble a few years ago to investigate the returns of intangible property in one of the smaller cities of the country. The State in which that city is located imposes the same rate upon intangible property as is imposed upon all other property. I found that less than $400,000 of intangible property was on the tax rolls. Yet at that time there was $10,000,000 deposited in the banks of that city, and perhaps that represented about one-half the amount of intangible property taxable in the city. The income received from that source under a law that imposed a high rate of taxation could have been stricken from the tax roll, and the taxpayers of the city would never have known the difference. The citizens of that State who know the effects of such rates upon intangible property have been advocating a change for many years, but every time the change is advocated they are met with the same old argument that is brought forward here to-day.

Many of the countries of Europe have imposed an income tax. In those countries where reasonable rates were imposed they were found to be a complete success. In Italy, where a rate of only 20 per cent was imposed, that law was a complete failure, because the people of the country considered the rate too high; and in spite of the history of high-rate income tax laws now before us, our friends on the minority side propose to continue a tax rate of 70 per cent on net incomes; and in spite of the fact that the existing law imposing such tax is now rapidly failing, as is shown by the fact that the revenue from that source has fallen off from $950,000,000 in 1916 to $270,000,000 in 1920. Any scheme of taxation that retards the business industry of the country to such an extent that it throws the wage earner out of employment is a failure. I am not so much concerned about whether "A" or "B" corporation pays just the amount of taxes in the name of the corporation as my Democratic friends think it ought to pay as I am about seeing the wheels of industry of this country turn around. When the wheels of industry are moving I can content myself in the happy knowledge that every man who wants to support himself and his family will be able to do so. While on the other hand, with the wheels of industry dead, I know that the average man is unable to provide for himself and his family in spite of the fact that there may be a dead tax statute on the books that undertakes to impose a high rate of taxation on corporations. The question of whether or not their proposition can be enforced so as to produce revenue does not seem to concern our friends on the minority side. Their desire is satisfied if they can secure the enactment of a statute that appears to require heavy taxes from the millionaires and the rich corporations. They can "point with pride" to such a statute next year during the campaign. It would be a failure as a revenue measure, but it would be the handiwork of a party that needs an issue.

They are very much disturbed because the bill does not impose as much tax as they would like to see imposed upon the corporations of the country. With 100 years' experience in dealing with the taxation of corporations they have not yet learned that a corporation is nothing but a lawful combination of individuals. They do not yet know that the taxation of a corporation is nothing more nor less than taxation of the stockholders of that corporation. They have not yet learned that a corporation is not a thing separate and apart from the individuals that compose the corporation. They point to the fact and seem to be alarmed about it that the corporations of the country for the last five years have produced income amounting to $47,000,000,000.

Those same corporations paid in the name of the corporations approximately $10,000,000,000 taxes, and in addition to that hundreds of millions more were paid by their shareholders from the dividends received from the corporations. They overlook the fact that practically all of the great industries of the country, including the railroads, the coal mines, the oil and gas industry, the telephone and telegraph industry, the building industry, water transportation, merchandising, and even farming, are now carried on by corporations. Of course, the great bulk of income in this country is produced by corporations.

No government or subdivision of a government has ever been able to provide a tax that would catch intangible securities, if the rate upon those securities was so high as to make an investment therein an unprofitable investment. The same is true in any scheme that imposes unreasonable rates on income. No man who has ever given this subject any thought whatever, and is possessed of the courage to express his honest conviction, believes that it is better to have upon the statute books of the country a law imposing a rate of taxation so high that it can not be enforced than it is to impose reasonable rates and collect the revenue produced by them.

This Government has tremendous obligations to meet. The party in power is not responsible for those obligations, but the party in power has the courage to meet them, and they can be met only by taxing the people of the country. That taxation will be burdensome, no one will deny. That a part of that taxation is the result of the incompetency of the last administration no one with intelligent understanding will deny. Three billions of dollars wasted by the Shipping Board, $1,000,000,000 wasted in aircraft operations, and $2,600,000,000 in appropriations growing out of Government control of the railroads are some of the consequences of returning a Democrat to the Presidency and electing a Democratic Congress in 1916. The then majority party, now the minority party, having been the direct cause of these tremendous obligations of the Government and burdens upon the people, ought to be willing to come forward and support a tax measure that is reasonably equitable in its terms, instead of harping and criticizing those who are compelled to make provision for their extravagant waste.

HON. WYNNE F. CLOUSE,

OF TENNESSEE,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921,

On the bill H. R. 8245, to reduce and equalize taxation, to amend and simplify the revenue act of 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. CLOUSE. Mr. Speaker, never before in the one hundred and forty-five years of our national independence have the people of America expected and demanded more at the hands of an American Congress than they are to-day demanding and expecting of this body. Never before in the history of any nation were the people so suddenly and overwhelmingly enthralled and burdened with taxation and debt as were the American people in the brief period of eight years under the régime of Wilsonian democracy, and it is for us to put on the full armor of courage and with an abiding faith in the America of to-morrow strive with a determination to do or die in the supreme effort of bringing order out of chaos, economy from profligate waste, and prosperity from depression and distress.

With the national debt approximating the huge sum of $24,000,000,000, and with taxes so outrageously high and oppressive as to threaten disaster to the American people, it is not only well but proper that we carefully investigate and bring to the attention of our people the cause, or causes, for the deplorable condition in which we find ourselves; but that we should in frankness and candor present to them a remedy by which we may best solve the grave problems confronting us.

That the burdens of debt and taxation under which we are staggering is due in a large part to the fact that during the past eight years much of the substance and wealth of the Nation has been dissipated through reckless extravagance and profligate waste can not be denied; but that there are other and important fundamental principles of government involved which have contributed to the chaotic conditions prevailing, took the smoke out of the smokestacks of American factories and industries, with the consequence that 6,000,000 of our honest sons of American toil are roaming in idleness, is a fact which no honest man with average intelligence would for a moment undertake to contradict. One of the principles to which I allude is that of taxation, and I shall endeavor in the brief time allotted to undertake to demonstrate the truth of this assertion in language so simple and with facts so plain and convincing that my Pharisaical friends across the aisle may see the error of their way and turn their backs upon the satanic principles of "free trade" and high taxes before it is eternally and everlastingly too late. [Applause.]

Involved in the term "taxation" are two principles or modes under the Constitution of our Republic, one of which is direct and the other indirect; one of which imposes the burdens upon our own people, the other upon the people of other nations who seek to exploit our markets with the products of their toil. One has been conducive to the happiness and prosperity of our Nation and ourselves, the other invariably producing disaster and distress. One is American and is intended to benefit America, the other un-American, and whether intended to or not, does, as a matter of fact, benefit solely the foreigner by giving him the labor incident to production together with the profits derived therefrom. One is "protection," the other is "free trade"; and I want to discuss these questions fairly, that we may never again be ensnared into that pitfall that putrifies the peaceful paths of American progress. [Applause.]

We have thus far in this Congress corrected the discriminatory favoritism extended to the foreigner under "free trade," and now we propose to correct the evils of your income tax law so as to bring the $16,000,000,000 now invested in tax-exempt securities back into the channels of productive industry where it will contribute to the payment of the expense of government and relieve the burdens of the man of moderate means who is now bearing, in the main, the burdens of taxation.

The Democratic Party has preached for years that labor was oppressed, that business was shackled, and if the party once went into power it would reduce the cost of living, increase wages, bring business expansion, and widen our markets for the surplus products of our soil. You entered the campaign of 1912 joyfully proclaiming the doctrine of "new freedom," and prescribed it freely as the one and only panacea for all of the ills of the earth. Your then candidate, Wilson, declared "that what the men of this Nation needed was to sharpen their wits in competition with the rest of the world, and that of all things most needed was to break down the tariff wall of protection." Unfortunately for America your party went into power March 4, 1913, upon the promises heretofore enumerated, and the further general promise that you would better the conditions which had previously existed in this country under Republican rule. The success with which you met your pledges and fulfilled your promises will be written upon the pages of history in indelible letters of misery and blood and depict to the generations yet unborn the most tragic epoch in the history of the world. [Applause.]

That the horrible picture of your miserable failure may be shadowed with fairness and mercy I will take that period immediately following your induction into office, a time when all the world was at peace with mankind, that period covering the first 18 months of your administration and the first 11 months of your fallacious ideas of "freedom" and "free trade" and see whether or not you kept faith with the people. Whether or not you removed the shackles from business, reduced the cost of living, increased the wages of the laborer, expanded business activities, and widened the markets for American products.

In September, 1914, one and one-half years after you had been given the reins of government and 11 months after your Underwood free tariff law had been placed upon the statute books, the Department of Commerce, through your then Democratic Secretary, issued a statement showing, contrary to your pre-election preachments, that under your Underwood free tariff that importations had increased in the 11 months in which it had been in operation over what they were under a Republican tariff for a corresponding period, as follows:

Increase in importations.

Cattle	$11,968,347
Corn	9,775,179
Oats	7,984,053
Hides and skins	13,523,927
Fruits and nuts	8,201,183
Leather and tanned skins	5,926,782
Meat and dairy products	30,453,388
Paper and manufactures of	5,452,729
Flaxseed	7,741,139
Vegetables	4,791,525
Wool, manufactured	30,136,171
Wool, manufactures of	22,596,828
Sugar	8,829,374
Cotton, manufactures of	5,056,927
Fertilizer	5,026,772
Fish	3,239,031
Silk, manufactures of	3,441,080
Wheat	1,473,040
Sheep	483,546
Butter	1,517,019
Eggs	928,680

Thus we summarize your accomplishments for the first 11 months of your nefarious favoritism of foreigners under "free trade" as taking from the pockets of American citizens, American industry, and American labor the stupendous sum of $188,246,720 and scattering it broadcast among the nations of the Old World, making them richer and stronger and happier, while the strong and stalwart and honest son of American toil was thrown out of employment at home and finally forced to accept his morsel of food at the hands of a niggardly charity.

What was your record on widening the markets for the products of American toil? I quote from the same authority, which shows that for the first eight months of 1914, under the Underwood tariff law, that our importations from Canada increased from $78,786,141 in 1913 to $105,590,085 in 1914. Our exports in the same period of time to Canada decreased from $282,993,099 to $219,960,317, which shows that we sold to this country alone $63,033,676 less under "free-trade" laws than we were selling them under protective tariff legislation.

That your platform pledges to expand business was like all other promises that you ever made to the people, mere camouflage upon which to ride into office, can be demonstrated in no better way than by a comparison of bank clearings in 1912 and 1913, which shows that the clearances for 1912 were $4,175,000,000 greater than in 1913, although we had in the latter year only 10 months of Democratic administration and 3 months of free trade; but the winged angels of heaven and every sensible man of America knows that even that much democracy is enough to puncture the vitals of American industry and bring to the fireside and to every hearthstone of American labor both misery and despair. [Applause.]

During the first three months of the Underwood tariff we imported from foreign countries woolens and worsteds to the value of $7,664,370, or $5,410,360 more than was imported to America under a protective tariff during a corresponding period in 1912. Comparing April, 1914, with April, 1913, we bought from the foreigner $36,000,000 more and sold to them $37,000,000 less in a single month. Take the period of six months next after the taking effect of the Underwood bill, on October 3, 1913, and we find that our imports increased 37 per cent while our exports decreased 31 per cent.

With these figures taken at a time when the world was at peace and business in all countries normal, are you surprised that millions of men were idle in America, farmers on the verge of bankruptcy, business demoralized, and that you were within a year after your law became operative forced to appeal to Americans to "buy a bale of cotton" and save the farmer in his dire distress. [Applause.]

If we look to the record that you have made under this policy of "free trade" since the cessation of hostilities in Europe, it presents a far more distressing picture than that immediately preceding war. When the millions of European soldiers were disbanded and sent back to their homes to engage in civil pursuits, in production of things essential to life, we find that imports to this country begun at once to rise until to-day there is to be found in proud, progressive America no less than 4,000,000 men in idleness, due solely and alone to the dumping of foreign-made goods upon the markets of America. The last year of the Payne tariff bill—1912—we imported to this country foreign products to the value of $1,818,073,055, and I have prepared a statement showing the total imports of foreign merchandise during the years 1917, 1918, 1919, and 1920, and the gradual increase in such importations covering this period of time, which is as follows:

Merchandise imported.

Year.	Amount.	Increase.
1912	$1,818,073,055
1917	2,952,467,955	$1,134,394,900
1918	3,031,212,710	1,213,139,655
1919	3,904,364,932	2,086,291,877
1920	5,278,481,435	3,460,408,435

As the military forces of Europe are disbanded and permitted to return to civil life, we see an alarming increase in the importations of foreign goods that threatens the very foundation of our industries and the prosperity and happiness of American farmers and laborers.

These words of the immortal Lincoln should be taught in the classrooms of every public school in America:

> I do not know much about political economy, but I do know that when we purchase a ton of steel rails from Great Britain for $100 we get the rails and Great Britain gets the money, and when we produce the rails from our own mines and in our own mills we have both the money and the rails. When you buy goods made abroad you have the goods, but some one else has the money. When you buy goods at home we have both the goods and the money.

Not only do the facts show that your theory of taxation, in so far as a tariff on imports are concerned, is impracticable, but it conclusively demonstrates that the inevitable consequences of an adherence to the system is to stagnate business, demoralize commerce, destroy industry, handicap labor, burden the farmer, and at the same time increase the burdens of direct taxation to a point of absolute oppression. No system of taxation which takes from the shoulders of foreigners a tax levied as a privilege for them to enter our markets with their products and places that burden upon our own will ever, nor should ever, receive the approval of the great, intelligent masses of American men and women. [Applause.]

With the repeal of the Payne Tariff Act, which produced millions of dollars of revenue for defraying the expense of government, came the exorbitant rates under the so-called income tax law, which has done more to destroy honest business and increase the burdens of the common people than any unholy statute that was ever enacted into law. Then comes the surtax, which, when coupled together, places a premium upon indolence and has driven honest capital from productive industry into tax-exempt securities to the amount of $16,000,000,000, with the result that millions of honest men are thrown out of employment, the cost of living soars skyward, and the burdens of the common people and the great mass of moderate wage earners are tremendously multiplied. This form of taxation has proven itself to be the most unpopular, unscientific, and least productive of any and all forms of taxation to which we have ever resorted, and I am glad to say that the majority in this Congress has the power and the moral courage to right, in part at least, the wrongs that have been perpetrated in its unholy name, and thereby save to the already overburdened taxpayers of America the stupendous sum of $790,000,000 for the next calendar year.

By the provisions of the bill now under consideration we propose to repeal the excess-profits tax, effective as of January 1, 1922, and as a result of which taxes will be reduced according to the best estimates available $450,000,000 annually.

We reduce the surtax rates on individual incomes to 32 per cent, which means another saving of $90,000,000 for the year.

We propose to increase the exemptions of heads of families to $2,500 where the income is less than $5,000 per annum and increase the exemption from $200 to $400 for each dependent, thus giving to the ordinary wage earner and the individual of moderate income a further saving of $70,000,000 a year.

We repeal all transportation taxes, which will amount to approximately $262,000,000 annually, and also the tax on life insurance policies estimated to amount to $6,300,000.

These are but a few of the reductions in taxation which will result from the passage of this bill, but I point to them not with any pretention of being a prophet and predict that these reductions will be reflected in the dinner pail of every American citizen and the American dollar once again restored to its full purchasing power as in the days gone by. [Applause.]

Lest we forget, I want to point out to the American people in frankness the manner in which you kept faith with the people in reducing the high cost of living, which stands out as a monumental failure and will haunt your party to its grave. Through vacillating policies, inefficient administration, and vicious propensities to gain political vantage you Mac-a-dood-el-ed the railroads and "hoo-dood-el-ed" the people out of millions of dollars of hard-earned money. Under the indefensible, unsystematic methods inaugurated by you in the management of the railway systems of America the people have been unmercifully taxed, not only by direct contributions to the deficits arising but transportation rates have so increased from time to time that to-day the very foundation of commerce and industrial activity are threatened with annihilation.

Very recently I was talking to a gentleman from my State who told me of a certain purchase of a smokestack for a stationary boiler. The purchase was made in the city of Chattanooga and the cost of the stack was $64. It was delivered to the railroad and billed to McMinnville, Tenn., a distance of some 60 miles from Chattanooga, and when the purchaser appeared at the freight station in McMinnville to receive and receipt for the shipment he was advised that the freight charges were $167.25, or approximately two and one-half times the initial cost of the article. This is but one instance, but the principle involved applies in the shipment of every article of commerce, and the cost to the ultimate consumer is thereby and therein wholly reflected. You ask for the cause, and I answer: This outrageous charge upon transportation is due in a large measure to the fact that the railroads were made a political football under the management of Mr. McAdoo, when it was made possible for a scrub woman, engaged in the cleaning of spittoons and car windows, to draw a salary of $235 per month, while the refined and educated men and women of this great Nation were teaching the youth of the land, the men and women of to-morrow, in the schools and colleges of our country at the average wage of $62 per month. This is the reason: You have placed a premium upon inefficiency rather than upon merit and service. [Applause.]

These are but few of the many instances demonstrating that the prosperity and happiness of all the people of this great and influential Nation depends not upon petty, partisan politics but upon the broader principles of human justice, wisely administered for the benefit of America and Americans, without favoritism toward a foreign foe or special privilege to any class.

While I fully appreciate the magnitude of the problems with which the people of this Nation and the Members of this Congress are confronted, I am glad to be here and to contribute my part in the shaping of the future policies of America, to the end that we may grow in power and strength and justice until it can be said, indeed and in truth, that above every cottage, hut, and palace, all alike, the ægis of the Constitution rests, which is the spirit of liberty, the greatest attribute of God. [Applause.]

Internal Revenue Bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. JOSEPH D. BECK,

OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Saturday, August 20, 1921.

Mr. BECK. Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to take up the time of the House in the discussion of this bill, but I believe the people have a right to know why I can not support it. After adopting the rule under which this bill is being considered, there is no way by which I can offer amendments to the bill to make it conform to what I think is just and right or to make it conform to what I believe the people demand. There is much in the bill which I approve and which I believe will be approved by everybody; but there is more in it that I do not believe the people as a whole will approve.

The bill contains some things which ought to become law. It contains others that, in my judgment, should not become law. I believe there is more in the bill which should not become law than there is that should become law. Therefore I shall have to vote against what little good there is in it in order to protest against the many provisions which can not be justified by any sound principle of taxation that has been yet devised.

The provisions repealing the tax on freight, passenger, and express traffic are just. Those provisions should never have been enacted into law. But they were enacted by the votes of both Democrats and Republicans. Both sides of the House supported them. My Republican colleagues have offered no valid excuse for supporting them except to say they did it to uphold the administration. I am willing to uphold the administration when I think it is right but not when it is wrong. If we are here to simply "uphold the administration," then we better stay at home and save the taxpayers of the country nearly a half billion dollars in salaries and expenses of the Congress.

The administration features of the bill are no doubt an improvement over existing law, though I believe the bill would be much better had a quasi judicial body been created to settle disputes instead of a body which may become purely political.

A great deal has been made of the increase in the exemption of the income of the "average man," as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] calls him. If every "average man's" income reached $2,500 a year that exemption would only mean about $5 per family. But the average wages paid per family in this country and the average income of the farmers of the United States are far below the present exemption of $2,000, so that the benefit offered by this increase in exemption is of comparatively little consequence compared with the injustice of other provisions of the bill. The net income of the average farmer in the United States is less than $500, while that of the average wage earner is not any greater. Therefore, so far as the "average man" is concerned, this additional exemption of $500 means nothing at all.

Much is also made of the fact that the bill repeals the tax on soda water, ice cream, and toys. I am in favor of this repeal. These taxes should never have been invoked in the first place. Republicans as well as Democrats voted for them. If they were justifiable then, they are justifiable now. We needed the money then and we need it now and will need it so long as we owe $24,000,000,000 war debts and continue to build $40,000,000 battleships, which experts tell us will be useless before they can be completed. But I wonder how much the repeal of these so-called nuisance taxes means to the "average man." It is estimated that their repeal will mean a loss in revenue of about $30,000,000. I have never understood that the farmers and working people of the country are very heavy consumers of ice cream and soda water. But suppose they consumed all that has been consumed during the life of this law. What does it mean? Assuming there are five persons to the family, there are over 60,000,000 "average" people in the United States, and the $30,000,000 reduction in these nuisance taxes means less than 50 cents per capita. In my opinion, the repeal of these taxes does not mean 10 cents to the "average" man and his family. These taxes are nuisances, to be sure, and that is about all that can be said about them.

Another feature of this bill upon which great emphasis has been laid is that it taxes everybody alike. Whenever we bring about a condition where everybody will be fed alike, can be clothed alike, can be sheltered alike, can have recreation alike, can educate their children alike, can have freedom and independence alike, then will I be glad to vote for a bill that taxes everybody alike. But so long as we permit the railroads to take more out of the products of the farm than the farmer himself gets, so long as the packers are permitted to levy an unjust tax of millions of dollars upon the products of the farm, so long as large employers are permitted to tax wage earners to the bread line, just so long will I be opposed to any scheme of so-called equal taxation.

But let us see how this bill taxes everybody alike. Take a $10,000,000 corporation as an example. If this corporation is willing to operate on a 5 per cent income on invested capital, this bill increases its tax $12,450 over what it now pays under the present law. If it makes 6 per cent on invested capital, its taxes are increased $14,950. If it make 8 per cent, its taxes are increased $19,950. But if it does what this bill encourages it to do it will squeeze out of the consumer all the traffic will bear. Its taxes will then be reduced. If it makes 15 per cent, its taxes will be reduced from $275,260 to $187,250. It if wants to squeeze still more and make 25 per cent, its taxes are reduced from $645,260 to $312,250. But if it wants to make 50 per cent on invested capital, its taxes are reduced from $1,795,260 to $624,750, or about one-third of what it would be under existing law. What is true of the $10,000,000 corporation is true of the $5,000,000, the $2,000,000, the $1,000,000, half-million, and lesser corporations. This is one illustration of how we are told everybody is taxed alike under this bill. This is the effect of the repeal of excess-profits tax. It scraps the principle of taxing according to ability to pay.

Passing from the corporation to the individual, let us see how the repeal of the surtax law works out. If a man's income is $100,000 a year, his taxes are reduced $2,720. But if he has bad luck and only makes $1,000,000 his taxes are reduced $274,720; and if he has real bad luck and makes only $2,000,000 his taxes are reduced $604,720. One of the Treasury officials says that about 100,000 wealthy people in this country will be affected by this repeal and will be relieved of millions of dollars in taxes.

The effect of this law will be, first, to drive corporations into making huge profits; and, second, to either force the smaller ones out of existence or drive them into large combinations, and the people will pay the bills. What they will save by the repeal of the tax on freight, passenger, and express rates, on ice cream and soda water, on toys, and the additional exemption of $500 provided in this bill will not be a drop in the bucket compared with what the people will have to pay in huge profits to large combinations of wealth that are encouraged by this bill.

Another provision of this bill which seems indefensible to me is that which exempts those persons and corporations from taxation 80 per cent of whose incomes are derived from business done in foreign countries. A very plausible reason was offered for this exemption. It is said that it was done to place our own citizens on an equal footing with citizens of other countries in developing foreign trade. But here is what will happen. The railroad officials and their security holders have taught some of our captains of industry a great lesson. They have been organizing subsidiary companies, whose stock is owned by railroad officials and railroad security holders, for the manufacture and repair of cars and locomotives and have been taking this class of work out of shops owned by the stockholders of the railroads and placing it in these subsidiary companies at four and five times what it cost to do this work in the railroad shops, and in this way they have been bleeding the public of millions and millions of dollars. Failing to bleed the public of still more millions, they are coming in here with a bill next week that will enable them to reach over into the Treasury and take out $500,000,000 more.

Now, what will happen under this bill? Why, the tanners, the manufacturers of farm machinery, the coal barons, the makers of boots and shoes, the grain buyers, the Tobacco Trust, the millers, and dozens of others will form subsidiary companies to sell goods in foreign countries and will not pay a cent's tax on the millions they will probably make. They will pay nothing for the service Uncle Sam renders them in affording them the opportunity to make money abroad.

The parcel-post law is one of the most beneficent pieces of legislation ever enacted in this country. This law saves the people millions of dollars, both in cheap rates and in the forcing down of express rates. What does this bill do to that law? It reduces the tax on express companies to the extent of $17,000,000 per year and retains it upon the parcel post. The effect of this upon the parcel post is obvious. It is probably the beginning of the end of that institution.

It is true the tax on corporations of small capital, within certain limits, remains as it is under present law. But abundant evidence has been taken before congressional committees to show what will happen to them "if they do not behave." If they do not follow the lead of the big fellows, they will be swallowed up or crushed. There is no alternative.

Concentration of capital into the hands of a few is encouraged in this bill to an extent never before attempted by legislation during peace times. About a year ago a department of the Government, created by this Congress, according to a former Comptroller of the Currency, deliberately attempted to crush the country banks and other business institutions of our small cities and villages by calling in loans that could not be paid at that time. In January of this year a Government report was issued in this country setting forth that we never could hope to buy goods much cheaper than we do now until the country stores and other small business institutions were a thing of the past. Portions of this report were copied by big business institutions and scattered broadcast justifying the centralization of capital for carrying on the business of the world, and it seems to me that this bill opens the way for the completion of that program.

We already have chains of dry-goods stores, department stores, grocery stores, drug stores, creameries, banks, bakeries, cheese factories, hotels, and newspapers scattered all over the country, with headquarters in New York and Chicago, and these are making themselves painfully felt upon the business institutions of our small cities and villages. This bill will hasten the day when those who conduct our local businesses will become mere hired men of great business firms in New York or Chicago.

The corporations of this country made $38,000,000,000 during the short time we were at war. That is over 15 per cent of the total wealth of this Nation. At that rate they will own the whole country in less than 10 years without any encouragement under the law. But that is too long for them to wait. They want us to help it along by repealing the excess-profits tax. The reason they give for wanting this tax repealed is that it is so heavy they can not absorb it, and they have to pass it on to the consumer, and it is too much of a burden for the consumer to bear. Their only anxiety is for the consumer. But in the next breath they say it takes so much money out of their business that they are unable to develop new lines of industry. Now, one or the other of these claims is not true. If they are able to pass it on to the consumer, then the excess-profits tax is not taking any money out of their business. But the probabilities are that they are not able to pass much of it along. They are charging all the traffic will bear, and they will do it whether this tax is repealed or whether it is not, and I will never vote to repeal the excess-profits tax until the price these corporations charge for their services is fixed by law at a reasonable income upon capital invested. England is doing this, and why can't we be as patriotic to our own citizens as England is to hers?

The argument is advanced that the excess-profits tax is driving capital into tax-free securities, and the question is asked, "What can we do about it?" That is the same thing as saying, "Big business has got us by the throat, and we can't help ourselves." This is saying that big business is bigger than the Government. One of the packers made this claim during the war, and we are admitting it is true. But I am not yet ready to pull down the old Stars and Stripes and raise in its stead the flag of big business. That is not what the people of this country did in 1776. It isn't what they did in 1812. It isn't what they have done in any crisis we have ever had, and it isn't what they are going to do now.

HON. AMOS H. RADCLIFFE,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, August 18, 1921.

Mr. RADCLIFFE. Mr. Speaker, I see in the pending revenue bill a decided move toward a lowering of the high cost of living. The storekeepers of the country have long been complaining of the high cost of freight and express transportation, while the transportation companies have declared that under existing conditions it is impossible for them to reduce their rates. The repeal of the 3 per cent tax on freight charges and of the existing tax on express charges of 1 cent on each 20 cents or fraction thereof literally constitutes a reduction in transportation costs which will amount to slightly more than 3 per cent in the case of freight and more than 6 per cent in the case of express transportation. In the face of existing competition in the business world I have no doubt but that before long these reductions will be reflected in selling prices.

There has been some criticism of the repeal of the tax on Pullman and passenger transportation; but here, too, a saving will be effected that will result in a saving on the overhead charges on retail sales.

Next year the action of the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee in bringing about the repeal of the excess-profits tax should be further reflected in the price of the ordinary necessities of life. It is common knowledge that business concerns have carried into the prices of their goods a liberal allowance for the payment of taxes, particularly the excess-profits levy. It was not within their means to know in advance just what they would have to pay Uncle Sam under that section of the law, and therefore in order to keep their business going properly were compelled to guess high as to their probable assessments.

I am not in favor of switching taxes from big business to individuals, but the excess-profits tax was and is being carried through every manipulation in the sale of merchandise, this being in itself a shifting of the tax burden by private corporations, and I would rather see a direct tax on the people that would be paid but once than to have this tax on corporations continued and permit them to make a profit on it.

Further, while the committee was making changes in the income-tax provision, I would have liked to see it go a little further in the matter of cutting by increasing the exemption on unmarried men to $1,500 and on heads of families to $3,000, without the proposed limitation carried with the proposal to increase the latter to $2,500 that the income of the beneficiary of the increase shall not exceed $5,000.

The fixing of a limitation such as is to be done in this case will result in discrimination. Take the man whose income is $5,100 and who honestly wants to pay Uncle Sam all that is due under these taxes. Just because of the extra $100 he will have only the $2,000 exemption.

I am glad that the committee agreed to increase the exemption allowed because of dependent children from $200 to $400.

Taking it all in all, the revenue bill is a pretty good proposition and should result in a general improvement in conditions after it is given an opportunity to prove its worth. The retail establishments of the country will be relieved of considerable bookkeeping and a great deal of annoyance growing out of the luxury-tax impositions. The removal of the ice cream and soda taxes is very desirable. The public paid the tax in a great many cases to unscrupulous dealers who failed to transmit it to the Treasury Department, and it is a notorious fact that the Government failed to receive a large part of the taxes imposed by law on the sale of such commodities as these and of the so-called luxuries.

The flat tax will bring in a substantial amount of revenue, and the substitution for the tax on the sale of the article involved will reduce bookkeeping and in that way effect a saving to the Treasury and the taxpayer. In this way also there is effected a material simplification of tax requirements.

It is not my desire or intention to enter into a general discussion of the bill, but merely to express my views from the standpoint of its being a material aid to the reduction of the cost of living. When that is brought about I will be satisfied, because in voting for this bill I know I am assisting in helping along the welfare of my district and my constituents.

HON. HARRY B. HAWES,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Monday, August 22, 1921.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Speaker, President Harding on July 22 made this statement:

> With this end in view you are asked to extend the authority of the War Finance Corporation so that it may purchase these railway funding securities accepted by the Director General of Railroads. No added expense, no added investment is required on the part of the Government; there is no added liability, no added tax burden. It is merely the grant of authority necessary to enable a most useful and efficient Government agency to use its available funds to purchase securities, for which Congress already has authorized the issue, and turn them into the channels of finance ready to float them.

This is clear and understandable. It is advice given for the benefit of the Nation in a period of stress and uncertainty, when the whole Nation struggles in its efforts to return to that prosperous normal condition which obtained before the war.

This is not a partisan question. Each Member will follow the dictates of his understanding without the influence of party caucus.

It is a legacy of the war, begun under the administration of President Wilson, whose promises are pledged of fulfillment by President Harding.

The bill provides the machinery by which each claim will have careful review by a proper Government agency, and when objection is made to a finding an appeal is provided to the Court of Claims.

Mr. Speaker, it may be said that this measure was prepared exclusively by Government agents, and that the committee in its finding was influenced by four considerations:

First. The public necessity for increased, improved, and less expensive transportation;

Second. The carrying to a conclusion of a moral and legal obligation entered into by our Government through the necessities of war;
